KOENIG SAID HE WOULD 'GET EVEN' WITH WORTMAN OVER LOSING RACE WIRE

HE COMPLAINED GANG FORCED HIM OUT, 'WELSHED' ON PAY PROMISE

Ex-Politician Threatened Action Night He Disappeared — Tangled Earlier With Elmer Dowling.

By JAMES A. KEARNS JR.
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.
(Copyright, 1955, Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

J. Fred Koenig, murdered racing news service operator whose lucrative business was halted recently by Frank (Buster) Wortman's gang, told friends Monday he was going that night to the Red Rooster, an East Side roadhouse, to "get even," the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday.

Koenig disappeared while he was at the Red Rooster, operated by Gordon Foster, a close associate of Wortman. His body, with bullet wounds in it, was found Wednesday afternoon stuffed in the trunk of his Cadillac on an East St. Louis street.

He had told associates that the hoodlums who forced him out of business had promised to give him $150 to $200 a week, but had "welshed" on their word. Koenig, finding himself in a bad financial situation, had become increasingly bitter in recent weeks.

Complained at Bar.

About two months ago, the Post-Dispatch was informed, he went to the Paddock Bar, East Side establishment operated by Wortman, and there loudly expressed his complaints.

One individual he singled out was Elmer (Dutch) Dowling, Wortman's lieutenant who was present at the time.

Just as the situation reached an explosive point, a police officer summoned hastily by Mrs. Koenig arrived and managed to get her husband outside in safety, the Post-Dispatch was told.

Koenig's associates said his threat to "get even" apparently meant he intended to beat up someone at the Red Rooster, which is on U.S. Highway 40 near Fairmount race track. He was described as a man who handled himself well in a fight, but never carried a pistol. He had been drinking heavily Monday night.

About a year ago, the Post-Dispatch was informed, Birney T. (Chick) Havey Jr., an associate of Koenig in the racing news operation, remarked to friends that Wortman was going to run him (Havey) out of East St. Louis.

At that time, Havey was manager of Wortman's Terrace Lounge. Early this year he was fired from the job.

How Race Service Was Stopped.

Hitherto undisclosed details of Koenig's racing news service venture and how it was stopped were related by his friends.

Koenig obtained an apartment for himself and his wife at 601 North Fortieth street, East St. Louis, early in 1954. Shortly thereafter, he began receiving requests from bookmakers in many parts of the country, asking him to "lay off" part of their bets with local gamblers, the Post-Dispatch was told.

"Laying off" of bets means

Russian Treatment of Visitors Makes Friends for Kremlin And Shows Up McCarran Act

Nehru and Young U.S. Weight-Lifter Have Been Given Red Carpet Treatment.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1955.)

MOSCOW, June 25—One of the smartest moves made by the Kremlin in recent months has been the use of visiting delegations, official and unofficial, as instruments on international policy. It is an efficient demonstration of how to make friends and influence people.

If further proof of the self-defeating enforcement of the Walter-McCarran immigration law is needed, the success of the Russian get-togethers supplies it. The two most popular recent visitors have been Prime Minister Nehru of India and Paul Anderson, 23-year-old Georgia farm boy, who broke two world's records for weight-lifting while a crowd of 10,000 cheering Moscovites watched eagerly in a cold drizzle. Anderson is 335 pounds of muscle, and by his achievements and personality he has added greatly to cordial relations between Russians and Americans as individuals.

He Serves U.S. Well.

There were five other members of the American weight-lifting team, including a clean-cut Japanese middleweight from California, but Anderson was the center of attraction. He is accustomed to honors and the adulation did not go to his head. By his modest conduct, he has served his country well in this sports-loving country.

Nehru and his attractive daughter, Indira Gandhi, were officially and lavishly entertained wherever they went on a 12,000-mile trip in Asiatic and European Russia. He is accustomed to applauding by tens of thousands, but the receptions he has had here could only have been given by a totalitarian state.

Nehru has responded to them with grace and dignity as befits the Prime Minister of a nation with a population of 400,000,000 persons. His speeches, comments and movements were important daily stories in the press and on the radio, and photographs of him with the highest Soviet officials or of his inspection of industrial plants and state farms were given front page display.

On many international questions, his views parallel the official Kremlin line and while he has been cautiously vague and general, the highest Soviet officials, such as Prime Minister Bulganin and Communist Party Leader Khrushchev, have ostentatiously courted his favor. Nehru received the royalty treatment. Throughout his trip he was accompanied by Russian and Indian correspondents. Expenses of the Indians were paid by Tass, the government-operated news agency, and their copy, according to other correspondents, was not censored.

Swedes at Swank Hotel.

Entertainment and accommodations in Russia vary according to Soviet rating of prestige. The Swedish parliamentary delegation which left here several days ago was given the Red carpet treatment, a Negro correspondent for the Baltimore Afro-American, on his way home from the Bandung conference, was given a two-month visa, but American correspondents who made their informal applications to Khrushchev at the Belgrade

LETTER TO 'HONEST CONGRESSMAN' GOES TO KARSTEN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 25—The Post Office Department today singled out Representative Frank Karsten, St. Louis Democrat, for high honors.

It delivered to his office a letter addressed:

"To any honest Congressman or Senator, House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C., or Senate office building."

The missive was registered and bore 55 cents postage.

Karsten declined to disclose the name of the sender but said it was from a St. Louisan who sought the help of a Congressman or Senator—any honest one—in a matter involving the Veterans Administration.

Karsten said he did not know whether the Post Office Department intended the delivery of the letter as a compliment to him or whether postal officials were too busy to evaluate the honesty of other Congressmen and Senators.

SWIM SUIT MADE OF CORN, INTEREST IN MODEL CROPS UP

WASHINGTON, June 25 (UP)—Miss Betty Richter of the Agricultural Research Service is attracting a lot of attention lately in a strapless black bathing suit—partly because it is made of corn.

At recent "style shows" put on by the research service Miss Richter has worn over the suit an apron made of hog lard. Audiences are invariably more interested in the corn.

The suit is made of corn protein, a waste product of corn starch production, blended with cotton and wool. It is mildew resistant, moth-proof and definitely will not dissolve in water. Miss Richter reports the suit feels more like cashmere, is comfortable to wear and is not "sticky," like some wool suits.

The corny suit is already going into commercial production.

Members of President Eisenhower's Agricultural Advisory Commission saw Miss Richter model the suit this week.

"Now, that's really the way to sell research," one commented enthusiastically.

PERSISTENT GAIN HERE IN BUSINESS, INDUSTRY SHOWS RISING ECONOMY

Output of Durable Goods, Construction Activity on Upgrade —Joblessness Has Declined Steadily.

By HARRY WILENSKY
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

Business and industry in the St. Louis area are registering gains so strong, persistent and widespread as to indicate a definitely rising economy here, a Post-Dispatch survey showed yesterday.

Production is on the upgrade, particularly in the durable goods industries. Construction activity continues at a high level, with no sign of a letup in the housing boom. There is an upsurge of shipping by railroad and truck. Department store sales are running above last year's level, and new retail stores are mushrooming in the suburbs.

The downward trend in the St. Louis labor market which predominated in 1954 has been completely reversed by a steady decline in joblessness and a big improvement in the general employment situation.

Slack Periods Shortened.

In some lines business is so good that slack periods are being curtailed. Sales by St. Louis garment manufacturers have maintained such a high level that the between-seasons lull, which sometimes lasts as long as six weeks, has been alleviated this year, and work on fall lines is in full swing.

Shoe manufacturers say that 1935 probably will be their best year in the last seven or eight. Production of women's and children's shoes, which declined in 1954, is showing a substantial increase. The annual shoe show in April resulted in the biggest volume of sales on record. Military orders for men's shoes have fallen off in the last four years, but styling and aggressive advertising are beginning to fill this gap.

Unemployment has gone down from month to month. The number out of work last Jan. 15 was 60,200; March 15, 50,400; May 15, 43,800. Although there was a spring rash of labor disputes leading to work stoppages, unemployment has dropped to 5.3 per cent of the labor force of 829,600 in St. Louis, St. Louis county, St. Charles county and the Illinois counties of Madison and St. Clair.

In 1954 the trend was the other way: the number of jobless grew from 46,200 on Jan. 15 to 50,400 on March 15 and 55,700 on May 15.

East St. Louis Trends.

The East Side, where 11% of the labor force was out of work, has experienced a big improvement this year. There were 1300 fewer unemployed in the East St. Louis area in May than a year ago.

Striking evidence of the increasing tempo of business activity is the sustained demand for credit. Bank loans, keeping pace with consumer buying, manufacturing and construction, have continued to rise through April, May and mid-June. This is definitely contraseasonal; loans normally decline at this time of the year.

There was a time when summer meant a slump in consumption of electricity, but air-conditioners and other appliances have changed that. A year ago, 30,000 room air-conditioners were being used in the St. Louis area. Then came the record-breaking heat, and 30,000 more were installed, many of these in a period of six weeks. Another 14,000 units were sold this spring, not counting thousands of electric fans.

To get ready for the 1955 air-conditioning load, Union Electric Co. hired 150 extra men to install 6000 new transformers and 75 miles of heavier wire at a cost of $4,500,000.

New Record for Usage.

Although temperatures this June have been much lower than a year ago, a new record for peak usage of electricity in the St. Louis area already has been chalked up. It was set last Thursday, when the power load reached 1,245,000 kilowatts.

With St. Louis County Water Co. authorized to exact a $40-per-ton surcharge, starting in 1957, on air-conditioning equipment which does not conserve water, sales of water towers already have jumped 50 per cent over 1954. One firm reports

TANK ON PRACTICE ROMP ACHIEVES A BREAKTHROUGH

HOLLIS, Okla., June 25 (UP)—There's a hole in the side of the Hollis National Guard Armory big enough for a tank to go through. In fact, one did.

Sgt. June Watson took an M-41 tank out for a practice spin and brought it back to the armory to park it. He made a sharp turn; the drivers hatch smacked him in the face.

Before the stunned sergeant could regain his senses, the 500-horsepower steel tank plowed through the brick armory wall. Damage to the armory was estimated at $1000. The tank suffered a $20 dent.

3 NEW PROJECTS HERE TO PROVIDE 1474 LOW-RENT HOUSING UNITS

Two to Be Built on North Side, One in South St. Louis—Return to Row Dwellings Planned.

Three new public housing projects to provide a total of 1474 low-rent apartments at a cost of $21,915,000 have been authorized for St. Louis, it was announced yesterday by Arthur A. Blumeyer, chairman of the St. Louis Housing Authority.

Two of the projects will redevelop rundown areas in north St. Louis, and the third will be located on the South Side. They will provide housing for low-income families displaced by expressways, new schools, urban redevelopment projects and other public works.

One of the projects, designated as M-9, will cover a tract of 17 acres bounded by North Market street and Warne, Lincoln and Vandeventer avenues. It will consist of 18 two-story buildings and two nine-story buildings. Construction of 398 apartments in this group will cost about $5,965,000.

M-10 Largest Project.

The largest project M-10, will cover about 12 square blocks and 43 acres bounded by Kennerly, Lambdin, Ashland and Newstead avenues. There will be 834 apartments in 56 buildings of two and three stories each and in two nine-story structures. The cost is estimated at $12,505,000.

The third project, M-12, will cover an irregular site of 7 acres bounded by Cardinal, Montrose and Ewing avenues, Rutger street and an alley north of Park avenue. It will provide 242 apartments in six two-story and three nine-story buildings. The cost will be about $3,443,000.

In its new projects the housing authority is trying to get away from tall buildings and return to the more homelike row housing where elevators can be dispensed with and parents can keep an eye on children playing outdoors. But to accommodate 1400 families in buildings of no more than three stories would require a large amount of land, possibly 100 acres, and funds for acquisition of sites are limited.

Meeting on Contracts.

Contracts authorizing federal aid for the new projects have been received by the housing authority, which will hold a special meeting tomorrow to ratify them.

John J. O'Toole, executive director of the housing authority, said the architectural firms of Murphy & Murphy, Leo A. Daly Co., Marcel Boulicault and Russell, Mullgardt, Schwartz, Van Hoefen will start work at once on preliminary sketches for the projects.

It is hoped that property acquisition and relocation of site occupants can be expedited so that contracts for construction can be let soon.

Federal housing authorities in Washington notified St. Louis last March that it might qualify for about 1400 additional units under the Housing Act of 1954. Since the fiscal year covered by this act ends June 30, the St. Louis Housing Authority had to move fast to get plans approved before the deadline.

To obtain a diversity of housing ideas and expedite preliminary studies, it employed the four architectural firms to work with the City Plan Commission in surveying sites and drafting construction plans. Sites selected for the three projects were among six recommended in a field study.

Row Housing Used First.

The city's first two public housing projects, Carr Square Village and Clinton Peabody Terrace, are row housing. Since their completion in 1943, the housing authority has concentrated on multi-story buildings in the design of Cochran Garden Apartments, Wendell O. Pruitt Homes, William L. Igoe Apartments, the as yet unnamed M-6 project and Joseph M. Darst Apartments.

Plans for two other projects, M-8 and M-11, are still in the formative stage, and construction will depend on what Congress does in legislation on future public housing.

The local housing authority sells bonds to private purchasers to finance construction of its projects. Rents are fixed low enough to enable families of limited income to move in, and federal contributions make up the difference between rental income and maintenance costs.

Construction of the three new projects will give St. Louis a total of 9200 dwellings for low-income families through investment of $111,000,000 in public housing facilities.

Radar Awaits Holiday Speeders.

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP)—A word of advice from the American Automobile Association to Fourth of July motorists: Every state except Utah is now using radar to catch speeders and there will be nearly 1000 sets operating over the holiday weekend.

REVALUATION BY PARCEL IN COUNTY VOTED

$855,000 Contract With Two Appraisal Firms Authorized — New Plea to State.

A parcel-by-parcel revaluation of St. Louis county real estate, under an $855,000 joint contract with two appraisal firms, was authorized by the County Council yesterday without dissent.

A new appeal to the State Tax Commission for reconsideration of its decision to order assessments increased next month to 30 per cent of market value also was decided on.

But Commission Chairman James M. Robertson, told of the council development in the county, said at Jefferson City there would be no change in the commission's position.

"I have no comment on what provisions they may make to meet the requirements of the State Tax Commission," Robertson said. "We're concerned with the ratio of assessments as among various counties. Other counties are complying and St. Louis county must comply."

Action by the Council was in the form of approval of a report and recommendations by a special committee composed of James A. Singer, Fourth District, Council chairman, and James H. J. McNary, Second

MOLOTOV URGES DIRECT U.S. TALKS WITH RED CHINA

Says East-West Contacts at San Francisco Meeting Have Had 'Positive Results.'

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 25—Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov said at a press conference today that the East-West talks and informal contacts here this week had "achieved positive results" in terms of better understanding between the two major power blocs.

He said it would be "difficult to say which was the most important achievement because so many fields were covered."

The Soviet Foreign Minister told the assembled newsmen that direct talks between the United States and Red China would be "useful in consolidating the peace."

Formosa Problem.

Asked whether Russia would abide by any possible decision on the part of the United Nations with respect to disposition of the Chinese Nationalist-held island of Formosa, Molotov replied:

"The United Nations well knows the place it occupies in regard to the settlement of any problem of international importance. As for the problem of Taiwan (Formosa) and the other coastal islands, I believe the proposal which has been advanced by Chou En-lai, the prime minister of China, about direct talks between China and the United States is of great importance. Such talks would be useful in the inerests of consolidating peace, which all nations desire."

Later he added: "As I see it, the situation in the area of Taiwan (you call it Formosa, I prefer Taiwan) is fraught with danger of a military character. At the present time, there is no deterioration in the situation, but the danger has not disappeared."

Molotov declined to say whether the Formosa question would be raised as a subject for discussion at Geneva.

Decisions at Geneva.

As to a comment on the Western position that no agreements in substance are to be sought at Geneva, Molotov said various views and expectations have been expressed and the heads

DULLES INFORMS MOLOTOV REPLY FALLS SHORT OF EXPECTATIONS

Secretary Is Hurriedly Called to Meeting — Soviet Says Error on Either Side Was Possible Due to Weather.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 25 (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov today expressed regret for the shooting down of an American naval plane in the Bering Straits last Wednesday and said Russia was willing to pay one-half the damages.

He disclosed the Soviet position in a memorandum which he handed to Secretary of State John Foster Dulles at a hurriedly-arranged meeting this afternoon.

Dulles immediately informed President Eisenhower by telephone and said he would discuss the matter further with the President when the are both in Washington on Monday. Dulles told Molotov that the offer to pay 50 per cent of the damages fell short of what the United States had requested.

Asked for Explanation.

On instruction from Mr. Eisenhower, Dulles had conferred privately with Molotov Friday and had asked for an explanation of the attack. Molotov had replied then that he knew nothing of the incident but would inquire about it from his government in Moscow.

Dulles had gone to Rutherford, Calif., for a swim and for lunch with friends and had just begun his lunch when the Soviet delegation telephoned and said Molotov wanted urgently to see him to present a note on the plane incident.

The secretary returned to San Francisco in a state highway patrol car. He covered the 66 miles in 65 minutes. Molotov arrived at his hotel 10 minutes after the Secretary of State returned.

Present at the talks in Dulles's suite at the Mark Hopkins hotel, in addition to the two ministers, were Charles E. Bohlen, United States Ambassador to Moscow; Georgi N. Zarubin, Soviet Ambassador to Washington, and an interpreter.

State Department Statement.

At the end of the meeting, the State Department issued the following statement:

"The Soviet Foreign Minister, Mr. Molotov, gave Secretary of State Dulles a memorandum with reference to the incident of the shooting down by Soviet aircraft of the United States Neptune-type naval plane in the vicinity of St. Lawrence Island, Alaska.

"The Soviet government asserts that the United States plane was within Soviet air space but under atmospheric conditions which made possible an error on one side or another in regard to the exact location of the plane at the moment of the incident. In view of these circumstances the Soviet government expresses its regret in regard to the incident and offers to pay 50 per cent of the cost of the damages inflicted.

"Secretary Dulles stated that while he accepted with satisfaction the Soviet government's expressions of regret, the offer as a whole fell short of what he had requested of the Soviet government in the light of information he had received.

"Secretary Dulles at once advised the President with reference to the Soviet government's proposal and will discuss the matter further with him when they are both in Washington on Monday."

Details From Soviet Sources.

Soviet sources said that while Molotov had expressed regret for the incident, he had criticized American military authorities in the area for not taking the necessary measures to prevent what he called violation of Soviet waters.

The Soviet sources further states that Molotov told Dulles that Russian authorities had cautioned their military commanders in the area to take care to prevent clashes along the territorial boundaries.

ADMISSION EASES TENSION IN CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP)—Officials and members of Congress tonight viewed with restraint, but some satisfaction, the Russians' admission that they may have been partly at fault in the shooting down of an American reconnaissance plane off Alaska. It was the first time the Russians have expressed regret and offered to pay damages in the shooting down of an American plane.

Senators Purtell (Dem.), Connecticut, and Holland (Dem.), Florida, said they were pleased

Pastor's Ruse Brings Bootlegger Around---To a New Phone Number

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

VANCOUVER, British Columbia, June 25—The Rev. and Mrs. Stanley E. Higgs sleep soundly now, undisturbed by calls for bootleg whisky.

All over town, meanwhile, less serene souls are trying to remember the new telephone number of their bootlegger, who was driven from his old, familiar number by the congregation of St. Mary's Angelican Church.

It all began about six months ago when the Rev. Mr. Higgs received a new telephone number. It was only one zero different from that of one of the oldest bootlegging establishments in town.

Customers seeking another bottle after 2 a.m. closing of the government-supervised liquor stores, and on Sundays, either had bad memories, poor eyesight or awkward dialing fingers. The Rev. Mr. Higgs's telephone began ringing.

There was seldom a night when the Rev. and Mrs. Higgs could get uninterrupted slumber.

"Send a bottle," said the voices.

Finally, the Rev. Mr. Higgs phoned the bootlegger and asked him to change his number.

"You change yours," was the reply. The bootlegger contended a new number would cost him business.

"We've got our number printed on the official church notepaper," said the pastor.

The bootlegger offered to pay for new letterheads for the church. The Rev. Mr. Higgs refused.

Last month the Rev. Mr. Higgs put the problem before his congregation.

"Here is the bootlegger's number," he said. "Everyone please telephone this number at least twice a day."

The bootlegger's phone rang so often it got so a thirsty person could get no service at all.

Finally the bootlegger pulled down his colors and took the simplest number he could get. The Rev. and Mrs. Higgs retired for a good night's sleep.

Two at Washington U. Receive $100,000 Each for Atomic Work

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 25 — Four scientists, including Joseph W. Kennedy and Arthur C. Wahl of Washington University, St. Louis, have received $100,000 each from the Atomic Energy Commission for rights to discoveries which were instrumental in developing the atomic bomb, it was announced today.

The payment is the largest ever made by the commission under the patent compensation provision of the Atomic Energy Act of 1946, AEC Chairman Lewis L. Strauss said. It is to reimburse the researchers for all rights, title and interest in their processes which have been assigned to the AEC.

Kennedy is chairman of the chemistry department at the university and Wahl is professor of chemistry. The other two recipients are Glenn T. Seaborg, professor of chemistry at the University of California at Berkeley, and Emilie G. Segre, professor of physics at the same institution.

In late 1940 and early 1941, when all four men were associated with the University of California, they developed a method of separating plutonium from other fuel material in a nuclear reactor. The process was "valuable in reaching construction of the atomic bomb," Strauss said.

DISARMAMENT VIEWED AS TOP ISSUE FOR BIG 4 IN GENEVA TALKS

Dulles and Molotov, in Addresses at San Francisco, Have Outlined Likely Agenda for Their Chiefs.

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 25—Disarmament almost surely will be the major question to come before the Big Four heads of government when they meet at Geneva beginning July 18, it was indicated today.

Opening rounds of the Geneva conference were fired by Russia, the United States, Britain and France at the tenth anniversary session of the United Nations, which closes tomorrow after a week of speeches and ceremonials.

The agenda for the Geneva gathering can be inferred from speeches made by the Big Four foreign ministers, who met privately during the week to work out procedural arrangements for the "summit" meeting.

Plane Incident.

The Geneva talks are not likely to be affected by the Soviet air attack Wednesday on a United States patrol plane in the Bering strait area. Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov said he was ignorant of the whole affair and it is believed he was sincere in this statement.

Molotov has been co-operative in his private sessions with the Western Big Three foreign ministers.

Disarmament is put at the top of the list of subjects for discussion because, it is believed, the "greatest coincidence of desire" on the part of East and West lies in this area.

Stassen at Work.

Harold E. Stassen, appointed by President Eisenhower to head up United States disarmament efforts, is exploring the field of arms limitation and is developing the position of the United States. This has not been too clear in the past.

Procedures are being worked up so that disarmament negotiations can proceed. It is likely that at Geneva there will be discussion of whether there should be a new conference on disarmament similar to the world conclave suggested by Molotov, or whether the goal should be sought through the United Nations. The Russians presented their latest disarmament plan to a U.N. subcommittee in London last month and Molotov made much of it in his speech to the U.N. last Wednesday.

As the West views Molotov's plan there would be a chance that his conference would be dominated by countries whose leaders are not aware of all the implications of the manufacture and delivery of nuclear weapons. In seeking for peace, these nations might exert enough pressure to push through a disarmament scheme that did not embody what the West would regard as essential safeguards.

Drain on Economy.

It is perfectly well understood in the West that it is impossible to achieve a perfect system that would be proof against violation by any nation. The hope is to reduce the chance of violation as much as possible by setting up the most effective system of controls and inspection that can be devised.

The Soviet Union is thought to want more than anything else the establishment of some system under which it can cut down its armament program and reduce the severe strain on its economy.

According to the Western theory, the Russians are behind in the armaments race and must catch up with the West. The United States finds burdensome an annual expenditure for armaments of 40 billion dollars. If we put proportionately as much effort into armaments as the Russians our preparedness budget would run to some 150 billion dollars a year.

This huge drain on the Soviet economy comes at a time of accumulating economic ills. Soviet agriculture is in disorder, the burden of having to help China industrialize is heavy, the government may be shaky and there is general pressure by the Russian people for more butter, if not fewer guns.

Preview of Geneva.

Speeches by Molotov and Dulles before the U.N. have been likened to pleadings in a lawsuit, undertaken before the start of the trial. They informed the world what would be discussed at Geneva, defining and clarifying the issues. It is regarded as having been useful to get these speeches out of the way; the Geneva conference can start work without further preliminaries.

As indicated by Dulles's address the Geneva issues will be as follows: A limitation on armaments; the problem of German unification; the liberation of the Russian eastern European satellites; the ambitions of Red China in the Formosa area, and the threat of international communism.

Molotov's list was: Termination of war propaganda everywhere; Big Four agreement to dismantle military bases in foreign territories; aid to undeveloped countries and development of peaceful uses of atomic power; Big Four agreement to withdraw forces from Germany, Far East settlements based on "principles of sovereignty;" encouragement of economic co-operation and international trade, and expansion of international cultural ties.

These are topics for discussion. The West has emphasized repeatedly that solutions are not expected; the hope is only for the discovery of procedures by which solutions may be reached over a period of time.

Dulles has been saying for the last few weeks that Far East problems would not be brought up by the West at Geneva. There was some surprise when he included in his list the subject of Red Chinese aggression in Asia.

The best information as to why he did so is that he expected the Russians would raise the question of the disposition of Formosa, now held by the Chinese Nationalists and threatened by the mainland Chinese. Dulles desired to recognize the existence of a China problem and to warn the Chinese Communist regime it must indicate it is not war-minded.

German Problems.

As to the "neutralization" of Germany, which the Russians are proposing, this policy is opposed by the United States.

The reasoning is that a Germany not tied in with the West would grow so strong as to have an enormously powerful bargaining position as a balance between East and West. Germany would arm and destroy the Franco-German unity which has been a long-range American goal.

A neutralized Germany would be the start of a return to conditions that bred two world wars. Neutralism would undo the integration of French and German forces in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

In the Western view of a unified Germany would occupy much the same place as does the present Federal Republic of Germany. The proposed NATO forces, however, probably would not move into the east part of a unified nation. It would not be realistic to suppose East Germany can become an advanced base for the West. It might be demilitarized.

There may be a discussion in terms of an East-West balance of forces in a divided Germany.

Representatives of the Western Big Three took the opportunity presented by the U. N. session, which was attended by delegates from the 60 member nations, to inform smaller nations of what the West is up to in inviting Russia to a Big Four conference.

Suspicions that the Big Four might sit down to divide the world have been dispelled. Further representations along this line will be made at a NATO ministerial council meeting before Geneva.

All in all, from the viewpoint of the West, San Francisco was a success in that it was a useful exercise preliminary to Geneva.

ADLAI E. STEVENSON, 1952 Democratic presidential candidate, congratulating his son, ADLAI E. STEVENSON JR., and his daughter-in-law, the former NANCY LEWIS ANDERSON, after their wedding in Louisville, Ky., yesterday.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 25 (AP)—Miss Nancy Lewis Anderson and Adlai Ewing Stevenson Jr. were married today.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Peter H. Pleune at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warwick McNair Anderson.

Stevenson, 24 years old, is a son of Adlai Ewing Stevenson of Libertyville, Ill., the 1952 Democratic nominee for President, and Mrs. Ellen Borden Stevenson of Chicago.

The 21-year-old bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. George Waldo Emerson, matron of honor, and Mrs. Charles Stedman Garland Jr. of New York City, bridesmaid.

Lt. Timothy R. Ives of Bloomington, Ill., the bridegroom's cousin, was the best man. Ushers were Army Pfc. Borden Stevenson and John Fell Stevenson, the bridegroom's brothers.

Following a Canadian trip, the couple will live in Cambridge, Mass., where he is a student at Harvard Law School.

Stevenson was graduated from Harvard University in 1952, and served two years in the Marine Corps.

The bride was graduated this year from Smith College, a member of the class whose commencement address was delivered by her then future father-in-law. He confided later he asked her advice on what to say. He was advised to avoid all references to "the challenge of life" and to "the great responsibility" that faced the graduates. "No exalted nonsense!" was her final warning.

ADM. RICKOVER AGAINST MAKING ATOM PEACE SHIP

Developer of Nuclear-Powered Submarine Says It Would Delay Navy's Program.

WASHINGTON, June 25 (UP)—Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, the Navy's top atomic expert, warned in testimony made public today that building President Eisenhower's proposed around-the-world atomic peace ship would delay the Navy's own nuclear ship program.

At the same time, members of the Atomic Energy Commission insisted "we are not going to build this ship at the expense of submarines or the airplane or any of the military programs."

The various views were given at a recent hearing before a subcommittee of the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee. The heavily censored testimony was made public today.

Rickover, developer of the atomic submarine Nautilus and enthusiast for military use of nuclear energy, pleaded against being required to comment on the President's proposal to build an atomic peace ship and send it on a world goodwill tour.

Pressed for Views.

But, when pressed by Representative Carl Durham (Dem.), North Carolina, he said construction of the ship would inevitably delay the Navy program since it would involve using a submarine reactor rather than going to work immediately on a new reactor which could be used in battleships and merchant vessels.

AEC Chairman Lewis L. Strauss conceded that if time were taken to develop a "completely new design" there would be a greater chance of producing a more advanced ship.

But he said other countries already are rumored to be moving into the nuclear ship field and that it would be an error for the United States to take second or third place, both from a "military standpoint as well as a propaganda standpoint."

AEC Commissioner Williard Libby argued, in addition, that the commission had orders from the President not to let the goodwill ship interfere with the Navy program or development of an atom-powered war plane.

Three Types of Reactors.

Rickover insisted, however, that because the commission is trying to get contractors to build three different types of submarine and ship reactors at the same time, delay in the Navy program can not be avoided.

Representative Chet Holifield (Rep.), California, subcommittee chairman, has called the President's proposed ship a floating "showboat." He and others have argued that the plan would do little to advance atomic knowledge since the ship would use a submarine reactor which already has been developed.

The full atomic committee recently refused to authorize money for the peace ship when it approved a $267,000,000 authorization bill for atomic construction.

PREDICTS ARMY RESERVE BILL WILL PASS HOUSE

Vinson Tells of Compromise Version—Threat of Trouble Over Segregation.

WASHINGTON, June 25 (UP)—Representative Carl Vinson (Dem.), Georgia, predicted today that the House would pass a compromise version of President Eisenhower's compulsory military reserve bill despite threats of a new dispute over racial segregation in the National Guard.

Vinson, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee which will vote on the measure Tuesday, said the committee would approve it.

The measure would compel every man who goes into military service to spend a combined total of at least five years on active duty and in the ready reserve. That would mean a draftee would spend two years on active duty and three in the ready reserve.

It would inaugurate a new six-month training plan for pre-draft-age youths, followed by seven and one-half years in the ready reserve.

The compromise includes the major features of President Eisenhower's original request to build a 2,900,000-man ready reserve. He has repeatedly urged action as "vital" to bolster the nation's defense.

The Administration's previous bill was shelved by the House after the chamber adopted amendments by Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (Dem.), New York, a Negro Congressman, aimed at barring segregation in the National Guard. Because of the amendments, Southern votes needed to pass the bill were lost.

A new compromise, intended to bypass the segregation issue, has been worked out by a subcommittee with Vinson's help. Powell, despite President Eisenhower's personal plea to withhold the segregation amendments, said he is considering a new amendment to force the issue again.

Although the subcommittee has approved the new legislation by a vote of 11 to 1, it has agreed to hear the National Association for Advancement of Colored People testify on Monday.

Vinson declined to discuss the segregation problem in an interview except to say he did not think the bill would give Powell a chance to renew the fight. The measures make no reference to the National Guard.

"It will pass without the shadow of a doubt," Vinson asserted.

But he concedes he faces opposition. Representative Dewey Short (Rep.), Missouri, for instance, isn't showing his hand but he is expected to continue his opposition on grounds the bill would lead toward universal military training.

Subcommittee chairman Overton Brooks (Dem.), Louisiana, also predicted committee and House approval. "We're going to give a battle," he said. As for the segregation issue, "we'll handle that when it comes up."

Eisenhower Turns to Serious Fishing on Remote Maine Island

Winds Up Handshaking Tour—Promises to Return to New Hampshire as Soon as He Leaves White House.

PARMACHENEE LAKE, Me., June 25 (UP)—President Eisenhower, after greeting crowds, politicians and well-wishers on his New England tour, settled down today for some serious fishing on a remote island in this wilderness section of northwest Maine.

The President arrived about 2 o'clock and boarded a small outboard motor boat for a five-minute run from the mainland to an island where the Brown Co. of Berlin, N.H., maintains a luxurious fishing camp.

The President was accompanied to the island by his chief assistant, Sherman Adams, Senator Frederick Payne (Rep.), Maine, and Laurence F. Whittemore of Pembroke, N.H., president of the lumber company.

Within 20 minutes after arriving here, Mr. Eisenhower was ready to fish. He stood on a rocky shoal 50 feet from the Little Boy falls and caught three small trout before reporters and photographers were chased away.

All three of the fish were thrown back. Mr. Eisenhower described one as "a Rhode Island fish," because it was so small. He declined to pose for a photograph with another because "it's just bait."

Mr. Eisenhower remained on the edge of the stream for about three hours without landing a fish that satisfied him. Everything he landed—and he landed more than several—he threw back. His luck ran generally to trout, but what he was after was landlocked salmon.

The President drove to Parmachenne lake from Lancaster, N.H. He stopped for lunch at the Dartmouth College land grant at Wentworth Location, N.H., where he had a meal of rainbow trout with the Dartmouth Outing Club, dining in one of the club's white mess jackets.

The President ended his three-day visit to New Hampshire with a promise to return as soon as he leaves the White House—but he did not say when that would be.

Mr. Eisenhower has been keeping people guessing for some time about his future political plans. On Thursday, in Concord, N.H., he made veiled hints that he might possibly run for a second term.

But he referred to a possible job change today in a bread-and-butter message to every citizen who turned out to see him on his tour of New Hampshire.

He said he had been "impressed by the obvious hospitality and a cordial welcome that has touched my heart." And he promised to return "as soon as I am in another kind of livelihood than I now enjoy."

The President made his final New Hampshire speech to an enthusiastic audience in Berlin. He thanked the state for the many gifts it had heaped upon him and jokingly observed that only one present had been forgotten.

"They should have provided a truck to carry them away," he said.

Among the gifts presented to the President either for himself or for his wife were two heifers, a fishing rod, hip-length fishing boots, two sport shirts, a peaked snow shoers cap, a chain saw, trout flies, a spice cabinet, a picture of a birch grove and a silver punch bowl, a copy of one made by Paul Revere.

On his way to fish near the Canadian border, Mr. Eisenhower paused in New Hampshire's north woods "Christmas tree country" to watch a demonstration of the latest lumbering techniques.

He sat in the shadow of the towering Nansen ski jump near Berlin and saw an exhibition of timber felling in which axes and cross-cut saws were pitted against power-driven saws.

The men who used the axes and cross-cut saws won the competition by felling their tree more accurately than the other teams.

The "trees" actually were logs that were stuck in the ground for the occasion.

Later, the President talked with several of the woodsmen, including Ernie Goddard, Berlin.

"He was talking about the labor-saving in the chain saw," Goddard said later. "He also asked me how big a tree the saw could cut. I told him a tree with a diameter twice the length of a blade. In other words, a 20-inch blade for a 40-inch tree.

"He told me he did use a cross-cut saw one time when he was a kid."

Mr. Eisenhower was made a life member of a local snowshoe club and was given one of the club's red-peaked caps with a black tassel. He tried on the hat while the crowd around him applauded and laughed.

LUCERO POSSIBLE SUCCESSOR TO PERON IN 1958

President's Praise of Man Who Rallied Army Support in Revolt Stirs Speculation.

By FRED L. STROZIER

BUENOS AIRES, June 25 (AP)—If President Peron steps down from office when he finishes his second six-year term he may have a natural successor to his liking—Maj. Gen. Franklin Lucero, the army minster.

It seems a little early to be thinking about the 1958 presidential election so soon after last week's bloody revolt that shook the Peron regime, but it is definitely a main topic of conversation among officials and diplomats who know Argentine politics well.

Peron, now approaching 60, is vigorous and athletic. He has his heavy office work well organized and obviously likes being President. His present term won't be over for three more years.

Comment on Stepping Down.

In a radio address Thursday, he said the only reason he did not step down after the revolt was because "I really fear the consequences my selfishness would bring down on the nation."

Under the constitution as rewritten by the Peronista party in 1949, Peron can be a candidate again, and there is no certainty he will not seek a third term. Heretofore, under Peron's nine-year rule as strongman, nobody has been permitted to emerge as his possible successor. Anyone seeking to engineer a personal build-up has been knocked down before he could get started.

In the present situation, circumstances have catapulted Lucero into the limelight, and he has conducted himself in a manner best suited to win Peron's approval. He rallied the army behind Peron's constitutionally elected government and directed the armed forces and all the nation's police in restoring order.

Embrace of Gatitude.

The first official picture released after the revolt showed Peron giving Lucero an emotional embrace of gratitude. The same night Peron made a radio address in which he heaped praise on Lucero in glowing terms rarely applied in Argentina to anybody but Peron himself.

Despite all the eulogy, Lucero assumed the modest, self-effacing role of the career soldier.

COMPTON BLASTS WELSH'S LACK OF CO-OPERATION ON FILLING JOBS

New Outbreak Likely to Enliven G.O.P. Session Seeking Ways to Settle Leaders' Patronage Dispute.

A new outbreak in the bitter feud between Missouri's top Republican leaders was expected to enliven today's special meeting of the G.O.P. State Committee, which is being held at Columbia in an attempt to settle federal patronage differences between the warring party leaders.

The latest flare-up came when State G.O.P. Chairman Perry Compton of Montgomery City charged in letters to Republican county chairmen that his intra-party opponent, National Committeeman A. D. (Bud) Welsh of Ladue had failed to co-operate with him in "speeding" appointments to federal jobs.

Answer to Welsh Letter.

Compton's blast against the national committeeman was in answer to Welsh's earlier letter to the county chairmen, in which Welsh accused Compton and Barak T. Mattingly, St. Louis party leader and a political adviser of the Eisenhower Administration, of attempting to "grab" control of federal patronage in Missouri.

"If Mr. Welsh were interested in the good of the Republican Party, he would join with me to help speed the appointments through as I have suggested," Compton declared.

"I have made about 1400 appointments. If Mr. Welsh had worked as hard toward helping the Republican party as he has worked against me, we would have far more appointments."

Patronage Issue at Stake.

Contral of the Republicans' federal patronage in Missouri will be at stake at today's meeting of the state committee. Pending action is a resolution calling for establishment of a seven-member patronage committee, which would have power to approve federal appointments whenever the top party leaders are unable to agree.

The resolution has the backing of the Compton-Mattingly forces. It is vigorously opposed by Welsh and Mrs. Estelle Tanner of Jefferson City, national committeewoman, who charge that it is designed to deprive them of their patronage powers.

All four of the factional leaders are expected to be on hand for the committee meeting, which is scheduled to get under way at 10 a.m. at Daniel Boone Hotel in Columbia.

Compton Expects Approval.

Compton said he thought that the committee would adopt the resolution as a "means of restoring party harmony." A state committee member who is supporting the resolution said the plan would be approved by "at least" 29 of the 44 state committee members.

Welsh, however, has served notice that he and Mrs. Tanner will ignore the proposal if it is approved. The national committeeman contended it would have "no legal effect," and he said he and Mrs. Tanner will continue to handle patronage recommendations in co-operation with local Republican groups.

The new patronage machinery was proposed by a resolutions committee appointed by Compton. It provides that if Welsh, Mrs. Tanner and Compton fail to approve patronage appointments within 10 days after recommendations are submitted to them, the matter would be referred to the special seven-member committee for action.

Members of Special Group.

Members of the special group would include Roscoe C. Hobbs of St. Louis, chairman of the Republican state finance committee; William G. Moore Jr. of St. Louis, state committee treasurer; Miss Anne Richards of Brookfield, committee vice chairman; Miss Harriet Combs of Kansas City, committee secretary; Compton, Welsh and Mrs. Tanner.

A modification of this plan was under consideration last night. It was proposed by Richard Erickson of Kansas City, chairman of the group which drafted the original resolution.

The modified plan calls for a six-member patronage group. This would be accomplished by dropping Hobbs from the committee, and leaving the four state committee officials, Welsh and Mrs. Tanner. Welsh has complained that he and Mrs. Tanner would be outvoted on patronage matters by the other members of the special group.

Simmering East Side Underworld Boiled Over After Raid; Outburst of Violence Climaxed in Murder of Fred Koenig

Wortman's Determination to Be Bet Czar Linked to Bombing and Shootings.

The underworld on the East Side was simmering restlessly until Police Commissioner Russell T. Beebe made a notable raid May 4. Then it boiled over.

In the ensuing seven weeks, Beebe's official car was bombed, one man was shot to death, another wounded. Two automobiles were riddled with bullets in the outburt of gangland violence which resulted last week in the murder of J. Fred Koenig, former St. Louis politician.

The East Side was getting a taste of what was experienced in the days of the Shelton and Birger gangs, only this time a new gang was reportedly involved—the hoodlums associated with the notorious Frank (Buster) Wortman.

Beebe's raid was made on an establishment intended to be headquarters for a racing and baseball betting information service for the entire St. Louis area. These quarters were above Wortman's Terrace Lounge, a night club at 127 Collinsville avenue in East St. Louis.

Wortman Uses Muscle.

Wortman's determination to be the czar of illicit activities in this area, particularly gambling, has been brought home forcefully and forcibly to anyone who decided to branch out on his own.

Koenig tried it, and started operating a telephone racing news service from his apartment at 601 North Fortieth street, East St. Louis. Associated with him were two young men, Birney T. (Chick) Havey Jr. and Kenneth Mueller, who shortly were the targets of unidentified assailants.

Beebe knew he had tackled a tough customer when he raided the place above Wortman's lounge. The East St. Louis police commissioner began locking his official car to prevent a bomb from being attached to the ignition. He kept a floodlight on in his back yard.

The light, however, was turned off the night of May 6 because it was attracting so many insects. Late that night a bomb was exploded beneath Beebe's car, parked in a driveway beside his home at 1717 North Twenty-first street.

The commissioner was awake but in bed when the blast occurred at 1:15 a.m., wrecking the automobile and shattering three windows in the home. The explosive, it was found, was a black-powder bomb—the underworld's special warning to its enemies.

As for the two men arrested in the raid on the Terrace Lounge, they were freed June 10 by Magistrate Harry Cassin of East St. Louis who dismissed gambling charges which had been filed against them. They are William Brown, son of the late Paul (Bev) Brown, president of the old Pioneer News Service, and Joe Lynch, who gave an address in the 4900 block of McPherson avenue.

Mueller Fired On.

Just 10 days after the bombing of Beebe's automobile, Kenneth Mueller was driving home on State street when, at about Twenty-first street, a green automobile pulled abreast of Mueller's late model Cadillac. As the green car moved ahead, there was a burst of revolver fire. Eight bullets struck the Cadillac.

Mueller, describing this experience later in a stilted, formal statement handed police and reporters, said: "I was startled by shattering glass and explosions, such as gun shots.

"Fragments of lass struck my face. I turned my head to the left, and I was struck below the eye. I was stunned and temporarily blinded. When I could see again, the street was deserted. I saw no one."

Only a few minutes before he was injured, he had left Wortman's Terrace Lounge, where he had been drinking heavily. The night club was a familiar place to Mueller, since he had been doorman there when his friend, Havey, was manager.

Havey had been fired early this year by Wortman, who reportedly was angered because of beatings administered to unruly customers. When Havey left, Mueller joined his friend, and they both became associates of Koenig.

Havey likewise was at the Terrace Lounge the night Mueller was wounded. He said he left about the same time—4:30 o'clock in the morning—in his own Cadillac.

Although Havey's car also was hit by several bullets, all on the driver's side, he professed not to know when or where this occurred. He said he went to the apartment he shared with Mueller, ate breakfast and waited for Mueller. When Mueller did not appear, he left.

Then, he said, he observed for the first time that his car had bullet holes in it. He drove to his home at 9669 Halls Ferry road, Jennings. It was then almost daylight, and two big spotlights in the yard played on the large white ranch house, but Havey was cautious.

He parked his automobile near by, slipped into the house and began looking through a dresser drawer. His wife, Shirley, saw him and assumed he was hunting for bullets. He left again and soon Mrs. Havey, who has filed suit for divorce, saw the Cadillac drive slowly past the house twice, as if Havey was making certain no unfriendly visitors were around.

He then drove into the garage that adjoins the house, and went to bed.

In the meantime, Mueller, wounded in the shoulder and below the right eye, went to the East St. Louis apartment, awakened Koenig, his downstairs neighbor, and told him what happened.

After some attention to his wounds, Mueller took a nap. Then Koenig telephoned the Havey home. He told Havey: "Kenny's been hurt. He wants to come to see you."

In a short time, Koenig arrived at the Havey home with the injured Mueller. After a 30-minute conference, the three men went in an automobile Koenig was driving to Tenth and Rutger streets.

"When Chick saw what had happened to Kenneth, he went white as a sheet with rage," Koenig later told authorities. "He said he did not know who shot Kenneth, but that they had made a 'mistake.'"

Wounds Dressed.

Mueller's wounds were dressed at Havey's home with gauze and adhesive tape Koenig had purchased at an East St. Louis drug store.

During the ride to Tenth and Rutger, Havey told Koenig his car was following Mueller's when the shooting occurred on the East Side, Koenig later told police. When the bullets hit Havey's machine, he turned sharply at the next corner and drove home, unaware that Mueller had been shot, Havey told Koenig.

This was at variance with the statement Havey gave to authorities Monday night when he and Mueller made their first appearance since the shooting. At that time, he asserted he did not know how or when his machine was hit by bullets.

After Koenig drove Havey and Mueller to downtown St. Louis, they transferred to a red convertible driven by "a dark-complexioned fellow," whom Koenig said he did not know.

The same night, Havey's private plane—a two-seater Ryan Navion painted yellow with blue trim, unusual colors for that type of plane—disappeared from Parks Airport on the East Side. Havey was seen at the airport but the plane took off with its destination and occupants unknown.

Despite a 10-state search instituted by the Civil Aeronautics Administration, the plane was identified only once from May 17 until June 9, when it landed at St. Charles airport.

Made Stop in Kansas.

The plane made a brief stopover May 22 at Russell, Kan., to refuel. East Side police were informed that Havey and Mueller eventually went to Royal Oak, Mich., but the two men denied this when they made their unscheduled appearance last week.

They showed up at the East St. Louis police station, Havey entering by the front door, Mueller by the back. Capt. Virgil Baltezor, acting night chief, looked up surprised and said: "You're just the men I want to talk to."

After being questioned for five hours, Havey and Mueller were released. They left hurriedly by a back door and again disappeared.

At about the time the men were in the police station, Koenig was with his wife in the Red Rooster, a night club near Fairmount race track. The club is operated by Gordon Foster, who is related to the Wortman family through marriage.

Some time later Koenig disappeared, his wife said, and she had no word of him until his body was found in the trunk of his Cadillac about 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Once Chief Court Clerk.

Koenig was once chief deputy clerk in the St. Louis circuit court for criminal causes and served as a Republican delegate to the Missouri state constitutional convention in 1943. The affable, sociable Koenig loved people and horses.

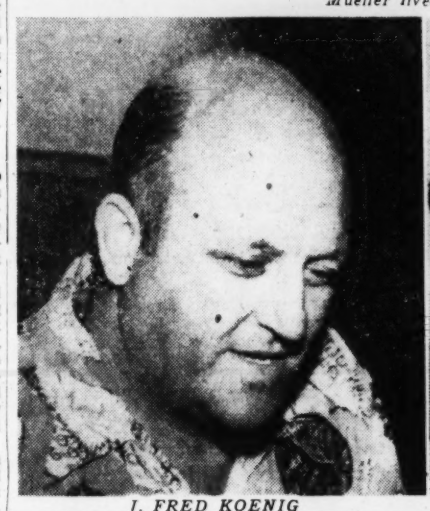

Koenig had his troubles with the law, including convictions for black marketing in whisky and re-using whisky bottles, in violation of Internal Revenue laws.

On Friday someone fired sever shots into the front doors of Wortman's Terrace Lounge. Early yesterday, the Stork Club, an East Side roadhouse operated by William H. Welsh, who was questioned in the initial disappearance of Havey and Mueller, burned almost to the ground.

Whether these incidents were connected with the assaults on individuals since Commissioner Beebe's famous raid has not been established.

COUNTY MEETING ON PREVENTING HOODLUM INFLUX

Dispute Between Sheriff and County Police Might Give Criminals Their Chance.

A meeting of various St. Louis county officials and representatives of law enforcement agencies will be held Tuesday at 1 p.m. at the County Health Center, 651 South Brentwood boulevard, to discuss means of preventing an influx of hoodlums into the county, it was announced yesterday.

Fred Huncke, chief of police in Shrewsbury and president of the St. Louis County Law Enforcement Officers Association, said views of officials will be sought concerning steps to be taken.

The action is in compliance with a recommendation made June 14 by the county grand jury that such a meeting be held. In its partial report at that time, the grand jury said it had found no evidence of organized crime in the county.

"However," the report continued, "we have had reports too persistent to be ignored that hoodlums have been trying to make arrangements to move into the county after July 1 if the jurisdictional questions are not solved by that time. Even at this early state of our investigation, it is apparent that St. Louis county is facing a crisis in law enforcement."

The "jurisdictional questions" referred to the confusion over lines of law enforcement authority in the county. The jury declared that uncertainty over which agency would handle law enforcement after July 1 was precipitating a crisis and Circuit Judge Franklin Ferriss said copies of the partial report were being sent to the State Supreme Court.

The county police board yesterday formally asked Sheriff Arthur C. Mosley to state his position in writing by tomorrow afternoon on whether he will turn over to it records and equipment used by his office in its police duties. The new department is to start functioning Friday.

Mosley told the Post-Dispatch his position is unchanged and he will not turn over these materials without a court order or a court opinion relieving him of responsibility for law enforcement. He said if necessary he will swear in additional unpaid special deputies for police duty after Thursday.

VEILED PROPHET BALL TO BE ON NIGHT OF OCT. 4

Following long standing tradition, the Veiled Prophet Ball will be held the evening of Oct. 4, which is the first Tuesday after the first Monday in October. The Veiled Prophet parade will be held the following night, it was announced yesterday by a spokesman for the Order of the Veiled Prophet.

Since 1950 the ball has been held the night before the parade so the Veiled Prophet queen and her special maids might ride in enclosed floats in the parade. In case of rain, the parade will be postponed until the next clear night.

The Order of the Veiled Prophet was founded here in 1878 and, prior to 1924 the parade and the ball were on the same night. Then until 1950 the parade preceded the ball. The affairs have been held continuously since their founding except during war years.

FINGERLING BASS GIVEN TO POND OWNERS IN COUNTY

St. Louis county residents who have ponds on their property hauled home truckloads of fish yesterday from Lindbergh boulevard and Clayton road, Ladue, where the Missouri Conservation Commission distributed free between 10,000 and 15,000 bass fingerlings.

Purpose of the distribution was to provide additional fishing places for sportsmen and to encourage the building of ponds as a conservation measure.

Sixty-one pond owners with a total of 106 acres of land under water participated in the distribution of the fish.

SNAKE CUTS OFF POWER TO 8000 COUNTY HOMES

A snake which coiled around an insulator in the Union Electric Co.'s Babler substation near Gumbo caused electrical service to about 8000 St. Louis county homes to be cut off from 3:53 a.m. to 5:32 a.m. yesterday.

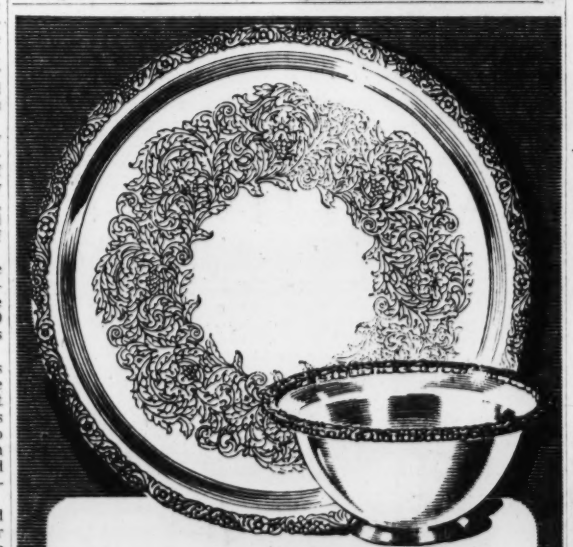

Among places affected was the Missouri Highway Patrol station on the Daniel Boone Parkway at Bopp road. It relied on its emergency generator to supply power.

ZOO'S CHIMPANZEE SHOW LOUD SPEAKER STOLEN

Two loudspeakers valued at $45 each were stolen from the chimpanzee house at the St. Louis Zoo, Moody Lentz, curator, reported to police yesterday.

Lentz said the devices, both 22 inches in diameter, were taken between 5 p.m. Thursday and 11 a.m. Friday. The loudspeakers were used outside at chimpanzee shows.

THREATENING GESTURE BLAMED FOR SHOOTING

Man Wounds Alleged Taunter of Self and Wife in Front of Home.

Benjamin F. Forrester yesterday was booked suspected of assault with intent to kill George H. Haggard, wounded Friday midnight by a shotgun blast fired by Forrester, who told police Haggard had made a threatening gesture toward him.

Forrester said he and his wife were sitting on the steps of their home, 1414 South Ewing avenue, when four young men started a quarrel across the street. Forrester, 68 years old, said he asked the men to "watch your language." They shouted abuses at him, he said.

The men departed, but returned and again shouted profanity at him, Forester related. He said he and his wife went inside and at midnight he saw Haggard, whom he recognized as one of the men, standing on the sidewalk. Forrester said he got his shotgun, went outside and ordered Haggard to move on. He told police he fired when Haggard turned toward him in a threatening manner.

Haggard, wounded in the left leg, right thigh and left hand, admitted, police said, that he had an argument "with several fellows." He said he left and returned later to inquire about a girl he thought lived at 1414 South Ewing avenue. He said he was standing on the sidewalk when he was struck by shotgun pellets, but did not see who fired the shot.

Haggard, who lives at 3007A Eads avenue, is in City Hospital.

MOLOTOV URGES DIRECT U.S. TALKS WITH RED CHINA

of government would have to pass on the problem.

When he was asked whether a time limit had been set on the duration of the Geneva parley, Molotov said: "It was agreed it would be better not to set any date beforehand because the conference itself would show how much time would be needed."

Western sources have said the conference will be limited to one week and that Molotov had accepted this limitation privately. There has been speculation, nevertheless, that the Russians might seek to prolong the meeting of President Eisenhower with the heads of state of Russia, Britain and France.

Russia's Top Man.

One questioner wanted to know whether the Soviet Union would be represented at Geneva by Premier Bulganin. Molotov replied tersely, "Yes, of course." The West still is not absolutely certain just who is running Russia and there has been speculation Bulganin might not be the top man at Geneva.

The agenda of the Big Four is a matter, Molotov said, to be settled by the conference principals. The possibilities are well known, and what develops is being awaited with great interest, he added.

Asked for his views of German unification, Molotov said the Soviet Union is in favor of it and that it stands to reason such unification should be on a peaceful and democratic basis.

The Soviet proposal for the unification of Germany, he continued, does not mean the extension of either the East German Communist regime or the West German government to the whole of Germany. What sort of rule the Germans are to have must be settled by the Germans through "free elections," he said.

Collective Security.

The Soviet proposal for "collective security" for the whole of Europe means security for all European nations, Molotov said, and as of the present both parts of Germany could participate. A unified Germany could take part as a unit.

Molotov was asked whether he had any comment on the speech made yesterday by Dulles to the anniversary session of the U.N. and he replied all he could say was that Dulles set forth views of the United States in his speech and on Wednesday Molotov set forth his views.

With reference to the recent visit of top Soviet officials to the defected satellite state of Yugoslavia, the signing of the Austrian treaty, and the Soviet approaches to West Germany, Molotov was asked whether there had been a change in Russian policy.

Careful study of the events, Molotov replied, would show merely the consistent development of Soviet foreign policy looking toward peace.

30-Minute Interview.

After a half hour of questioning, Molotov looked at his wristwatch and in a moment he and his party stood up. He agreed to answer one more question, and was asked whether the United States and Canada could participate in a collective European security system. Molotov said yes, if they wanted to.

Molotov's replies were the essence of diplomatic tact. He was gracious and obliging, articulate and responsive.

The decision to meet the press was taken by Molotov shortly after he had rejected finally a chance to appear on a Columbia Broadcasting System panel discussion tomorrow afternoon. He declined to submit to indiscriminate questioning and instead proposed that he give answers to questions submitted to him in advance. This was unacceptable to CBS and the three reporters who were to have questioned him.

Uses Interpreter.

Today's conference demonstrated that Molotov need have had no qualms about his ability to field questions batted to him. The fact that he spoke through an interpreter O. A. Troyanovsky, son of the first Soviet ambassador to the United States who died Thursday, gave him a few moments to compose himself between questions.

About 150 reporters and photographers had gathered in the auditorium of the Veterans' Memorial building when Molotov walked on the stage three minutes ahead of time with Troyanovsky; G. N. Zarubin, Moscow's present ambassador to Washington, and three others. Molotov sat before a low table on which was placed a microphone. Russian security officers previously had made a thorough inspection of the room.

The foreign minister was wearing a gray suit with a discreet pencil stripe, a pastel blue shirt and dark blue tie—standard attire for television although television cameras were not set up. He wore the typical baggy Russian trousers which virtually concealed his polished tan shoes when he was standing.

Molotov spoke in a matter-of-fact manner, looking from questioner to interpreter. He rested his elbows on the arms of the chair but occasionally extended his short forearms and opened his hands, palms toward the audience. Sometimes he crossed his hands in his lap or emphasized a point with his left forefinger.

Leaving for New York.

Molotov's press conference was his last appearance here prior to departing tonight by train for New York en route home.

The U.N. commemorative conference is in recess while delegates rest or tour the city. Secretary Dulles planned to depart for Washington tonight.

The conference will end formally tomorrow at a ceremony in the Opera House marking the day the U.N. charter was signed 10 years ago. It is expected the conference president, Eelco N. Van Kleffens, will read a San Francisco declaration of 1955 summing up the meeting which has been attended by nearly 40 foreign ministers and top statesmen from points around the globe.

RUSSIAN HANDLING OF VISITORS SHOWS UP M'CARRAN ACT

conference, may stay here for only two weeks.

Swedes at Swank Hotel.

Members of the Swedish delegation were housed at the new swank Sovietskaya hotel during their stay, the Afro-American correspondent was put up there for a night and then moved to the National hotel where most visiting American correspondents stay. Run-of-the-mill delegations are quartered at the National, Metropol and Savoy hotels. Over the years I have stayed in all of them and, while they are pre-Revolution and would be listed second-class outside Russia, they are adequate. The American weight-lifters were at the Savoy, a small hotel that used to have a good restaurant.

To these hotels come the East and West Germans, British, French, Belgians, Dutch, Czechoslovaks, Red Chinese, Japanese, Poles and others.

At the National, the restaurant is sometimes closed to permit a banquet or a dance. During my stay in Kiev, the hotel dining room was taken over one evening to give a supper to about 30 Japanese trade union visitors who had been supplied with airplanes to see various sections of the country.

Receptions given Nehru and Anderson this week show the wide range of treatment worked out for foreigners distinguished in their own fields. The Dynamo sports stadium which seats 80,000 was jammed to hear the Indian Prime Minister give his views on how to ease international tension.

An old Washington trick was used to line his route to the meeting. The affair was scheduled for 6 p.m., when most of the Moscovites end their working day. The device probably was not necessary. There is a tremendous curiosity about Nehru among Russians and a mere announcement that he was to be at a certain place at a certain time would have insured a large turnout. I saw this happen for him at Yalta, where a radio announcement filled the downtown section of the holiday resort just to get a glimpse of him and his daughter as they drove in an open car.

Among other places, he was taken to Livadia palace, a few miles outside Yalta, where the Big Three conference of Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin was held in 1945. Incidentally, there is no plaque in the conference room there or in the rooms Roosevelt used to show that it is an historic spot.

Nehru held a reception at the Sovietskaya hotel this week as his bread-and-butter thank-you for the tremendous ovations he had received during his stay.

He had previously used the old Spiridonovsk palace to have a multi-lingual press conference with Russian, Indian and foreign correspondents, but there could have been several reasons why he used a Russian foreign office establishment. The palace was thoroughly covered by Russian secret police and the occasion was televised. Such things might have been difficult at the Indian embassy. The embassy could not have contained the crowd of officials, foreign diplomats and correspondents who accepted the Prime Minister's valued reception invitations.

Russians Almost Fill Room.

The Russians came early and by themselves almost filled the ante-room to the large dining room, where tables, loaded with Russian and Indian foods, had been set up. Beverages, according to Hindu custom, were non-alcoholic.

When the guests walked into the dining room, there scarcely was room to move around. The correspondents stood by the head table awaiting Nehru and the highest Russian officials. He came to the place of honor with Prime Minister Bulganin. Close behind were Khrushchev, Mikoyan, Kaganovich, Malenkov, Voroshilov and Gromyko. Marshal Zhukov resplendent in full uniform with the medals as a Hero of the Soviet Union, at the time was in the crowd but later came to the head table, as did many others, including the foreign ambassadors. Nehru wore his usual brown suit of light material and white leggings and white cap. The Russians, for the most part, were in blue suits and their own choice of neckties. Throughout the affair they were jovial and most informal. Some appeared amazed at tasting the non-alcoholic drinks. Nehru confined himself to tomato juice, including the numerous toasts with individual Russians.

These are about the only occasions when foreign correspondents can talk with the highest officals and they do their best to get information. They rarely succeed in obtaining any thing important, but at least they sometimes get light and amusing items. Bulganin and Malenkov were the most reserved at this reception. Khrushchcev, Mikoyan and Kaganovich were the most responsive and effusive; Gromyko, as usual, was deadpan.

The Afro-American correspondent, although he had been in Moscow for less than 24 hours, asked Khrushchev for an appointment for an interview. The questions and answers are through interpreters and the party leader wanted to know how long the reporter would be in Moscow. Told the stay would be two month, Khrushchev said there would be plenty of time to arrange a meeting.

When other reporters asked whether Khrushchev would go to the Geneva Big Four meeting, he replied, "Now you are trying to interview me."

At this point, Bulganin took him by the arm and led him to Nehru, telling reporters, "Talk to Mikoyan."

Mikoyan, a shrewd-faced Armenian with piercing black eyes, was agreeable, but Kaganovich, a big man with a booming voice, continually interrupted. The talk was across the table and one felt that if Kaganovich had been close enough there would have been some backslapping.

The permanent correspondents, who speak some Russian, tried to get from the two what information they could about the Russian-Indian trade agreement Bulganin and Nehru were to sign immediately after the reception, but the most they got was, "Look at the smiling faces around you," and, "Trade always makes for peace and the lessening of international tensions."

Kaganovich Comments.

Kaganovich observed, "I have told you nothing new."

The same correspondents tackled Nehru to see when they could get an American translation of the agreement. The Prime Minister, who was slicing yellow mangoes for his Russian guests, walked over to the Indian press officer and talked for a minute or two. He returned to say the matter was being worked out. His later word was that the translation would be available to the press at the Russian foreign office at 6 a.m. the next day.

At the conclusion of the reception, Nehru was given a doctorate degree by the University of Moscow.

Local hospitality permitted the Russians the last courtesy. After the reception, the correspondents rushed across town by automobiles to the Kremlin to watch the two Prime Ministers sign the agreement. This was done in the Kremlin grand palace and was strictly for the correspondents, photographers and newsreels. Gromyko appeared in charge of the preliminary arrangements, and correspondents who had been in Belgrade for the Russian meeting with Marshal Tito said the Yugoslav stage dressing had been followed.

Visiting correspondents got into the ceremony by showing their passports at the outer Kremlin gate and at the entrance to the grand palace, where their names were checked against a list.

The ceremony room was in polished yellow and white marble with two large golden candelabra suspended from a high ceiling. There were only two chairs at the large table covered with green baise. Nehru sat on Bulganin's right and each used his own fountain pen as klieg lights glared and still photographers used their flash bulbs for the two principals and their Russian and Indian associates who stood back of the table.

The whole affair took less than five minutes. The only witnesses were the photographers and correspondents.

The two receptions I attended for the American weight-lifting team were more formal than the official affairs for the Indian Prime Minister. The first was given at the United States Embassy by Mrs. Bohlen in the absence of Ambassador Bohlen, who had gone to the United States for the United Nations anniversary. The Spasso House event was almost entirely American and the team drank milk instead of the usual late afternoon beverages.

A larger reception of about 200 Russians and Americans was given at the Metropol hotel by the physical culture section of one of the ministries. The entertainment was typically Russian with good singers and folk dancers and an oriental looking sleight-of-hand artist, described as capable of doing the impossible but something of a chautauqua grade performer. Before the buffet supper, including plenty of wine and vodka, there were some rather long Russian speeches about the value of the interchange of athletes for the promotion of peace.

The team, its manager and its coach, were presented with small, expensive Russian cameras.

The few Russian newspaper men I have talked with and many of the foreign diplomats cannot understand why the State Department cannot waive or ignore the stringent provisions of the Walter-McCarran law, especially the one requiring the fingerprinting of visitors. It is beyond their comprehension that the executive department must obey the letter and spirit of laws written by Congress. In their countries it is usually different.

The Russians have all the details about their visiting chess team, the refusal of the Russian editors to be fingerprinted and the delay over exchanging farm delegations.

There can be no question that an exchange of American unofficial delegations, such as sports, education, trade union, newspaper and cultural groups would be beneficial to the United States. We have the deeds and achievements while the Russian are just beginning to get what has been promised for decades. It is hard to conceive that any group will be misled by what they see.

Under official Kremlin policy, the Russians are opening up their country far more than in the past. They are proud of what is being done. The official American policy puts American visitors to Russia on the defensive and it is pretty hard to defend the fingerprinting provision of the Walter-McCarran law whether to a Russian, a Briton or a Frenchman.

ST. LOUISAN DROWNS IN MERAMEC RIVER

George L. Sewell Was Trying to Swim Across Stream.

George L. Sewell, 4135 Donovan place, drowned last night when trying to swim across the Meramec river at Yarnell road, near Long Beach in St. Louis county. A companion, Morris Wright, of 2315 Menard street, went to his aid as they were within 20 feet of the far bank but was pulled under and had to give up.

Sewell, a punch press operator, was 27 years old.

The river is about 100 feet wide where the drowning occurred, and the men were swimming from west to east. Deputy sheriffs, Valley Park police and some volunteers recovered the body about an hour later, some 40 feet downstream in eight feet of water.

A police respirator was used for half an hour, but Sewell could not be revived and a physician pronounced him dead at 9:30 o'clock.

The men were on an outing with Misses Rose and Henrietta Meek, 2502 South Tenth street, but they did not go into the water.

LESS THAN 10 PCT. OF PAYERS CLAIM EARNINGS TAX REFUND

Less than 10 per cent of the 200,000 taxpayers eligible to receive refunds from their city earnings tax have filed claims for them, Collector of Revenue Del L. Bannister said yesterday. The deadline for filing claims is next Thursday.

The 19,000 claims which have been filed range from 41 cents to $440, Bannister said. Claims for refund of the city tax may be made on federal and state income taxes paid last year. The city rate is one half of one per cent.

Forms for refund claims have been distributed to a number of large business firms, and also may be obtained at Bannister's office in City Hall.

WALTER F. HOENER DIES IN CHICAGO HOTEL ROOM

Walter F. Hoener, of 1024 North Geyer road, Kirkwood, died yesterday in his hotel room at Chicago where he had been attending the furniture mart. He was 68 years old.

Mr. Hoener had been a manufacturers' agent for many years, representing furniture concerns.

Besides his wife he is survived by two sons, Walter F. Hoener Jr., and Henry C. Hoener, and two daughters, Mrs. Herbert Morisse and Mrs. Paul Nelson, of Minnesota.

EISENHOWER SIGNS AUSTRIA TREATY IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

LANCASTER, N.H., June 25 (U.P.)—President Eisenhower today signed the Austrian state treaty, providing for the end of occupation of Austria by the end of this year. Before the pact can come into force, it must also be ratified by the governments of Great Britain, France and Soviet Russia.

The President acted by virtue of a Senate resolution granting permission for ratification. He signed the treaty at the Cat Bow farm of Commerce Secretary Sinclair Weeks, where he spent the night.

The treaty was flown to the President during the night by courier from Washington.

GOLDEN WEDDING DINNER

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Losak, 2631 Armand place, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary today with a family dinner followed by an open house for friends at their home.

The LAKE VACATIONLAND St.Louisans have always wanted

only 30 MINUTES FROM ST.LOUIS

Lake Lorraine

Only 30 minutes away from busy St. Louis, a beautiful new Lake Vacationland is rapidly coming into existence.

Nestling among the beautiful hills of Jefferson County, there will soon be a huge lake of clear, sparkling water . . . and around this lake will be picturesque lodges, where busy men and their families will enjoy life as they have always hoped to do . . . even as the nearby city swelters under summer's simmering heat.

Almost at their own doors, Bass, Crappie, Blue Gill, Perch and Channel Cat will wait to match wits with the disciples of Izaak Walton . . . the clear lake will beckon invitingly to those who love the tingling thrill of a good swim in spring-fed waters.

The same men who developed beautiful Lake Montowese and Fond du Lac are building Lake Lorraine in a setting of rare natural beauty . . . in the wooded hills of Jefferson County near Goldman, Missouri, less than 30 miles south of Affton on Highway 21 (Tesson Ferry Road).

The heavily timbered shore line has been divided into Lodge Sites varying in size from 50x150 feet to half acre and acre tracts. Modern conveniences are available. Lodge Site prices start at $750, and may be bought on most convenient terms.

Lake Lorraine will NOT be open to the general public. It is being developed—and will be maintained—for Lodge Site owners and their guests. Careful selection of owners of Lodge Sites and expert management assure the high character of this beautiful Lake Vacationland.

FACES QUESTIONS ON CLAIM POLICE WERE IN BROTHEL

Former Employe of Mrs. Lytz to Be Asked if He Can Identify Officers.

Investigators of the Circuit Attorney's office will question Henry Mullen, a part-time employe of Mrs. June Alma Lytz, murdered brothel operator, to determine whether he can identify uniformed policemen he said he saw in her establishment on two different occasions, officials said yesterday.

Mullen, a Negro, who ran errands, collected trash and made bank deposits for Mrs. Lytz, told the Post-Dispatch he saw two policemen in uniform coming down the stairs in Mrs. Lytz's massage parlor at 308A North Theresa avenue in the early part of last summer. The circuit court grand jury is investigating reported pay-offs to some policemen by Mrs. Lytz.

In either January or February of this year, Mullen said, he saw two other uniformed officers in the parlor. "One of them was at the head of the steps, and the other one was standing in the kitchen door talking to Mrs. Lytz," he said.

Men With Revolvers.

Mullen said that on several occasions he had seen men in business suits with revolvers under their coats in the establishment. He said he thought they were policemen.

A few days before Christmas last year, Mullen said, he was sent by Mrs. Lytz to a liquor store to buy three fifths of whisky which she wanted in Christmas gift boxes. He added that Mrs. Lytz told him one bottle "was for the police."

"It was some special brand, and I don't remember the name, but she said she was going to send it to the police station," Mullen said.

He added that Mrs. Lytz did not indicate what she intended doing with the other two bottles. He said, however, that he usually went to the liquor store once a week for Mrs. Lytz and bought either two or three fifths of whisky.

Mullen said he had worked part-time for Mrs. Lytz since 1935, at various addresses.

Took Money to Bank.

He said he usually took money to the bank once a week to be deposited for Mrs. Lytz. The bank book and money were in a sealed envelope, he added, and Mrs. Lytz seldom mentioned the amount of money inclosed.

"Only a few times did she say how much was being deposited," Mullen said. "On the day she was killed, she told me the deposit I took to the bank was $285."

A few days after Mrs. Lytz was murdered April 21, Mullen said, her former husband, Werner Lytz, "asked me if I knew anything about a safe deposit box that belonged to Mrs. Lytz. I told him I didn't know anything about a safe deposit box, if she had one."

The grand jury inquiry was started as a result of statements made by Pauline Cloin, who was employed by Mrs. Lytz.

RED CROSS FIRST AID CLASS

A nine-session standard first aid class will begin tomorrow at 9:30 a.m. at the Red Cross chapter headquarters, 3414 Lindell boulevard. Two-hour meetings will be held Mondays and Wednesdays.

The course will demonstrate proper treatment for burns, shock, stoppage of bleeding, fractures and a new method of artificial respiration. LeRoy Coulter is instructor.

ROME REZONING APPIAN WAY TO KEEP IT UNSPOILED

ROME, June 25 (AP) — Rome is rezoning the Appian way.

Archeologists and civic leaders wanted to make a park of the 11-mile stretch of the old road south of San Sebastian gate. They said movie stars' villas, billboards and gasoline stations were theatening the beauty of the cobbled highway that Caesar's legions trod.

A Government commission and Rome's Department of Monuments and Arts finally decided: "Although the park plan would be ideal, it is impossible. It would cost too much."

They agreed on a compromise. Under it three-quarters of the 11-mile stretch will be closed to further building. Along the remaining quarter—where the villas are—residence building will be restricted to two-story structures. These must be built well back from the road, with ample grounds.

More of the Appian way's famed umbrella pines will be planted in rows to cut off the view of "some eyesores that have sprung up." Squatters have put up shacks some places along the road.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR TWO BANKERS WHO DIED IN CRASH

Funeral services will be held tomorrow for George Stoltz and Robert J. Simon, assistant vice presidents of Boatmen's National Bank, who were killed Thursday in a traffic accident on State Highway 47 near Washington, Mo.

Services for Mr. Stoltz, who was 62 years old, will be at 1:30 p.m. at the Beiderwieden undertaking establishment, 3620 Chippewa street, with burial in Sunset Burial Park. He lived at 516 Bedford Oaks drive, Kirkwood. Surviving are his wife, his son, and his mother.

Services for Mr. Simon, who was 44, will be at 9 a.m. at St. Mary Magdalen Catholic Church, 8757 Manchester road, Brentwood, with burial in Calvary Cemetery. He lived at 8741 Florence avenue, Brentwood, and is survived by his wife, a daughter, two sons, and his mother.

THE NIAGARA Weight Control PROGRAM

THE NEW medically-correct REDUCING PLAN that includes VITAMINS, DIET and HOME MASSAGE

Niagara's fascinating, new three-way reducing plan takes off fat while it firms the flesh. It is an entirely different approach to weight control—one that is pleasant, convenient and very, very effective.

The Niagara Weight Control Program was developed by the famous Niagara Research Institute in cooperation with competent medical authorities to fill the need for a scientific, medically-correct, complete home-reducing plan.

It consists of unique, choose-your-food menus that allow you to select wholesome, delicious items for your meal; specially-prepared mineral-vitamin concentrates for health and energy; and wonderful Niagara Cycloid-Massage® to give you all the "good-figure" benefits of the finest massage.

Never before has there been a home-reducing program that included the important feature of massage. But now Niagara gives it to you! Get all the details TODAY on this glorious, new approach to weight control. Find out how the Niagara plan can help you avoid the many pitfalls of common "quickie" diets . . . the tension, fatigue, and the nagging feeling of irritation. Learn how you can reduce in a relaxed, pleasant manner, while you feel and look like a "million."

LEONOR SULLIVAN FOR FREE VACCINE FOR ALL UP TO 21

Proposes Shots Be Turned Over to Polio Foundation to Assure Fair Distribution.

By JAMES DEAKIN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 25 — Representative Leonor K. Sullivan (Dem.), St. Louis, said today she would introduce a bill Monday, directing the government to purchase enough Salk polio vaccine to give free inoculations to all children under the age of 20.

Under the measure, the government would turn the vaccine over to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis for distribution. The bill would call for the inoculation program to be completed by the end of 1956.

Three free shots would be given to about 59,000,000 children under 20, and after that the immunization program would revert to "normal channels," presumably to pharmaceutical houses manufacturing and selling the vaccine, she said.

Mrs. Sullivan Explains.

In a statement accompanying the bill, Mrs. Sullivan declared:

"The confusion which arose because of the government's original failure to have any practical program for the allocation or distribution of the vaccine, or to assure that every child in the country would receive the vaccine regardless of ability to pay, started the whole thing off on the wrong foot.

"The Administration fumbled the thing terribly. Its present proposal for the free inoculation of indigent children puts too much of a charity connotation on this program. It is not charity. All the people of the United States have paid for the development of this vaccine through their dimes and dollars to the National Foundation."

In hearings last May before the house banking committee, Mrs. Sullivan asked Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele of the United States Public Health Service if he could see any objection to turning the mass inoculation program over to the Polio Foundation.

O'Connor's Position.

Mrs. Sullivan said Dr. Scheele replied that he could see no objection. She said she then put the same question to Basil O'Connor, president of the national foundation, but received no definite answer.

Later, when O'Connor testified before the Senate Labor committee, he "reluctantly acknowledged that the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis 'had the competency' to inoculate all children in the country if the vaccine were supplied,'" Mrs. Sullivan said.

The Foundation now is handling free inoculations of all first-and-second-grade pupils, alloting vaccine to states and communities for distribution.

In his testimony before the Senate committee, O'Connor said the foundation would be "reluctant to take government money" to carry out a mass inoculation program beyond first- and second-grade students.

Differs From Earlier Bill.

Mrs. Sullivan said her bill differed from a measure introduced by seven democratic members of the Senate Labor committee, providing for federal grants to the states to purchase and distribute the vaccine.

Under her version, the government would buy vaccine directly, through the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and turn it over to the polio foundation for distribution. Both bills would provide free inoculation of all children under 20, regardless of ability to pay.

Mrs. Sullivan said the polio foundation has the experience and background to make a fair distribution of the vaccine and prevent black marketing. The bill would authorize the foundation to establish priorities and methods of distribution, under general supervision of the Health Department. No estimate of cost of such a program was made.

WOMAN TAKES RADIOACTIVE METAL AS 'FREE SAMPLE'

IPSWICH, England, June 25 (AP)—Police scoured this quiet cathedral town today for a radioactive woman.

Authorities said she walked away from a local civil defense exhibition with a radioactive metal disk handed to visitors to be hidden in their clothing and spotted by geiger counters.

"She obviously thought it was a free sample of something and took it home," the official said. "She should feel no effect for some time, unless she keeps the disk close to her body."

GRANDMOTHER OF 12 GETS DEGREE FROM COLLEGE

BENNINGTON, Vt., June 25 (AP)—Mrs. Margaret Buckley, mother of five and grandmother of 12, received a bachelor of arts degree today at Bennington College which awarded degrees to 59 seniors and four graduate students.

Her daughter, Mrs. Arnold G. Chapman of Plattsburg, N.Y., was graduated from Bennington 17 years ago.

Mrs. Buckley enrolled as a freshman in 1951 and took the regular college course. In her junior and senior years she majored in art. Twelve of her paintings were hung this week in an exhibit at the college. Her husband, Christopher, theater operator in Albany, N.Y., died in 1941.

Molotov Offers to Pay Half Of Damages to U.S. Plane

that the Russians had shown a conciliatory attitude and had offered compensation. However, the officials who commented received with no surprise Foreign Minister Molotov's expression of regret and offer to pay half the damages. They said the action fits in with Russia's current policy of seeking a thawing out of the cold war.

Purtell said that in view of the Soviet's partial admission of guilt "I am inclined to think the incident was unanticipated" by the Russians whereas yesterday he thought it might have been deliberate.

Senator Anderson (Dem.), New Mexico, said there was no way now for knowing exactly where the plane was when shot at and he added "if the plane was over their waters, as they claim, there may be some justification in the 50 per cent" offer.

Before Molotov's reply had been made public, Senate Republican Leader Knowland charged the attack was deliberate. He was not reached for later comment.

The United States, meanwhile, went ahead with preparations for the summit conference of Big Four chiefs of government in Geneva three weeks hence despite official anger over the shooting.

Speculation was widespread as to effects of the incident on those talks, but some diplomatic officials said the broad prospects might be changed little, if any.

Statements by the pilot of the plane and by Lt. Gen. Joseph H. Atkinson, armed forces commander in Alaska, backed an assertion by Presidential Press Secretary James Hagerty yesterday that the attack was "inexplicable and unwarranted."

Hagerty's phrase that the attack was "inexplicable and unwarranted" was as close as the President's office came to expressing anger over the affair. Diplomats said they considered the statement was restrained in its tone.

Atkinson said the twin-engine Neptune patrol plane, armed only with a single .50 caliber machine gun and flying about 210 miles per hour, was over international waters between Alaska and Siberia and "was not headed toward Soviet territory."

Seven Casualties.

The General said the plane "committed no provocative act nor did the crew display any hostile intent." Three crew members were injured by fragments from the Russian guns, while four others were burned when the plane burst into flames in a crash landing on remote St. Lawrence island, 100 miles from Siberia and 200 miles from Nome, Alaska. Four other crew members were unhurt.

The pilot, Lt. Richard H. Fischer of Pittsburgh, Pa., said the Russian attack came without warning and there was no time for the Navy plane to fire back.

19 DIE WHEN TWO PLANES COLLIDE AND BURN IN INDIA

NEW DELHI, June 25 (AP)—Indian air force headquarters announced that 15 air force and four army men were killed today when two Dakota planes collided near Agra and went down in flames.

An air force spokesman said no senior officials or foreigners were involved in the crash.

JOSEPH E. DAVIES WILLING WASHINGTON ESTATE TO U.S.

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP)—Joseph E. Davies, former ambassador to Russia, said tonight he has willed his estate to the Government — preferably as a graduate school for students of international affairs or a home for the Vice President.

The 78-year-old lawyer-diplomat lives here in a 20-room mansion situated high on a hill overlooking gardens, woods and other smaller buildings on the estate. The area, called Tregaron, is adjacent to the Chinese embassy and Rock Creek Park on Klingle road.

Davies said his will provides that the estate will go to Congress for establishment of a graduate school on international affairs. This would be done in co-operation with the Library of Congress and a group of universities throughout the country.

If this is not feasible, he said, his will provides that Tregaron shall be given to the Government as a permanent home for the Vice President.

NELSON A. ROCKEFELLER'S DAUGHTER, PASTOR MARRIED

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)—Ann Clark Rockefeller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson A. Rockefeller of Tarrytown, N.Y., was married today to the Rev. Robert Laughlin Pierson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald M. Pierson, of Eagle, Wis.

The bride, whose father is special assistant to President Eisenhower, is a granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller Jr. She is a member of the Wellesley College class of 1956.

The bridegroom received a Bachelor of Sciene degree from the University of Wisconsin and was graduated in 1954 from the Episcopal seminary, Nashota, Wis. He was ordained that year.

The Rt. Rev. Charles Francis Boynton performed the marriage ceremony at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in the Bronx. A reception followed at the Rockefeller home in Tarrytown.

ISRAEL AND EGYPT TO MEET ON EASING TENSION IN GAZA

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., June 25 (AP)—Maj. Gen. E. L. M. Burns, Canadian head of Palestine truce supervision, cabled United Nations officials today that he has arranged a meeting between Israel and Egypt Tuesday to discuss proposals for easing tension in the Gaza frontier strip.

Burns said both sides had agreed to discuss his plans for patrolling the area with mixed Israel-Egyptian police details and to build barricades along the border, often the scene of violent raids.

They have also agreed to discuss an Egyptian proposal for setting up a no-man's-land on both sides of the border and an Israel suggestion that the border be marked by mines.

HOPES ALDERMEN WON'T INTERFERE ON FLUORIDATION

Medical Society Committee Head Defends Program, Assails Opposition Bill.

Hope that the St. Louis Board of Aldermen will not "deliberately interfere" with the program for fluoridation of the city's water supply, which is expected to begin about Aug. 15, was expressed yesterday by Dr. Willard Bartlett, chairman of the special St. Louis Medical Society committee which studied the fluoridation question thoroughly.

A bill to repeal the fluoridation ordinance was introduced Friday in the board, sponsored by 18 Democratic members, a sufficient number for passage if all vote for the measure.

Alderman Clinton T. Watson (Dem.), Sixteenth ward, the original sponsor of the bill, told the Post-Dispatch he introduced it at the request of "someone" outside the aldermanic body, but he declined to name the person.

Proved in Tests, He Says.

"Ten-year tests in other sections of the country have proved the addition of fluorides to the water supply unqualifiedly successful," Dr. Bartlett said. "I can not understand what political advantage the aldermen may see in opposing the program now. Their reasons are entirely obscure to me. The previous aldermanic board, after more than three years spent evaluating fluoridation passed the ordinance overwhelmingly."

Watson said he does not plan to attempt to obtain passage of the repeal bill before the aldermen recess for the summer this week. Meetings are scheduled to be held tomorrow and Tuesday to act upon other pending bills and it would be possible to enact the repeal measure under suspension of the rules Tuesday.

Ruling on State Law Sought.

Watson, meanwhile, has asked the city counselor's office for an opinion as to whether the city ordinance authorizing the addition of fluorides to the water supply is in any way in conflict with state statutes pertaining to the adulteration of non-alcoholic drinks, poisoning of foods or drinks, or pollution of a municipal water supply.

Besides Watson, aldermen who sponsored the measure are: Leo J. McLaughlin, Second Ward; John T. Curry, Fifth Ward; Archie Blaine, Sixth Ward; Raymond Leisure, Seventh Ward; Anton Niemeyer, Eighth Ward; Louis Aboussie, Ninth Ward; James E. Geisler, Tenth Ward; Albert Villa, Eleventh Ward; Joseph F. Kavanaugh, Fourteenth Ward; Joseph P. Reddy, Seventeenth Ward; Wayman F Smith Jr., Eighteenth Ward; DeWitte T. Lawson, Nineteenth Ward; Edgar J. Feely, Twentieth Ward; A. Barney Mueller, Twenty-first Ward; Alfred I. Harris, Twenty-second Ward; William C. Brady, Twenty-sixth Ward, and Everett J. Taylor, Twenty-seventh Ward.

Whitman's Manuscript Gift.

CHARLOTTSVILLE, Va., June 25 (UP)—The University of Virginia announced today that Clifton Waller Barrett, retired New York businessman, has given it the manuscript of the 1860 edition of poet Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass" and other Whitman material.

WHEAT GROWERS APPARENTLY VOTE TO KEEP QUOTAS

Ballots in 11 of 36 States so Far Reported Are 70 Pct. in Favor of Controls.

CHICAGO, June 25 (UP)—The nation's wheat farmers apparently voted by a slim margin to accept government marketing quotas on their 1956 crops, first returns in today's nationwide referendum indicated.

Kansas, the nation's largest producer, voted 36,473 for controls with 13,141 against. The yes vote totaled 73.5 per cent with just two precincts missing.

With 11 of the 36 states in which farmers voted reporting, the vote was 48,004 in favor of controls with 19,785 against, roughly 70 per cent approving quotas.

Rejection of controls could lead to unrestricted wheat production in 1956, adding to an already huge surplus.

Department of Agriculture experts predicted the vote would "be close." Up to 500,000 of the 950,000 wheat growers eligible were expected to cast their ballots in the largest vote since 1941.

The "difficult choice" offered the growers was to determine whether the Government will support price of the 1956 wheat crop at $1.81 or $1.19 a bushel—far below this year's support price of $2.06.

The $1.81 support price, 76 per cent of parity, would be provided only if two thirds of those voting approved marketing quotas calculated to keep plantings restricted to 55,000,000 acres.

Rejection of quotas would mean a support price of only 50 per cent of parity — $1.19 a bushel. Farmers then could exceed acreage allotments without penalty, but they would get no price support loans.

States where wheat is a "bread-and-butter" crop usually favor quotas in order to get the higher support price.

Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, conceding the growers faced a "difficult choice," offered the plan to encourage the farmer to try other crops in place of wheat and thus reduce the wheat surplus—estimated at a record one billion bushels.

Benson made the proposal on the theory that a guaranteed return of only 76 per cent would not be enough to cause the individual farmers to keep on growing more and more wheat as his major source of income.

St. Clair county wheat producers voted 401 to 183 to continue acreage allotments and parity prices between 80 and 90 per cent. All 18 polling places in the county reported a favorable vote, ranging from a 32 to 3 margin in the combined poll for Caseyville and Canteen Townships to 19 to 17 for continuing acreage allotments in Mascoutah Township.

HOUSE CONSIDERS NEW BOOST IN ITS EMOLUMENTS

May Soon Increase Allowances for Stationery, Long Distance Calls and Research.

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP) —Members of Congress, who voted themselves a 50 per cent pay rise earlier this year, are considering some further increases in the emoluments of their offices.

They soon may hike their allowances for traveling, for postage, for stationery, for long distance calls, and for telegrams, and give themselves each a $12,131-a-year research assistant.

The extra allowances have been recommended by the House Administration Committee for inclusion in the forthcoming legislative appropriation bill. The committee also has recommended pay rises for most congressional employes.

For House Only.

The recommendations apply only to House members and House employes, in keeping with the time-honored policy that each branch of Congress handles its own "housekeeping" business. Senatorial employes, and probably Senators themselves, will be provided for when the appropriation bill reaches the Senate.

If present plans are approved, the stationery allowance of each House member will be boosted from $1200 to $1500 per year; the special delivery and airmail postage allowance from $200 to $300; free long-distance calls from 2700 minutes to 3000 minutes per year; free telegrams from 12,000 to 24,000 words per year, and mileage allowances at least doubled.

Each member of Congress now is reimbursed for one round trip per session from his home to the capital, at a rate of 20 cents per mile each way. The Administration committee has recommended an unspecified number of "additional round trips" per session.

Earlier Action.

Earlier this year, when Congress increased its members' pay from $15,000 to $22,500 annually, the Senate voted to give each member of Congress five expense-paid round trips per session, but the House balked.

The proposed research assistant would be in addition to the present allowance of not more than seven clerical assistants per member at total gross pay of an estimated $24,000 annually. Many members do not employ seven assistants, but split up the allowance among fewer employes.

There are no pending proposals to increase the business expenses deduction members of Congress may make for income tax purposes. Each member now is allowed to deduct from income—for tax purposes—up to $3000 to help pay for room and board and similar expenses while in Washington.

MEXICO BALANCES BOOKS ABROAD BY DEVALUING PESO

MEXICO CITY, June 25 (UP) —Mexico's gamble last year in devaluating its currency has paid off. The peso was cut in value from 8.65 to 12.50 to the United States dollar.

Official estimates of the Bank of Mexico showed the country earned $47,614,000 in international payments credit during the first quarter of this year. In 1954, the deficit for the same period was $5,450,000.

The central bank reports the present upward trend is continuing.

Mexico, however, still has not been able to cope with the domestic consequences of devaluation.

Increases in food and commodity prices have far outstripped wage hikes.

Economy ministry statistics, using 1939 as the base year with 100, reported that the average cost of living for a worker in Mexico City rose from 449 in April to 522.8 this March.

The Government is now wondering how to solve the steadily increasing inflationary trend.

16 NEW FACULTY MEMBERS NAMED AT WASHINGTON U.

Two Associate Professors Included in List Announced by Chancellor Shepley.

Appointment of 16 new members of the faculty at Washington University was announced yesterday by Chancellor Ethan A. H. Shepley.

They include William Allen Andrews, who will be an associate professor in the department of civil engineering, and Ernest Allen Connally, associate professor in the School of Architecture.

Six new assistant professors and departments to which they were assigned are: Jacob K. Goldhaber and Louis A. Kokoris, both in the department of mathematics; John H. Kautsky, department of political science; Louis M. Smith, department of education; James M. Vanderplas, department of psychology, and Tung-Yue Wang, department of botany.

Appointed assistant professors in the School of Engineering were Jerome R. Cox, department of electrical engineering, and Miguel B. Escoto, department of engineering drawing. John H. Manhold Jr. was named assistant professor of oral pathology in the School of Dentistry, and John D. Powell Jr. assistant professor of military science and tactics.

Stanley D. Tasker, instructor and gallery director at Rollins College since 1951, joined the faculty as instructor in the School of Fine Arts. In the School of Architecture, Herbert P. Cummings has been named critic in freehand drawing; Joseph R. Passonneau, design critic, and Richard D. Windisch, visiting critic.

Taught Here Previously.

Andrews, assistant professor at the University of North Carolina for the last year, received a bachelor's degree in architectural engineering from Washington University and was instructor in civil engineering here from 1947 to 1954. Connally, who received a master's and Ph. D. degrees in fine arts from Harvard University, taught for the last three years at Miami University in Oxford, O.

Goldharber is a graduate of Brooklyn College, Harvard University and the University of Wisconsin, and Kokoris holds degrees from the University of Chicago. Kautsky comes to Washington University from the University of Rochester.

Smith, who formerly taught and did research at the University of Minnesota, has been a psychologist with the St. Paul, Minn., public school system. Vanderplas has been instructor in psychology at Wittenberg College, Springfield, O., for the last two years. Wang has been a research fellow at Jewish Hospital since 1951.

With Commercial Firms.

Cox has served as an engineer with commercial firms. Escoto, a faculty member at Washington University from 1953 to 1954 last year did graduate work in structural engineering at Iowa State College.

Manhold has taught at Tufts College of Medicine and Dentistry. Powell, a first lieutenant in the Army, was graduated from Howard College. Tasker holds degrees from the Art Institute of Chicago and studied at the Royal Institute of British Architecture.

Cummings has degrees from Washington and Indiana Universities. Passonneau, a practicing architect in Knoxville, Tenn., served as chief of design with the Tennessee Valley Authority. Windisch, a German, practiced architecture in Honolulu.

58 FREE NATIONS JOINING IN SURVEY OF HISTORY BOOKS

NEW YORK, June 25 (UP)—The first international survey of history textbooks has been launched throughout the free world with the help of educators in 58 countries outside the Iron Curtain, the National Education Association said today.

Dr. Howard E. Wilson, secretary of the association's educational policies commission, said the survey is being sponsored by the World Brotherhood Organization, formed in 1950 to reduce national, religious and cultural frictions.

"This study seeks to determine how well history textbooks, used in the elementary and secondary schools, are fostering wholesome intergroup relations," Wilson said. "It is designed with the aim of ultimately improving the history textbooks used in the classrooms around the world."

Questionnaires have been sent to leading educators in 58 countries and preliminary findings will be analyzed at the Commission on Educational Organization's meeting in Brussels, Belgium, beginning July 11.

AWARDED SCCHOLARSHIP

Sylvester Sterioff Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. Sylvester Sterioff of 6731 Dolan place, has been awarded a full-tuition scholarship to Harvard University, it was announced yesterday.

Sterioff, 17 years old, was first in a graduating class of 225 at Southwest High School. He was president of the all-city student council from September 1954 to January 1955 and won varsity letters in football and baseball. He was the recipient of the Bausch and Lomb honorary science award for the highest average in scientific subjects over his high school career.

BUS UNION REJECTS MEDIATION NOMINEES

Refuses to Select One of Five Named by State for P.S. Co. Panel.

Union employes of the Public Service Co. rejected yesterday a list of five names submitted by the State Board of Mediation for selection of a public member to complete a three-member panel to conduct a fact finding hearing in contractual negotiations.

In a letter to Daniel C. Rogers, chairman of the mediation board, A. E. East, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees, Division 788, said that Malcolm Bartley, union representative on the panel, had been instructed by the union to refuse to strike names from the submitted list. O. W. Rexford is the company representative on the panel.

"We must insist that such list be withdrawn," East wrote, "and be replaced with one containing the names of individuals who have experience in transit arbitration and fact-finding and who have no association as owners of businesses or representatives of management."

Names submitted by the mediation board from which to pick the public member were Forrest M. Hemker, William W. Crowdus, David L. Millar and Sidney B. McClanahan, all attorneys, and the Rev. Leo F. Brown S.J., of St. Louis University, who has frequently mediated in labor-management disputes.

In its letter of rejection, the union said that Father Brown was both experienced and unbiased but recalled that the company had rejected him in 1947 when the union proposed him as a neutral arbitrator. The union said it "assumed" he still would be unacceptable to the company.

"What would then remain," it was stated, "is a group of four local attorneys, all of whom are undoubtedly able, honest men, but not one of them has had, so far as we have been able to ascertain, any experience as a neutral arbitrator or a public panel member in a fact-finding proceeding in the transit industry or elsewhere."

The wage dispute between the union and the company was referred to the State Board of Mediation about 10 days ago after union operating and maintenance employes rejected a company wage offer by a vote of 1169 to 541.

The offer called for an increase of 8 cents an hour, with 5 cents retroactive to March 3 and 3 cents beginning Jan. 1. An additional paid holiday, for a total of six, also was provided under a proposed agreement which would run for a year.

Previously, the union indicated that it was demanding, in general, a 17-cent hourly increase. Present pay scales are $1.72 and $1.87 an hour for bus and street car operators and $1.72 to $2.12 for mechanics.

Pidgeon Finds His Parakeet.

186 AUSTRIANS RETURN FROM SOVIET PRISONS

They Give Names of Six From U.S. Who Are Held in Russian Labor Camps.

WIENER NEUSTADT, Austria, June 25 (AP)—A haggard group of 186 Austrians returned from long Soviet imprisonment today and told of 16 Americans held in Russian labor camps.

They were able to give the names of only six of the Americans, some of them apparently foreign-born.

The returning Austrians said one of the Americans, Sidney Ray Sparks of Tennille, Ga., asked them with tears in his eyes to inform United States authorities that he is being held at Camp Potma in eastern European Russia. He also asked that his mother in Tennille be informed that he is alive.

Arrested In Berlin.

The Austrians said Sparks told them he was arrested by the Soviets in Berlin in 1951. They said the 23-year-old American is sick but still is forced to work in the woods by the Russians.

The United States Army European headquarters at Heidelberg, Germany, listed Sparks, a private, as absent without leave from the sixth infantry division in Berlin since Dec. 4, 1951.

A United States Army spokesman in Berlin said Sparks had escaped with two other privates from a West Berlin guardhouse. Three days after the escape East German Communist authorities said the three had sought political asylum.

The two men who escaped with Sparks were identified as Ray B. Schultz, Batavia, N. Y., and Charles J. Scott, Decatur, Ill. Schultz returned from East Germany in June 1952, was court-martialed, given a dishonorable discharge and sentenced to five years' imprisonment. Scott has not been heard from since his flight.

The Austrians gave the names and stories of the five other Americans as follows:

1. Murray Feingersch (or Finegage) of Brooklyn, N. Y., arrested by the Czechoslovak Communists after involuntarily crossing the border in 1949. His name was reported also by another group of prisoners who arrived here last Monday.

Seen Near Moscow.

2. Master Sgt. Robert Kumith, last seen at Camp Vladimir near Moscow. The Austrians said he told them he was arrested by the Soviets in 1948 when he visited a girl friend in Austria's Soviet zone.

3. Rudolf von Schwab, arrested in Vienna in 1949 on charges of being a member of the United States Counter-Intelligence Corps. The Austrians said Schwab showed marks of numerous beatings.

4. Col. Rudolf Cerny, last seen at Camp Vorkuta on the Arctic coast. He said he worked as a United States agent in Nazi Germany and was arrested by the Russians at war's end.

5. Rudolf Kissus. The Austrians knew nothing about him but his name.

United States Army headquarters said it had no information on any of the latter five.

The returnees also gave the names of 50 Britons and two French citizens, one a girl, held by the Soviets.

The 186 Austrians who arrived at this Soviet zone town included 45 women. Four of them were completely paralyzed. Three walked on crutches.

The Austrians were amnestied following conclusion of the Austrian state treaty.

The Soviets said only 73 Austrian "war criminals" now remained in Russia, but the returnees claimed there are at least several hundred still there.

Today's group included Dr. Margarethe Ottilinger, who held a high position in the Austrian government. She was seized by the Russians in November 1948, charged with spying and sentenced to 25 years in prison.

DEATH OF LEO J. VOGLER, OWNED ICE AND FUEL FIRM

Leo J. Vogler, of 2511 West Dodier street, died yesterday of heart disease at the Missouri Pacific Hospital. He was 68 years old.

Mr. Vogler was the proprietor of the Leo J. Vogler Ice and Fuel Co. in north St. Louis for 25 years. From 1943 until his death, he worked as a clerk at the Terminal Railroad Association.

Surviving are his wife, Cacelia; two sons, Vincent L. and Leo H.; two daughters, Mrs. John Rubbelke and Mrs. Arthur Sanders; nine grandchildren; one great-grandchild; and four brothers. Funeral services will be 9 a.m. Tuesday at St. Augustine's Church, Hebert and Lismore streets. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

TRIBUTE TO DR. G. A. MELLIES

Dr. George A. Mellies, former president of the Christian Hospital medical staff, was honored yesterday by friends, former patients and medical associates at a reception marking his eighty-first birthday.

Dr. Mellies, who recently completed his sixtieth year of practice, received dozens of congratulatory messages, including one from President Eisenhower. The reception was held at his home, 2917 St. Louis avenue.

PERSISTENT GAIN IN BUSINESS SHOWS RISING ECONOMY

that it installed more than 200 units before the hot weather began. More and more homes are being air-conditioned throughout.

Meanwhile, industrial use of electricity has been mounting, too. Few industries in the St. Louis area failed to show an increase in electric prower consumption this spring.

Union Electric is adding a third generating unit at its Meramec plant. Its construction program calls for outlays of $37,200,000 this year; $37,400,000 in 1956; $50,500,000 in 1957; $52,000,000 in 1958; $54,900,000 in 1959.

One of the most encouraging economic signposts is the persistent improvement by the majority of the durable goods industries. Production by the heavy steel industry on the East Side has soared. Employment in the automobile industry has increased by 4800 in the last year.

Non-ferrous foundries, down for some time, are now operating on a five-day week with some overtime.

An exception is the ordnance industry, which has been curtailing employment through gradual cutbacks at the St. Louis Ordnance Plar.. However, more than $5,000,000 is being spent on rehabilitation of buildings and construction of new facilities there.

Industrial Expansion Plans.

Plans for industrial expansion, housing and public works indicate a high level of construction here for many months to come. The $110,639,000 bond issue program authorized by the voters of St. Louis in May soon will get under way. The Chamber of Commerce surveyed outlays for industrial and commercial expansion in the first quarter of 1955 and came up with a total of $90,000,000. Of the 64 firms listed, 17 were newcomers.

Construction contracts let in the metropolitan area during the first five months of 1955 amounted to $184,855,000. F. W. Dodge reports. This is a 31 per cent gain over last year. Nonresidential building is up 47 per cent; residential construction, 24 per cent.

More than 100,000 houses have been put up in the St. Louis area since the war ended, but the demand continues strong, with homes in new subdivisions being sold before they are built. Builders expect to lay foundations for about 7000 houses this year, equivalent to last year's starts; 1955 would be an even bigger year had it not been for the recent strike by truck drivers and laborers employed by building material firms.

Department Store Sales.

Dollar volume of department store sales for the first five months of 1955 is 6 per cent above the level for the corresponding period of 1954. The biggest gains have been made in the field of major appliances.

Nationally, appliance sales are up 33 per cent, but the gain in the St. Louis area is a whopping 81 per cent. Residential building stimulates sale of appliances, and the absence of so-called "fair trade" laws helps, too, but some believe the most important factor is the determination of department stores to meet the prices of discount houses.

Discount firms are reluctant to give out figures, but one of the leading operators in St. Louis told the Post-Dispatch his business, so far from being hurt, is "better than ever," and to handle the increased volume he is adding 40,000 square feet of floor space for display.

Famous-Barr Co. has begun interviewing applicants for jobs in its new Northland store, which will have a staff of more than 1000. Fifty smaller stores in this $12,000,000 shopping center in Jennings will employ an additional 600 or 700.

Stix, Baer & Fuller Co. has started training a staff of 600 for its new store in Richmond Heights. This Westroads shopping center is a $6,250,000 project.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., F. W. Woolworth and Kroger are all building stores in the Crestwood Plaza shopping center. Hampton Village and the St. Ann shopping center are expanding. Work has started on a $10,000,000 shopping center in East St. Louis.

Off Surplus Labor List.

The strong upward trend in employment has led the United States Department of Labor to remove the St. Louis area from the list of districts which have such large surpluses of labor that they merit special consideration in awarding defense contracts. But this special rating never meant a great deal here, anyway.

The Air Force has ordered more jet fighter planes from McDonnell Aircraft Corp., and the company has started hiring 1000 additional engineers. Experienced aircraft workers are scarce, however. So are stenographers, skilled foundry workers and certain categories of machine shop craftsmen.

No labor shortage is anticipated here, but a diminishing number of skilled workers is evident. It is anticipated that jobs for an additional 7500 to 9000 workers will develop in the next two to four months. Labor turnover continues at a low rate.

There has been a marked improvement in furniture and in the stone, clay and glass industry. New orders have been received for roofing, siding, asbestos shingles and glass beer bottles. Job machine and die shops, recently limping along have pirked up and now are hiring qualified men.

Production of tin foil is at an unprecedented high level. Wire rope manufacture is on the upgrade after a prolonged slump. Pharmaceutical firms are doing a good business. Rexall Drug Co. is moving its Boston manufacturing to St. Louis in a $1,465,000 expansion which will provide 150 to 200 new jobs here.

Food Production Improving.

Food production is on the upswing. Commercial fertilizer firms are doing better. Agriculture reports an improved outlook because precipitation is more nearly normal.

There are some "soft spots," however, which is natural in an economy as diversified as the St. Louis structure. The business done by specialty shops has not improved as much as it has in larger stores. Foundries, except those doing work for the automobile industry, have been slow. There is a continuing lag in demand for automatic screw machine products.

Some companies in the electrical industry have resorted to small layoffs. There is uncertainty in the stove industry, with some firms reporting very slack conditions. There has been a slight increase in factory jobs for women, but specifications are restrictive.

College graduates and high school graduates with special skills have little trouble in finding jobs, but the outlook for vacation workers is very bad. The market for short-term employment has been flooded, and summer jobs are scarce.

All New First Quality Silent Cushion Tires... Proudly Branded

ALLSTATE

they're TUBELESS!

ALLSTATE Wide, Flat Tread—Really Digs In for Braking Power—Even on Slick Pavement!

Engineered to conquer dangerous skids—that's the siping story of the new wide ALLSTATE tread! ALLSTATE Silent Cushion tires grip the road with thousands of independent surfaces—fight skids in all directions! Tough butyl rubber liner replaces the tube! In case of puncture this butyl shield closes together, slows down air escape to give you more time for controlled stop.

most NON-SKID SAFETY

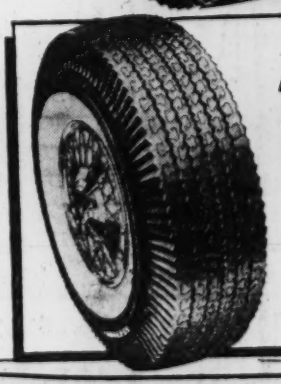

ALLSTATE Button Separators Hold Tread Ribs Apart—More Traction, Less Noise!

Fleet tests prove that this ALLSTATE tread gives up to 20% more skid protection than other nationally advertised first quality tires. You can actually see the safety built into ALLSTATE Silent Cushion tires. Button shaped separators are molded into the tire to hold tread ribs apart, even on sharp turns. These rubber buttons fight noisy rib vibrations, help give a greater silent grip on the road.

SEEKS RED VISA TO GET OUT OF 'LOUSY' U.S.; HELD

NEW YORK, June 25 (UP)—Police removed from the offices of the Soviet United Nations delegation yesterday a 41-year-old former G.I. who had demanded a passport to Russia to "get out of this lousy country."

The Soviet delegation had asked police to remove the man, identified as Alexander Betzios. He was taken to Bellevue for psychiatric examination.

When two police answered the call, Betzios told them that he was on "foreign soil" and they could not touch him. The patrolmen looked at the Soviet officials who told them to take him away.

Betzios said he was a member of the Communist party and that "Eisenhower and a lousy archbishop took all my money."

Police said he carried a 1945 army discharge which said he had served in the army for five years. He also carried American Labor Party literature and a picture of the late Soviet United Nations delegate Andrei Vishinsky. Mrs. Vishinsky and their daughter.

2 HURT IN FALL OF 75 FEET FROM M'KINLEY BRIDGE

Men Plunge Through Unprotected Opening When They Stop to Examine Tire.

Two men are in City Hospital with serious injuries suffered early yesterday when they plunged 75 feet through an unprotected opening on McKinley Bridge after getting out of their automobile to examine a tire.

The opening is between the center traffic lane, formerly used by streetcars, and the outer traffic lane.

Taken to the hospital with head and other injuries, were Raymond Linder, a carpenter, 4095 Concordia avenue, and Arthur O'Keefe, 5234 Blow street. Police said Linder, the driver, got out first and fell as he leaned over to look at the tires.

O'Keefe, who had followed Linder out of the machine, saw him disappear. A third man in the machine, Cleo Phillips, 3961 Westminster place, then started to leave the car. As O'Keefe started to warn Phillips about the hazard, O'Keefe lost his footing and plunged through. He landed alongside Linder, on railroad tracks on Hall street.

Phillips tried to flag a westbound machine to ask occupants to summon help. As he was doing this an eastbound automobile skidded into the car Linder had been driving, causing minor damage.

SECOND VICTIM OF DESERT JEEP TRIP FOUND DEAD

NEEDLES, Calif., June 25 (AP)—Second victim of a four-man jeep excursion on the Mojave desert was found dead today.

Calvert Wilson, 49 years old, was found on the northwest slope of Iron mountain, five miles from where he had set out for help after the jeep broke down Wednesday night.

A March Air Force Base helicopter yesterday saved Lyle W. Robertson, 49, and Chester R. Bunker, 67, who had stayed with the jeep in the 120-degree desert heat. James R. Thompson, 70, also there, was dead when help arrived.

Wilson was vice chairman of the Forty-second Assembly District Democratic County Committee and in 1953 was a candidate for the state assembly.

Just yesterday he was divorced from his wife, Elaine, of Burbank, by whom he had two daughters, Brenda Alice, 14, and Tamara Dawn, 11.

He and the other three men, all Sunfair businessmen, had traveled 112 miles over the desert Wednesday looking, out of curiosity, for a ghost town named Frieda. The jeep's differential broke down amid the sand dunes of Cadiz dry lake.

KOENIG SAID HE WOULD 'GET EVEN' OVER RACE WIRE

the distribution of large wagers among several gamblers instead of one, to limit the risk if the bettor should win.

After a time, Koenig, who reportedly had many friends and contacts throughout the United States, found that through these sources he could obtain race results at numerous tracks as soon as each race was completed.

This is vital information to bookmakers. Koenig found that the local gamblers were glad to pay for the service he could provide. Soon he had a clientele of about 30 bookies.

His income, after all expenses, including heavy telephone bills for long-distance calls, was about $400 a week. Koenig began to prosper. He acquired a Cadillac.

Then, in April, after about nine months of operation, he received a telephone call.

"We are taking over your service as of next Monday," the voice said.

Koenig knew who the caller was and what the man meant. The gangsters had moved in on him, and he had to get out. However, they promised to give him $150 to $200 a week.

Was Supposed to Get Job.

Koenig was to get some kind of a job with the hoodlum group and his East St. Louis apartment was to be used for bookmaking purposes, he told his friends. He stopped his racing news service, and waited. Nothing happened.

The $150 to $200 weekly payments never materialized. Koenig fumed in vain. As his financial condition worsened, he took his Cadillac back to the dealer and tried to cancel the deal.

He complained to many of his friends that he had gotten a "raw deal." His remark about going to "get even" reportedly was made in a St. Louis tavern.

A conference to consider law enforcement problems in St. Clair county has been called for tomorrow at 1 p.m. by State's Attorney Richard T. Carter. Particular attention will be given to the Koenig murder.

Invitations to the conference, to be held in Carter's office in Belleville, were sent to Phil M. Brown, superintendent of the Illinois State Highway Patrol; James Christensen, superintendent of the Illinois Bureau of Criminal Indentification, and Sheriff Leonard O. Reinhardt of St. Clair county.

Also invited were Wetzell Harness, chairman of the St. Clair County Board of Supervisors; Police Commissioner Russell T. Beebe of East St. Louis, Chief of Police Reese Dobson of Belleville and Maj. James Thompson, head of the St. Louis police gambling squad.

Wortman Being Sought.

Authorities have been seeking unsuccessfully to find Wortman to question him since Koenig's body was found.

Also sought are Havey and another associate in Koenig's racing news venture, Kenneth Mueller.

Havey and Mueller, who had an apartment above Koenig's, were the targets of assailants' bullets May 17. Their Cadillacs were riddled, but only Mueller was injured. His wounds were superficial.

Havey telephoned twice Friday to his attorney, John Hoban, and said he was not going to appear for questioning in Koenig's murder, the lawyer told the Post-Dispatch.

Hoban said that when he asked Havey why he had changed his mind, Havey replied: "I don't want my picture taken."

An inquest into Koenig's death has been set tentatively for tomorrow by Dr. C. C. Kane, St. Clair county coroner.

More than 200 persons attended funeral services for Koenig yesterday afternoon at Albert H. Hoppe undertaking establishment, 4911 Washington boulevard. Burial was in Friedens Cemetery.

Fire Destroys Stork Club.

A fire early yesterday destroyed an East Side roadhouse operated by William H. Welch, who had been questioned recently about his association with Havey and Mueller.

Welch blamed defective wiring for the blaze that swept through the Stork Club, one mile north of East St. Louis on U.S. Highway 67 about 3:30 o'clock yesterday morning when 100 customers were in the establishment.

The Stork Club, formerly known as the Torch Club, reportedly was owned a number of years ago by Wortman. Welch said Wortman has no interest in the roadhouse now.

Welch told the Post-Dispatch he was a "business acquaintance" of Havey but does not know Mueller. He said he took Havey occasionally to wholesalers to make purchases. The police, he said, had questioned him because he and Havey had been in an automobile together several times.

Tells of Smelling Smoke.

In describing the fire, Welch said he smelled smoke about 1:30 or 1:45 a.m., during a floor show at the Stork Club. About an hour later, he continued, he discovered wires burning in an alcove in the attic.

Flames suddenly burst out, while efforts were being made to extinguish the blazing wires, and the fire quickly spread through the two-story building, Welch said. Only parts of the concrete-block walls of the first floor were left standing.

The loss was estimated by Welch at $25,000 to $30,000, including the building, which he said he does not own. He said the alcove, in which the fire started, was used for storage of such items as paper plates.

The Torch Club figured in the investigation by the Senate Crime Committee in 1951, due to its owership by Wortman, who is East Side representative of the Capone Syndicate. A dice game there was raided in February, 1951, on orders of former Sheriff Max Hill. The following September four men suspected of thefts in nine Illinois counties, in which loot valued at $75,000 was taken, were arrested there. The club was closed following those arrests.

Runaway, 8, Arrested as Thief.

WASHINGTON, June 25 (UP)—An 8-year-old runaway from school had been sleeping in cars and basements, subsisting on whatever fare he could find. He was arrested on charges of purse-snatching. Police said he "never had a chance to get a proper start."

STUCK WITH ROAD GRADER SHE LET MAN PARK IN YARD

OMAHA, Nebr., June 25 (AP) —Mrs. Della Pearson permitted a "nice man, tall, slim" to park a road grader in her back yard because "it seemed only the neighborly thing to do."

The man asked for overnight parking. Now it's seven weeks later and the "monster," as Mrs. Pearson calls it, is still there. She can't find out who owns it.

Mrs. Pearson says she has called every contractor "I can think of. When I ask them if they lost a road grader they laugh. Then they tell me to quit kidding. What do you suppose the parking fee for road graders is?"

WISCONSIN G.O.P. REQUESTS EISENHOWER TO RUN AGAIN

RIPON, Wis., June 25 (AP)— Wisconsin Republicans asked President Eisenhower today to seek a second term.

The action was by voice vote of the 2000 delegates to the state convention in adopting a resolution praising the President and requesting him to run again. No dissents were heard.

The delegates also adopted by voice vote, with a few dissenters being heard, a resolution praising Senator Joseph R. McCarthy of Wisconsin for "his continued unrelenting patriotic efforts to purge the United States of Communism and subversive elements."

McCarthy has apologized publicly for supporting Mr. Eisenhower in 1952.

Week's Votes By Illinoisans, Missourians

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 25—Following are recorded votes of Missouri and southern Illinois members of Congress on important measures in the last week:

SENATE

On an amendment offered by Senator Stuart Symington (Dem.), Missouri, to the defense appropriation bill, increasing funds for the Marine Corps by $46,394,390 to keep the Corps at 215,000 men, instead or reducing it to 193,000 men. Passed, 40 to 39: Missouri: Yea—Hennings and Symington (Dems.); Illinois: Yea—Douglas (Dem.), absent on official business—Dirksen (Rep.).

On a resolution offered by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (Rep.), Wisconsin, to urge the forthcoming "summit" conference of heads of state to consider freeing Communist satellite nations in eastern Europe. Defeated, 77 to 4: Missouri: Nay — Hennings and Symington (Dems.); Illinois: Nay—Douglas (Dem.), absent on official business—Dirksen (Rep.).

HOUSE

On bill to give a 7½ per cent pay increase to more than 1,000,000 federal employes. Passed, 370 to 3: Missouri: Yea—Karsten, Mrs. Sullivan, Bolling, Cannon, Carnahan, Christopher, Hull, Jones and Moulder (Dems.), and Short (Rep.). Paired for the bill—Curtis (Rep.); Southern Illinois: Yea—Price, Mack and Gray (Dems.) and Simpson and Springer (Reps.). Nay—Vursell (Rep.).

On bill to authorize the Trinity river division of the central valley reclamation project in California, at a cost of $225,000,000. Passed, 230 to 153: Missouri: Yea—Karsten, Mrs. Sullivan, Bolling, Carnahan, Christopher and Hull (Dems.) and Short (Rep.). Nay—Cannon and Jones (Dems.) and Curtis (Rep.). General pair — Moulder (Dem.); Southern Illinois: Yea — Price, Mack and Gray (Dems.). Nay—Simpson, Springer and Vursell (Reps.).

On resolution declaring that the United States, in its international relations, should maintain its traditional policy against colonialism and Communist imperialism. Passed, 367 to 0: Missouri: Yea—Karsten, Mrs. Sullivan, Bolling, Cannon, Carnahan, Christopher, Hull, Jones and Moulder (Dems.) and Curtis and Short (Reps.); Southern Illinois: Yea—Price and Mack (Dems.) and Simpson and Springer (Reps.). General pairs — Gray (Dem.) and Vursell (Rep.).

WEST POINT GRADUATE'S FIANCEE PLUNGES TO DEATH

CHICAGO, June 23 (UP)—The 21-year-old fiancee of a June West Point graduate plunged to her death from the eighth floor of a downtown office building last night after telling him over the phone: "Regardless of what happens, I still love you."

The graduate, Lt. Forrest T. Gay, 21 years old, of Chicago, revealed the telephone conversation to police early today. He said his bride-to-be, Miss Dorothy May Wells, of St. Petersburg, Fla., had promised, at his urging, to take a bus to the stop near his home and meet him. He never heard from her again. His next call came from police.

Miss Wells, a schoolmate of the young officer since fifth grade in St. Petersburg where the Gays formerly lived, was staying at the home of her fiance's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest T. Gay Jr.

ACCIDENTALLY KILLS SELF DURING BRAWL

Man Shot When Pistol Is Discharged as He Uses It as Club.

An attempt to strike another man with a pistol in a fight outside a restaurant resulted in the death early yesterday of Robert G. Cochrum, a window washer, who was shot in the chest when the weapon was accidentally discharged.

Police, called at 3:50 a.m., found Cochrum in a crouched position on the sidewalk in front of 3853 Olive street. When officers placed him on a stretcher, a .25-caliber pistol fell from his hand. He was pronounced dead at City Hospital.

Witnesses said Cochrum, who was 27 years old and lived at 511A North Spring avenue, became angry when Hubert Wilson, an assembler, 3856A Olive street, patted him on the back as Cochrum sat at the counter in the L. & L. Grill, 3851 Olive street.

"Don't punch so hard," Cochrum is reported to have admonished Wilson, who replied, "I just patted your back."

In an ensuing argument Cochrum was reported to have invited Wilson "outside," remarking, 'if you want to punch, I've got something to punch with."

The witnesses reported they saw Cochrum holding the small pistol in his hand and trying to punch Wilson with it. As he sparred, seeking to get in a blow, the pistol was discharged and he crumpled to the sidewalk.

Cochrum's father, Leslie, identified the pistol, which he said was taken from his tavern, 3856 Olive street, without his knowledge. Wilson, who police said had been drinking, was detained as a witness.

E. ST. LOUIS WOMAN KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Passenger in Her Car Hurt, Other Driver Escapes Injury.

Mrs. Katherine Maule, bookkeeper at the Terrace Lounge, 127 Collinsville avenue, East St. Louis, was killed yesterday when an automobile she was driving collided with another and crashed on U.S. Highway 66 one mile east of Illinois Route 111.

Illinois state police said the other car was driven by Leroy E. Loeffler, of the 1000 block of South Eleventh street, Belleville.

Mrs. Maule was 42 years old, and lived at 1409a St. Louis avenue, East St. Louis. A passenger in the car with her, Elmer John Major, suffered minor injuries.

The Terrace Lounge, owned by Frank (Buster) Wortman, notorious gangster, was the scene of shooting early Friday morning, when seven shots were fired through the entrance. Wortman has been sought by police for questioning about the murder of J. Fred Koenig.

Loeffler told state police he was trying to pass another auto when his machine collided with that of Mrs. Maule and hers was forced off the highway.

He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital at Alton with injuries described as minor. His wife and their three children also were injured, not seriously.

FLORIDA GULF COAST AREA GROWS RAPIDLY

An amazing interest in summer travel in Florida has, in the past two years, converted the "winter playground" into a summer sanctuary, with, if anything, more vacationers taking the trip south. Most summer visitors concentrate in the extreme northern and southern portions of the state but they are beginning to spread into all corners.

Up along the northwest Gulf coast, a relatively new resort area is springing up on the fringes of U.S. Highway 98. This road hugs the coast from Pensacola eastward for over 200 miles before it turns north to the state capital at Tallahasse. Principal areas for vacationers are at Pensacola, Fort Walton Beach and Panama City. However, there are a number of smaller towns along the route that are building resort type accommodations and promoting their excellent beaches. The outstanding facets of this coast are the fishing, the clear blue waters, and the remarkable white sand beaches, stretching for miles without habitation away from the resort centers.

Pensacola is a city steeped in history. It was one of the early Spanish outposts in the New World and preserves many monuments to its past. A short trip across Pensacola Bay to Santa Rosa Island, and the motorist can find a modern beach development with the best of accommodations.

Fort Walton Beach is a smaller town with a strictly modern flavor. The fishing in the Gulf and nearby Choctawhatchee Bay is superb through the summer and the Fort Waltonions claim the whitest beaches and the clearest water to be found in America. Destin Inlet, six miles east, is the embarkation point for a sizeable sport fishing fleet and the area Chamber of Commerce sponsors a well-attended tournament each summer.

CASTLE-CONSCIOUS

If you're the castle-conscious type of tourist, be sure to visit Wales. On the southern part of the British Isles, it boasts 100 historic old castles.

Here, too, you'll find cities with colorful names — Llangollen, in Denbighshire, Llandudno, Bettys-y-Coed, in Caernarvonshire, Llandudno, Llanfairfechan and Penmaenmawr. Fishing is particularly good in the streams of Vyrnwy and Clywedog.

One of the World's Wonders

—Ontario Dept. of Travel.

MICHIGAN PAGEANT IN JULY TO HONOR PERE MARQUETTE

Pere Jacques Marquette, explorer of the Mississippi river and missionary to the Indians, will be honored this summer at Ludington, Michigan with an historically accurate pageant based upon his life.

The pageant will be given for six evenings, July 18-23, as a feature of the centennial celebration of Mason county.

The pageant will be sponsored by Pere Marquette Memorial Association, the purpose of which is to commemorate the accomplishments of the explorer-priest by establishment of a shrine in his memory. The shrine is now nearing completion, and is expected to be ready for dedication this summer. It is located on a bluff just south of Ludington and marks the site of Marquette's death.

ORANGE BOWL ADDITION

MIAMI, Fla.—Construction is underway on a 10,000 seat addition to Miami's Orange Bowl football stadium. The addition will bring the stadium's seating capacity to 75,000. Completion is expected in time for the University of Miami's game with Notre Dame, Oct. 7.

Original seating capacity of the bowl, which was built in 1937, was 22,000.

INEXPENSIVE HOTELS AVAILABLE IN SPAIN

By WILLIAM H. STONEMAN
Chicago Daily News Foreign Service

GREDOS, Spain — Spain has always been a tourists' paradise — crowded with magnificent monuments of the past, warm, sunny and hospitable.

In the old days only a lack of fast transportation and a shortage of good, clean hotels in the provincial cities prevented it from being practically perfect.

Today, thanks to a rapidly extending network of first-rate roads and a series of dependable air lines the transportation problem is just about beaten. If you bring your own car or can afford to hire one it is no problem at all.

But the most amazing achievement of the last 30 years has been the establishment of the "paradors" — fine, clean, well-run, and inexpensive government hotels which are now established in 11 different parts of the Spanish mainland with another three in the Canary islands.

Most of the paradors has been created by taking a rare old building and modernizing it completely without disturbing its original architecture. The restoration work has been accomplished with discrimination and a skill which is a tribute to both Spanish architects and workmen.

ACADIAN BICENTENARY EVENT AT CARAQUET

A pageant commemorating the 200th anniversary of the expulsion of the Acadians will be held in the Caraquet area of New Brunswick, Canada, during Independence day weekend.

A colorful annual ceremony of the Blessing of the Fleet is scheduled for July 3. On the same date a parade of gaily decorated fishing craft will celebrate the bicentenary of the founding of the village of Caraquet.

That evening the scene will shift to nearby Ste. Anne du Bocage, where a play will depict the arrival of Caraquet's founders two centuries ago. A pontifical mass will follow. Immediately after the mass a visit will be made to the grave of Alexis Landry, one of the few known last resting places of Acadians expelled from Grand Pre in 1755.

LINCOLN SHRINES

Springfield, Illinois, the state's capital, is preparing to entertain a large number of tourists and vacationers on summer weekends, and especially over the Fourth of July.

Each year, thousands of visitors from all over the world visit the famous Lincoln Shrines, the Lincoln Home and Tomb. In 1954 471,438 persons registered at the Lincoln Tomb alone. The group of Capitol buildings, including the Centennial building, the Supreme Court building, the Archives and State Armory also come in for their share of tourists and visitors.

Rodeo at Camdenton, Mo., Scheduled for July 5-10

Annual Event Is Major Summer Attraction in Lake of Ozarks Region.

The major summer event of the Lake of the Ozarks region is scheduled for July 5 through July 10, when the fourth annual world-championship rodeo will be held at Camdenton, Mo.

Missouri's Governor Phil M. Donnelly is expected to appear at the closing performance on Sunday, July 10, when he will award the Governor's Trophy Saddle to the all-around champion of the Camdenton event.

The rodeo, which will be held at the J Bar H Rodeo arena, has become a vacation highlight for thousands of midwesterners. Camdenton, located on Missouri State Roads 54 and 5, about 65 miles southwest of Jefferson City, is within one day's travel time of a number of large cities.

The $100,000 arena is only a few miles from some of the best fishing water in the United States, and the rodeo gives many vacationers entertainment at night after a day of fishing, boating, swimming or other water sports.

Although the rodeo doesn't get underway until July 5, with performances July 5 through July 9 at 8:00 p.m. and the closing performance on Sunday beginning at 5:30 p.m., Rodeo week will be kicked off the night of July 4 when Red Foley presents his Ozark Jubilee in the big rodeo arena.

The annual Camdenton event has set attendance records each year since its start in 1952, with more than 53,000 persons attending in 1954. This year 1500 extra seats have been added to accommodate the anticipated crowds.

Always popular with the top cowboys of the United States, this season it is attracting one of the best lineups of contestants in the long history of the American sport. Heading the long list is Buck Rutherford, who won the world's all-around champion title in 1954. Champions of the various events last year who are expected to be present are Eddy Akridge, bareback bronc champion in 1954; Casey Tibbs, saddle bronc; Don McLaughlin, calf roping; Jim Shoulders, bull riding, and James Bynum, steer wrestling.

The rodeo offers several new events this year. These include a $1000 winner-take-all matched saddle bronc riding contest. The riders in this special match will be Rutherford, Tibbs, Bill Linderman (1953 all-around champion), Gene Pruett, Ken Roberts and Jack Buschbom. Three horses will be bucked in this special match at each performance.

Another "extra" this year will be the Wild Brahma Cow Milking—rodeo's most hilarious contest event. The cowboys work in teams of two, with a narrow-necked soft drink bottle for a milk pail.

A Cooling Plunge

Frozen in flight by the camera shutter, these jack-knifing divers make a dramatic entrance into a forest-fringed lake in the heart of the Northern Great Lakes area. Summer vacationers in Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Ontario can choose their favorite fresh water swimming sites from among the five Great Lakes, or thousands of cool blue inland lakes.

'TRAILWAY TOURS' THROUGH MINNESOTA

How many times have you tried to get off the beaten path, only to wind up on the boulevard of familiar places? If it's vacation adventure you're after, you may find it in a tour of Minnesota trailways.

What better way to get off the beaten path than to head for water? Canoe trails in the Superior National Forest will take you through a lovely, lake-filled wilderness, unchanged since the first Indian paddled along the quiet waters.

This "Canoe Country" experience can be just as remote and rugged as you want to make it. Canoe outfitters at Ely, Grand Marais and Crane Lake will provide food, gear and maps to mark the routes, portages, campsites and good fishing holes. Fishing can be more than a passing interest for those who like shore dinners that feature northern pike, walleye, bass or lake trout.

Of course, you also can walk away from civilization and take an obscure foot trail through the Norway pines, or follow an Indian path blazed by belligerent Chippewa-Sioux war parties many years ago. Seven of Minnesota's state parks have marked footpaths. Hikers can pick up a map at the park office and be on their way to a self-guiding tour of Northland nature.

For those who like to explore remote routes with little effort, there are car trails that carry you deep into primeval territory. The Echo Trail (Ely to Buyck, 50 miles) and Gunflint Trail (Grand Marais to Lake Saganaga, 58 paved miles) wind into Superior National Forest. Tourists have described the auto experience as "the closest thing to canoeing by car."

Resorts are located at intervals along the trails and the Federal Forest Service maintains campgrounds with tables, fireplaces, tents and trailer sites.

National Tournament.
The national shuffleboard tournament is held on courts at Traverse City, Mich., in mid-July.

GREEN BAY CENTER OF FINE VACATION AREA IN WISCONSIN

It was 1634 when a bearded French explorer, Jean Nicolet, stepped ashore at Green Bay, Wis., from a birch-bark canoe. As a representative of the French government he was seeking a westward water route to the Orient. He failed in his assigned mission, but he did find the area which has become the center of one of Wisconsin's greatest recreational regions.

Located at the southern tip of Green Bay, the giant arm of Lake Michigan, the city of Green Bay is 200 miles north of Chicago and 275 miles east of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Within the city are 18 municipal parks, five of them comprised of land donated by John Jacob Astor and his American Fur Co. Historical points, including the oldest house in Wisconsin, attract many visitors.

A network of major highways, three railroads, airlines, and steamship lines facilitate transportation.

REVALUATION BY PARCEL IN COUNTY VOTED

District, and Frank L. Martini, Fifth District.

Contract for the reappraisal, to be carried out over a 30-month period, would go to Roy Wenzlick & Co. and Doane Agricultural Services, Inc., jointly. These firms had bid $954,000 for revaluation of land and improvements without time deadline, but the council committee said it had been able to whittle $99,000 off the bid by readajustments.

Two of the seven council members, Thomas Dunne, First District, and L. Gordon Davis, Seventh, were absent.

Harold D. Carey, Sixth District, in discussion before the vote, wanted to know where the money would come from. Committee members pointed out that budget reductions might have to be ordered in some offices to raise the $99,000 provided in the contract proposal for payment this year.

U.S. Reimbursement.

It was mentioned also that the county hoped to be reimbursed $75,000 from the Government this year for expenditures by the county in Tyson Valley Park, before it was taken back by the Government. Members said, too, that the state ultimately was expected to pay half the cost of the reassessment.

The committee report repeated the essence of earlier council assertions that a systematic piece-by-piece reappraisal "is the only fair and practical way to equalize the assessed value of property in St. Louis county.

"It might be that this task could have been accomplished in a more leisurely fashion if it had been started some years ago, but we are dealing with present remedies to a present problem.

"The employment of these two firms will prove conclusively to the State Tax Commission that we are taking practical steps to accomplish the announced objectives of the commission. It demonstrates our good faith.

Farm Land Values.

"The assessed values of farm land and urban property in the county will be brought up to 30 per cent of their true market value. There no longer will be the least doubt of that."

The report cited the finding reported by the State Tax Commission earlier this week that current valuations range from 2 to more than 100 per cent of market values, as evidence that a blanket increase at this time would be inequitable to many property owners.

County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews has said that any increase carried out this year would have to be a blanket increase.

Position of the state commission is that it has never ordered a blanket increase in assessments and that St. Louis county has had ample time since early this year to increase assessments equitably. The commission has reported that the overall ratio of assessed valuation to market value of real property in the county in 1954 was only 18.2 per cent.

The council committee's report said reduction in the contract amount from $954,000 to $855,000 was achieved by increasing the time to be allowed for the reappraisal to 30 months from 18 months, by conducting reappraisal of land and improvements simultaneously instead of separately, and by use of personnel volunteered by private firms for part of the work. About $24,000 of the $99,000 would be saved by use of the private-firm personnel, it was stated.

The report pointed out also that revaluations would go into the tax books as soon as the work was completed for an entire school district. Thus a substantial part of the reappraisal job will be reflected on the 1956 books and most of it on the 1957 books, the committee said.

Clarence M. Turley, past president of the St. Louis Real Estate Board and of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, was consulted by the committee in its study and he has concurred with the recommendations, the report said.

In selecting the Wenzlick-Doane bid from among six groups of bids, made in four categories and ranging from $62,500 to $1,119,000 depending on the category, the committee obtained advice from the Governmental Research Institute, a privately supported fact-finding agency, and from the County Counselor, the committee said.

JAMES V. JONES TO DIRECT ST. LOUIS U. LIBRARIES

James V. Jones, a member of the library staff of St. Louis University since 1950, has been appointed director of university libraries, it was announced yesterday. He succeeds the Rev. Joseph P. Donnelly S.J., who has been transferred to Creighton University in Omaha.

Jones, who will take charge of the largest library under Catholic auspices in America, was assistant director of the libraries until named to his new post.

Father Donnelly, who was also an associate professor of history at the university, joined the faculty in 1945, and had directed the libraries since 1946.

NAMED FOUNDATION OFFICER

Ron Kennedy, formerly associated with the Grain and Feed Dealers' National Association here and presently executive vice president of the Minneapolis Grain Exchange, has been named executive director of the American Heritage Foundation, New York, it was announced yesterday.

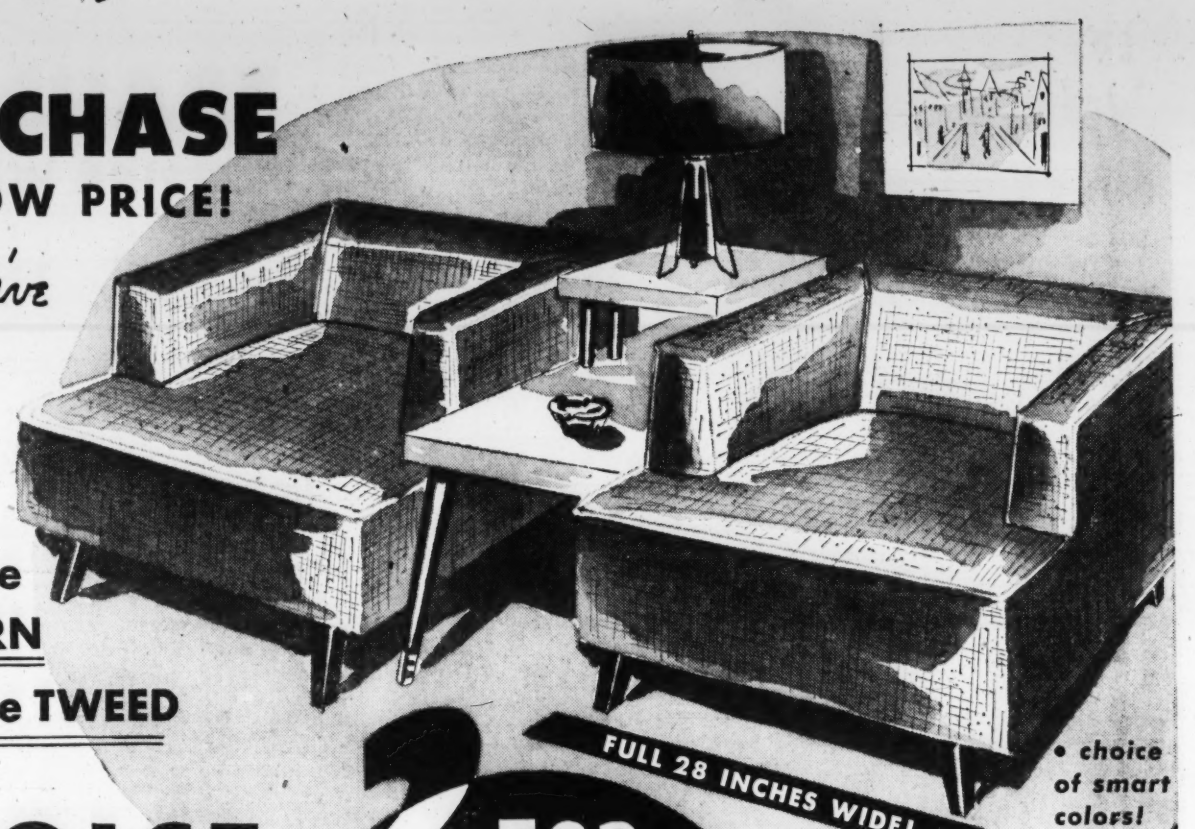

The foundation is a nonpartisan public service organization designed to encourage good citizenship. Kennedy, who was with the St. Louis organization immediately before and after World War II, will assume his new duties Sept. 1.

Amateur Archeologists Uncover Indian Dwelling on Meramec

Flint-Workshop and House Near Times Beach Were Apparently Occupied by People of 1000 and 1600 A.D.

Amateur archeologists of the St. Louis area have nearly completed excavation of a prehistoric Indian flint-workshop and house that had been buried for centuries on a low terrace above the Meramec river, on U.S. Highway 66 just east of Times Beach.

"Bits of pottery and other evidence indicate the site was occupied by Indians of the so-called Woodland period, roughly 1000 A.D., and later by Middle Mississippi peoples, who date as late as 1600 A.D.," Leonard W. Blake, vice president of the Missouri Archeological Society, said.

Pottery Is Different

Blake, who directed members of the Greater St. Louis Archaeological Society at the diggings, explained that pottery of the earlier Woodland culture is easily distinguishable from that of the Middle Mississippi, the period to which the Cahokia Indains belonged.

"Woodland potsherds were tempered with grit and marked by pressing a cord-wrapped paddle in the soft clay," he said. "The other pottery is smooth and tempered with crushed shell, and there is more variety in shapes."

While the Woodland Indians were hunters and gatherers, the Middle Mississippi people were great gardeners and growers of corn. Blake's party found bits of corn at the site. These have been turned over to the Missouri Botanical Garden for study.

Painstaking Labor.

By painstaking labor that began when snow was on the ground early this year and continued in the mud caused by last week's rain, diggers have turned up a variety of artifacts now being catalogued by James P. Solomon, secretary of the St. Louis society.

The artifacts include bone awls, a bone fish hook, two clay tobacco pipes, an arrowhead made with the tip of an antler, a long copper awl whose metal, Solomon said, must have come from Lake Superior, and a wealth of flint or chert projectile-points.

When everything has been written up, listed and studied, Blake said in checking over the site yesterday, the full report will be published in the Central States Archeological Journal. Artifacts will be returned to those who found them.

Blake said the Indian habitation whose main outlines were found, measuring about 13 by 22 feet, was the first he knew of in the Midwest to be excavated by amateurs. There is evidence of two other houses, all of the Middle Mississippi period, on a site covering less than an acre of ground.

Came For Flint.

Indians had been coming to the Meramec Valley area for thousands and thousands of years to get flint for arrowheads and other uses. "They'd rough it out here, so they wouldn't have to carry so much of the stone home," Blake said.

What an amateur archeologist finds is often a matter of luck. A 10-year-old boy came out to dig, and found a prized bone fish hook in no time at all. The hook made veteran excavators green with envy, and the boy became so enthusiastic he joined the Greater St. Louis Archeological Society on the spot.

RECORD-HOLDING PLANE OF 1935 TO SMITHSONIAN

MERIDIAN, Miss., June 25 (AP)—An "Ole Miss," a single-engined monoplane that proved 20 years ago it could outlast them all, will make its last flight next Saturday—a one-way trip to the Smithsonian Institute. It will be exhibited alongside such other famous airplanes as the Wright Brothers' crate and Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis."

"Ole Miss" received this honor for 27 days of continuous flight over Meridian which not only broke existing records but which still sands today. Nor is the record likely to be taken from the "Ole Miss" because in this jet age pilots are more interested in reducing time aloft.

During the 1500-mile trip to Washington, Pilot Fred Key will have plenty of time to remember how he and his brother, Al, brought fame to themselves and to Mississippi. He and Al, "the flying Keys," kept the Curtis Robin plane aloft for 653 hours and 34 minutes, beginning on June 4, 1935, using 6000 gallons of gasoline and 300 gallons of oil to fly 52,230 miles around Meridian's sky.

ARTHUR BAER AND SHEPLEY NAMED TRUSTEES OF KETC

Ethan A. H. Shepley, chancellor of Washington University, and Arthur B. Baer, president of Stix, Baer & Fuller, have been named to the board of trustees of the St. Louis Educational Television Commission, it was announced yesterday. The Commission supervises television Station KETC.

Philip J. Hickey, chairman of the commission, stated that the addition of Shepley to the board will mean that the heads of the city's two leading universities participate in policy formation.

The station itself is housed in studios donated by Baer.

50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Casimir J. Lewandowski, 4953 Wren avenue, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversay with a reception at 7 p.m. today at St. Adalbert's Catholic School Hall, 5701 Amelia avenue. The anniversary date is Tuesday.

Lewandokski, 74 years old, is an operating engineer for the St. Louis water division. His wife is 70. They have seven children, 29 grandchildren and nine great grandchildren.

MISS HENNOCK GIVEN FCC FAREWELL PARTY

Staff Members Give Her Illuminated Scroll as Token of Esteem.

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP) — Frieda B. Hennock cleared her desk for a departure from Government service today — "with no hard feelings" — and some unusual circumstances attended the event.

For one thing, tears flowed freely at a farewell party Thursday for the Federal Communications Commission's first and only woman member. The affair was arranged by FCC's rank-and-file workers, to whom Miss Hennock has always been "Frieda," and 900 showed up to say goodby.

Postmaster General Summerfield's reception rooms, adjacent to the commission offices, were borrowed for the occasion. When Miss Hennock heard about the party for her, she rushed out and bought a collection of watches, bracelets, earrings and ukeleles which she distributed as door prizes to her hosts.

She herself received an illuminated scroll which said simply: "Frieda B. Hennock, on the occasion of her leaving the Federal Communications Commission, as a token of our esteem and affection." It was signed by all of her fellow-commissioners and most of FCC's staff.

Miss Hennock, whose smart dress and penetrating cross-examination have enlivened many a commission hearing in the last seven years, wept openly. So did a great many others who stood in line for a goodby handshake.

Except for her thanks to "this wonderful staff," Miss Hennock decided against any farewell statement on her FCC career, marked frequently by dissent from majority opinions, and in the last two years by criticism of some commission policies.

President Eisenhower recently named Richard A. Mack, Florida Public Service Commissioner, a Democrat, to replace Miss Hennock at the end of her term next Friday, July 1.

Miss Hennock has not announced her future plans. However, it is reported that she will shortly become a member of one of Washington's largest law firms.

At one time New York State's youngest woman lawyer, she resigned a partnership in the New York City law firm of Choate, Mitchell and Ely to join the FCC.

MISSOURI RIVER WILL BE NEAR FLOOD STAGE

The Missouri river will rise to near flood stage at St. Charles, Booneville and Hermann this week, Meteorologist Harry F. Wahlgren predicted yesterday. He said heavy rains in northwest Missouri and adjacent areas will cause the rising river marks.

The Missouri river stage at St. Charles yesterday was 11 feet. By Wednesday it is expected to reach 22 feet, three feet below flood stage. At Boonville, 135 miles west of St. Louis, the reading yesterday was 9.8 feet, and is expected to rise to 19.3 feet by Monday. This will be 1.7 feet below flood stage. By Tuesday at Hermann, 65 miles west of St. Louis, the river is expected to be at 18 feet, three feet below flood stage and 10.5 feet higher than yesterday.

The reading on the Mississippi river at St. Louis yesterday was 6.3 feet. Wahlgren said it should reach 14.5 feet next Thursday, but it will be well below the flood stage of 30 feet.

OFFICER TACKLES ROBBER, RECOVERS $500,000 GEMS

NEW YORK, June 25 (UP)— Two men scooped up $500,000 in jewelry in a holdup today but a flying tackle by a policeman resulted in the capture of one of the robbers and recovery of the gems.

The gunmen entered a Madison avenue jewelry shop and held up Al Hartog. They stuffed the precious stones and jewelry into a bag and fled.

Patrolman Gerald Cantor heard Hartog call for help and saw the two men running away. He selected the man with the bag, gave pursuit and brought him down with a flying tackle. The prisoner was identified as Herman Gross, 59, of Brooklyn. His accomplice escaped.

UNITED FUND PICKS IT'S SLOGAN: 'ONE GIFT . . . FOR ALL'

A slogan and emblem have been adopted for the newly organized United Fund of Greater St. Louis, it was announced yesterday by Clark Hungerford, promotion chairman of the combined appeals campaign that will be held this fall.

"One gift . . . for all" was the slogan adopted for the organization. "We believe the slogan sums up the advantage to St. Louisans of the fund, for with a single pledge they will be able to support many different community causes," Hungerford explained.

The emblem for the group will be a torch, firmly gripped by a hand. A fund spokesman said that it was hoped the torch would become as familiar a symbol as the red feather of the Community Chest, which has been merged into the fund.

BRITISH LABORITE AGAINST GIVING REDS QUEMOY, MATSU

TAIPEI, Formosa, June 25 (AP) — John McGovern, Labor member of the British Parliament, said today that the Nationalist-held islands of Quemoy and Matsu on no account should be yielded to the Chinese Communists.

McGovern, here with a visiting Moral Rearmament group, said every bit of territory granted to the Communists served as an "assassin's jumping-off ground for an assualt on the next victim."

"My own view," he said in an interview, "has always been that the British and Americans should fully co-operate with the authorities in Formosa to maintain the present position and not surrender any territory to the mainland government."

SALE OF 30 TONS OF HEAVY WATER TO FRANCE IS OK'D

WASHINGTON, June 25 (UP) —The Atomic Energy Commission said today it would sell 30 tons of heavy water to France for use in two French nuclear research reactors.

Heavy water is used to slow down neutrons, subnuclear particles which trigger atomic fission; to the speed at which they work best in reactors. This country produces it in large quantities for its Savannah river (S.C.) atomic explosives plant.

The sale to France will be made during the years 1956-58.

The United States also has authorized sale of heavy water for research reactors to Australia, India, and Italy.

"The four actions are part of the President's atoms for peace program," the AEC said.

WEATHER SCARES EXPERT

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 25 (UP) — The weather frightened even the weather man here today. In a delayed routine report on temperature and humidity, the Weather Bureau said on its leased wire circuit to news agencies that a heavy thunderstorm was in progress with heavy rain.

It added: "The reason I'm late is the fire that has been jumping from key to key on this machine and I'm a coward."

Wind Demolishes State Garage.

HUNTSVILLE, Mo., June 25 (UP)—A windstorm demolished a State Highway Department garage here last night and disrupted power and telephone service. No casualties were reported. Huntsville, a town of 1500, is about five miles west of Moberly.

INDIAN RED CROSS ASKED TO ACT IN 5 P.O.W.S' RETURN

NEW DELHI, June 25 (UP)—The Indian Red Cross has been asked to handle the return from Red China of three former American soldiers and two Belgians who have decided to give up life under Communism, it was announced today.

Indian Red Cross authorities said the request was made by the Chinese Red Cross. They added they had informed Peiping they were willing to take up the matter but could not proceed without the consent of the United States Government.

Officials said no American reply to the request for permission to act as intermediary had been received up to this morning. On receipt of United States permission, they said, India will informa the Peiping government which will then hand over the five men to Indian authorities.

It was learned the five former Korean prisoners of war would be sent to Hong Kong where they will be handed over to an American representative.

The STRUGGLE for PEACE

Historian A. J. Toynbee Suggests New Locarno-Type Pacts to Ease Tensions in Europe and Far East

He Thinks Big Three and Russia Might Agree to Reunite Germany and Liberate the Satellites of Eastern Europe.

By ARNOLD J. TOYNBEE
Noted British Historian.

FOURTEENTH OF A SERIES.

Copyright, 1955, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.

LONDON, June 25.

IT is easier to make an opportunity than to use it. In the West, we believe that it is we who have made the present opportunity by re-arming; but, in saying even just this much aloud, we may be blunting the opportunity's edge. It might sound as if we were claiming to have scored a victory over an opponent, when the only victory that can win the struggle for peace is one in which both sides can take satisfaction.

In the West, we have rearmed as a precaution and as a deterrent. We wanted to make sure that we could hold our own if we were attacked, and we wanted to convince the Russians that aggressiveness does not pay. We seem to have convinced them.

Opportunities and Risks.

And now, what next? The rearmament that has brought the opportunity within our reach is not going to help us to seize this opportunity now that it is there. Opportunities can be seized only by taking risks. What are going to be the most promising risks to take? And, if we do take them, how far dare we go?

This problem is not ours only; it is the Russians' problem too. We and they are in the same boat. A recognition of our common plight might create the fellow feeling that is the seed of mutual confidence.

Peace is endangered so long as great powers are holding down smaller peoples for strategic reasons. Repressed satellites and repressed colonies are more dangerous than H-bombs, because they are detonators that can make the bombs explode.

One long step toward peace would have been taken if we could arrange for these repressed peoples to be liberated; and it is easy to demonstrate that a contented and therefore friendly people is better security for an apprehensive great power than a river-line or bombing-base that is being held at the price of the local population's hostility.

But it is easier to see reason than to act on it. If one is to retreat from strategic positions, one needs a golden bridge, even if one has recognized that these positions are precarious; and, even when the bridge has been provided, one may hesitate to cross it without having first become convinced that this military retreat is going to earn political rewards that are likely to yield at least an equivalent amount of security.

What Inducements?

What facilities and inducements can the West offer to Russia for retreating from the Oder-Neisse Line? These are the terms in which the problem is puzzling Western heads.

But, in other terms, the same problem must be puzzling Russian and Chinese heads too. How can they induce the Western powers to retreat from Formosa and perhaps from Southern Viet Nam?

If strategic retreats are, in truth, required on both sides, and not merely on one side, this is fortunate. It makes the problem easier to solve. Retreats are less unpalatable when they are being made simultaneously on both sides.

The building of the golden bridges is the simpler part of the common task. We can build them by each taking care not to humiliate the other party. If he and we both know that he is in an untenable position, it is in our interest, as well as his, that we should help him voluntarily to evacuate it, instead of using our own local and temporary advantage to push him out by force.

If he loses face and nurses resentment, the peace which we both need will not have been attained; but, if we can bring him to retreat of his own accord with discreet assistance from us, the first step toward real peace will have been taken. It will be harder to achieve the second step of finding a satisfactory equivalent for the strategic security that the retreating power will be relinquishing.

Take the classic case of the Oder-Neisse Line. Even before the Third German Reich had been liquidated, the Russians had begun to risk a breach with their Western Allies for the sake of securing their hold on this strategic frontier. For the sake of securing it, they destroyed the freedom of Poland and lopped off huge slices of Eastern Germany; and, in consequence, their breach with their recent Western Allies was complete before the end of 1946.

Their willingness to pay this tremendous price for holding the Oder-Neisse Line indicates the value that they place on it; and one can see why they value it so high. It is the shortest north-and-south line between the Baltic Sea and the Central European mountains. At this line the Great North European Plain contracts to a slim waist, while east of the Oder-Neisse Line the plain fans out into a vast expanse extending from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

Twice in our lifetime, Russia has been invaded overland from Germany. If a Western invader were to come marching east again, the Oder-Neisse Line would be the shortest front to hold against him. This is what the line means to the Russians, and it is probably no use telling them that, if a Western invader did come again, he would, this time, come flying.

Our fears for the future are always clothed in our experience of the past. For the living generation of Russians, a Western invader means a German invader on the ground. So how are the Russians to be induced to evacuate the Oder-Neisse Line, and not only that, but to let Eastern Germany rejoin Western Germany and to let Poland, Czechoslovakia and Russia's other East European satellites go free as well?

Perhaps the key to a solution is to be found in the change in the East European peoples' point of view which is likely to be the Russians' reward if only the Russians can be induced to take the considerable risk of making all these concessions at once.

If the East European countries are liberated and Germany is reunited, then Germany, instead of Russia, will be the great power which the East European peoples will fear. Poland and Czechoslovakia, at any rate, might then look to Russia for protection against the risk of a German "revanche." And, if the entente between the East European countries and Russia did thus become a reality instead of a pretense, the Western powers, on their side, might feel some concern for the security even of a reunited Germany against a Slav bloc cemented together by a common fear of Germany and not by Russian force.

Something Like New Locarno?

Might not such a change in the European situation open up the possibility of negotiating something like a new "Locarno Pact"? Could not the three Western powers and Russia agree to give a joint guarantee both to a liberated and reunited Germany and to a liberated Eastern Europe?

Such a joint guarantee could be given without this requiring a simultaneous dissolution of existing alliances. A jointly guaranteed free Germany would be at liberty to remain in alliance with the Western powers, and a jointly guaranteed free Poland and Czechoslovakia to remain in alliance with Russia.

Meanwhile, the two remedial measures —the liberation and the guarantee—would, one might hope, work together to reduce the feeling of tension and insecurity; and this, in turn, would make it easier for

Note on Toynbee

ARNOLD J. TOYNBEE is best known as the author of "A Study of History," a work which is published in 10 volumes and runs into 3,250,000 words. It took him 34 years to write.

He was born 66 years ago, the son and grandson of physicians. An uncle, Paget Toynbee, was an authority on Dante. Another uncle, Arnold Toynbee, was an economist. Toynbee's wife is the daughter of the well-known classicist, Gilbert Murray.

The historian was educated at Westminster and Oxford. He served as an intelligence officer in the British Foreign Office in both World Wars, and for years has been associated with the Royal Institute of International Affairs, in London.

Peron's Swing Right, Discontent Of Navy and Feud With Church Back of the Argentine Revolt

His Attempts to Mend Shattered Economy With Foreign Capital Encouraged Emergence of Christian Democratic Opposition.

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BUENOS AIRES, June 25.

WHEN Argentine navy planes rained bombs on crowded Plaza de Mayo in downtown Buenos Aires last week in an attempt to overthrow President Juan Domingo Peron's 10-year-old dictatorship, they brought to a head a march of events that started several years ago.

Looking back at the "difficult circumstances of June 16" as the government refers to the revolt, one can conclude that some sort of explosion was inevitable.

Just what and when were, of course, unexpected—except that trouble was in the air that Thursday morning when many children were kept home from school. That often is the way the first word of a Latin American revolution leaks out. Wives of the ringleaders keep their children home and the rumor spreads.

A number of developments of recent years and months may at first seem unrelated, but it can be shown that they fitted together in a sort of House-that-Jack-built pattern with armed revolt as the end result.

First, Argentina had gone into an economic decline. Like most reform movements, Peron's own revolution was running out of steam. He had started out as the savior of the working classes and had raised their standard of living to a level they never had known before. Inevitably there came a reckoning. Emphasis had to be changed from workers' benefits to hard work and increased production. At every railway and subway station posters exhort workers to keep at the job and put out more goods.

'Decapitalization' Problem.

Something had to be done, too, about what economists call a serious "decapitalization." Scarcity of investment capital was preventing necessary expansion of industrial plants and even essential maintenance of existing equipment. This difficulty has been worsened by the government's strict control of imports in a frantic effort to at least approach a favorable trade balance. Needed replacement parts often are barred by these restrictions.

Results of economic stagnation are obvious. Buenos Aires, largest city south of the Equator, is probably the worst lighted big city of the world. Only half the street lights are lit at night and those are kept dim by chronically low voltage. The power shortage also makes it necessary for the government to order factories to close down a half-day each week, staggering the schedule to reduce the over-all demand for electricity. Residential lights are dim, and house current often is insufficient to keep a fluorescent bulb going with more than an occasional flicker.

The government-owned railroad is poorly maintained. Rolling stock is mostly old, stations need repairs and neither waiting rooms nor passenger coaches are heated even in the present near-freezing winter weather. The national telephone service is notoriously bad, a favorite remark being that it is easier to call London or Paris than Cordoba, in the interior of Argentina.

To cite a final example, Argentina has to import oil because the government-owned petroleum corporation has not the capital for full development of the nation's own oil deposits in the south.

Economic troubles are believed to be responsible for a swing to the right that has been noticed in the Peron government in the last two years or so. In addition to the new emphasis on production, Peron did a complete about-face in his attitude toward foreign capital. From a nationalistic opposition to foreign investments, he suddenly switched to an unexpected cordiality, at about the time the Eisenhower Administration came into office.

New Cordiality to U.S.

The United States Department of State, represented here by Ambassador Albert F. Nufer, responded to the overtures. Embassy officials explain carefully that, although Peron has his faults, he is not so bad as he has been painted. They point out also that his party won 69 per cent of the popular vote in the last election, in April, 1954, and that it was an honest election, as far as mechanical details were concerned, although the opposition was denied use of press and radio and was dealt out of many legislative seats by gerrymandering. (Both the term and the technique of gerrymandering were imported from the United States.)

Among the first investments to grow out of the new cordiality are a projected Kaiser-Willys manufacturing plant and a similar plant to be erected by the German Mercedes-Benz firm as part of a model city of 10,000 inhabitants outside Buenos Aires. A contract to bring in United States capital to develop Argentine oil also has been negotiated and is before the national Congress here for approval.

To understand the next step, it must be realized that the Peronista party is a composite of many factions ranging from the far right to the far left. The shift to the right gave new importance and satisfaction to conservative elements in the government party. At the same time, it lowered the status of the liberal and radical elements. Some of the most nationalistic Peronistas were especially offended by the overtures to foreign capital.

As Peron got well into his shift toward the right, opposition elements suddenly saw a chance to make some headway. They had what one astute political observer here calls "their brightest idea in years." They planned a new Christian Democratic opposition party, to be based on a liberal political philosophy and Catholic moral principles. Thus the new party, it was thought, would draw strength from dissident liberals among the Peronistas and appeal to members of the single remaining independent institution of any importance, the Roman Catholic Church. Ninety per cent of the Argentines are Catholics.

The Christian Democratic faction is not yet an organized party—political parties can be organized here only under Government charter. Rather is it an incipient movement that has been a subject of considerable talk and hope.

Peron's fears of this new potential opposition may or may not have been justified, but they are considered mainly responsible for his bitter anti-Catholic campaign, which started last year with warnings in the government-controlled press that priests must stop meddling in politics.

No Evidence Against Church.

There is no indication that the church hierarchy has engaged in any plotting against Peron, and he has not charged such a thing. As the conflict developed, however, he accused many individual clergymen of conspiring against him, and many priests were outspoken against what they regarded as a campaign against the church itself.

The church-state feud broke out into the open last November when Peron declared three Argentine bishops and 21 priests to be "enemies of the state" and warned against their "infiltration" into Argentina's youth and labor movements.

Since then, the government has pushed through a series of laws permitting remarriage after divorce in Argentina, lifting tax exemptions on church property, barring religious education in public schools and halting subsidies to church schools. Finally, the government called for election of constitutional conventions this fall to separate church and state, ending Roman Catholicism's favored status as the country's official religion.

The sustained campaign has puzzled some, who have felt that Peron could only hurt himself politically by feuding with the Catholic Church in so predominantly a Catholic country. One popular explanation here is that, like any dictator, Peron needs a scapegoat and now it is the church's turn. Another is that he flies into such a rage at any sign of opposition that he lost his head and began to act irrationally.

Actually, Peron may quite reasonably have started out expecting widespread support for taking away church subsidies, separating church and state and permitting remarriage after divorce. There is said to be a considerable anti-clerical feeling among Argentine Catholics, including a belief that the church should not have a favored position with the civil government.

Whatever chance he might have had for this sort of support was lost when the bitter feud developed. Peronist newspapers have gone to such lengths as to publish pictures showing a "priest" with his two wives and 15 children, and another "priest" consorting with chorus girls. Such pictures are generally believed to have been faked for purposes of anti-Catholic propaganda.

Another apparent instance of such fakery, which seems well authenticated, is said to have taken place in a Buenos Aires tavern. A "priest" is reported to have accosted a young woman improperly, and then, when other patrons threatened to give him a beating, admitted he was an impostor and declared he had been paid to act the part.

By last week it was apparent that the church-state conflict was close to a stage of widespread violence. A climax came when the government expelled from the country Msgr. Manuel Tato, auxiliary bishop and vicar general of Buenos Aires, and his assistant, Msgr. Ramon Novoa. Then, on June 16, Pope Pius XII excommunicated Peron and others who took part in expelling the two prelates.

Anti-Peron Sentiment in Navy.

A final factor in the attempted revolution that broke out later that same day was the navy. Unlike the traditionally loyal Argentine army, the navy has opposed Peron more or less openly from the start. It gets only meager financial support compared to lavish expenditures on the army. A half-finished naval hospital stands on the Buenos Aires waterfront awaiting funds for completion, a monument to the policy of starving the navy.

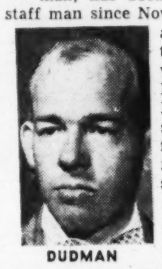

The three naval officers whom the Government accused of leading the revolt were Adm. Anibal O. Olivieri, who was Minister of the Navy, and two top marine officers under his command, Vice Admirals Samuel Toranzo Calderon and Benjamin G. Gargiulo. Gargiulo committed suicide in the naval ministry rather than be captured. The other two officers are awaiting trial.

Traditionally, Argentine naval officers come from wealthy families, and most of them are graduate engineers before they begin naval training. As a group, they are less susceptible than army officers to devices like Peron's custom of passing out permits to buy new Cadillacs at a special price and similar favors. Army officers, on the other hand, more often come up through the ranks and tend to respond more favorably to Peron's brand of demagoguery. As an army officer himself, Peron has exercised strong personal control over the army, frequently purging those suspected of disloyalty and shifting assignments to break up any cliques seen developing.

The air force's role is not altogether clear. An early government announcement after the attacks had begun said both air force and naval units were taking part. A later broadcast said only the navy was involved. However, the air force apparently kept out of the fighting, undertaking little or nothing in the way of counterattack.

The rebel naval officers, either outraged

Electoral College Reform: New Moves to Base the Presidency on Popular Vote

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 25.

THE Electoral College, that venerable institution under which a candidate can be elected President even though his opponent gets more popular votes, is under fire again in Congress.

Three times in the nation's history men have become President in spite of the fact that more voters preferred other candidates.

In 1824, Andrew Jackson polled more votes than John Quincy Adams, his nearest rival, but he lacked a majority because of votes cast for the other two candidates. The election was thrown into the House of Representatives under the Constitution. Pressure and influence applied in the right places made Adams President.

In 1876, Samuel J. Tilden received 265,000 votes more than Rutherford B. Hayes, but Hayes won the election, nevertheless, through a vote in an Electoral Commission which decided the contest.

Grover Cleveland, in 1888, received 376,000 more votes than Benjamin Harrison, but lost to Harrison through a peculiar distribution of votes in the Electoral College.

Calls for reform of the system of electing President and Vice President are not a new concept in American political philosophy. James Madison, father of the Constitution, favored direct popular election. Jackson, for very good reason, emphasized in his first message to Congress when he eventually became Chief Executive, the need for direct popular vote. Earlier, Benjamin Franklin also subscribed to the idea of letting every vote count.

As late as 1949 an attempt was made to democratize the presidential electoral system. The resolution passed in the Senate but was rejected in the House.

Now, three separate resolutions are before the Senate calling for constitutional amendments intended to make the outcome of presidential elections more clearly reflect the wishes of the majority of the voters.

These resolutions are sponsored by men who believe that for 160 years the Electoral College system has been an obstacle in the path of truly democratic selection of Chief Executives.

Under the present system, the electoral votes of a state—equal to the number of its congressional delegation—are all cast for the candidate having the greatest number of popular votes in the state, no matter how narrow the margin. Under this "all-or-nothing" rule, popular votes cast for the losing candidate might just as well have not been cast at all.

The most sweeping of the three reform resolutions is sponsored by Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (Dem.), Minnesota. He would wipe out the Electoral College system altogether and place the election of the President and Vice President on an unencumbered popular vote basis.

Senators Price Daniel of Texas and Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, Democrats, are co-sponsors of a resolution under which a state's electoral votes would be awarded to candidates in direct proportion to the number of popular votes received.

Senator Karl Mundt, South Dakota, and Representative Frederic Coudert Jr., New York, Republicans, have put their names to a resolution calling for election of presidential electors by congressional districts, thus making it possible for a candidate to take all of a state's electoral votes only if he carried each individual district.

Statistics, however dry, sharply point up the way the "all-or-nothing" rule works. In 1884, Cleveland received 563,984 votes for President in the state of New York and took all of its electoral votes. His Republican opponent, James G. Blaine, polled only 1083 fewer votes than Cleveland but got no electoral votes at all. For practical purposes, the electoral vote indicated that New York was 100 per cent behind Cleveland when actually the margin between his popular support and Blaine's was less than one-tenth of 1 per cent of the total vote.

In 1932, Herbert Hoover got 15,000,800 votes but only 2,000,000 were reflected in the Electoral College vote because of their distribution among the states. In 1924, John W. Davis polled 6,000,000 popular votes which brought him no electoral votes, while 2,000,000 other popular votes netted him 136 electoral votes.

A point made by critics of the system is that a state casts the same number of electoral votes regardless of how many of its citizens actually go to the polls.

In the 1952 election, one electoral vote in Mississippi represented fewer than 36,000 popular votes because of the small election day turnout. In Minnesota, however, one electoral vote was the product of more than 125,000 popular votes. Thus, it may be reasoned, the voter in Minnesota had less than one-third the importance in the election's final result as the Mississippi voter.

There are other examples of what is termed unequal representation. In 1912, Woodrow Wilson received one elector per 14,500 votes; Taft got one elector for each 435,000 votes. In 1928, Hoover received one elector for each 48,100 votes; Alfred E. Smith got one per 172,602 votes. In 1932, Hoover received one elector per 267,149 votes; Franklin D. Roosevelt got one per 48,351. In 1948, Harry S. Truman received one elector per 78,123 votes; Thomas E. Dewey one per 113,990; and in 1952 Adlai Stevenson received one elector per 306,646 votes and Dwight D. Eisenhower one per 76,764.

As matters stand now, the Daniel-Kefauver plan has the blessing of the Senate Judiciary Committee and the best chance for congressional approval. It is generally conceded, however, that in view of the Senate's reluctance to tinker with the Constitution, reform may still be a long way off.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Speaking of Fish

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Reader John Slaton was so right: "There are no fish" in Missouri.

Of course, the Izaak Waltons immediately come up with the beautiful thought that you don't go fishing to catch fish—you go fishing to commune with nature. Bosh!

I can still commune with nature by not buying fishing licenses, bait and equipment to the tune of possibly $200 per year. The State of Missouri in requiring us to have fishing permits is taking money by unfair pretext.

The editor says "Those intent on a monster fish fry for kin, kith, friends, colleagues and neighbors had better go to the fish market." I'll bet that the majority of us who buy a fishing license would be glad if we ever caught anything better than a few stunted sunfish or crappie, much less enough for a "monster" fish fry.

There is definitely something wrong somewhere. What is it? Could it be that the money we put in the till is going for other things than building up our streams and lakes? Could it be that the game violators are stunning electrically, seining, dynamiting and using other illegal methods?

In any case it is something the Conservation Commission should take care of. J. HANKA.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Shame on John Slaton for saying there are no fish in the world. What about Pine Island, Fla., where fishermen stand side by side and bring in unlimited quantities of all kinds? There are plenty of fish in Missouri, too. If Mr. Slaton had no luck in Bollinger county, let him try the Huzzah, the Red Bluff or almost any stream in Clark National Forest.

CLARA GORDON.
Davisville, Mo.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Mr. Slaton's anguished cry and your sympathetic and understanding editorial prompt me to say that my famous kinsman did not put everything into "The Compleat Angler." Maybe Mr. Slaton does not employ modern methods.

Last summer I went to the Georgian Bay country where fish are supposed to jump into your boat. But I began to feel that I had gone a thousand miles to draw a "water haul." Nothing plain or fancy in the tackle box worked. When I saw my last minnow was about done for, I decided to revive him with a teaspoon of "Old Red-Eye."

That minnow took off like a salmon. Suddenly there was a tremendous commotion. I reeled in and found that the minnow had a six-pound pike by the throat. Anyway, that's about the way Bennet Cerf used to tell the story. To be honest, we caught plenty of everything but muskie. A. M. (IKE) WALTON.
Browns, Ill.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I am sure that "No Fish" letter was written by my son in St. Louis, and I wish he had used his middle initial, just to be fair. There are plenty of fish down here in Crawford county. JOHN SLATON.
Leasburg, Mo.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

John Slaton is right. Any fish allegedly caught was a "plant," a trap for a city sucker. When I arrived at an Ozark "fishing paradise," the owner showed me at the end of a chain a 65-pound catfish. "Just caught an hour ago," he said; and it almost bit his dog's tail off. I fell for that, and spent three days with not so much as a nibble.

I even decided to try again the next year. The resort man did not remember me, so he showed me that catfish all over again. This time I did not fall. I found out that he had bought the creature alive. He had all but made it a partner: the fish brought in so many ready-to-believe-all city customers.

JOSEPH A. OSBORNE.

Toward the Goal of World Peace

Peace-loving peoples around the world can look with deep and genuine satisfaction on the week that has just passed.

For while last week was a week that solved no one international problem—indeed it brought the news of an "unwarranted Soviet attack" on a United States patrol plane in the Bering Strait area with injury to American personnel—still it was a week that advanced the cause of peace.

President Eisenhower opened the tenth anniversary meeting of the United Nations at San Francisco with his impressive address in stanchest support of the U.N., its charter, its purposes and its record, imperfect though that record is in some major respects. Former President Truman and Secretary of State Dulles closed the anniversary week with addresses that, taken together, became a notable demonstration of bipartisanship in foreign affairs.

As Mr. Eisenhower's address was chiefly a generalized statement of high American principles and our devotion to the U.N. ideal, Secretary Dulles provided a point-by-point review of major U.N. achievements and a realistic recognition of the problems that confront the U.N. He also held up the ideal of collective security and in words frequently moving.

This address, so we believe, was John Foster Dulles much at his best in the two years and a half that he has been Secretary of State.

Speaking to the representatives of some 60 member nations, 37 of which had sent their Foreign Ministers, Secretary Dulles paid a deserved tribute to the late Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, who, as a Republican Senator, set partisanship aside and worked hand in hand with the early sponsors of the United Nations, including two Democratic Presidents, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman.

The U.N.'s General Assembly has become, in a Vandenberg phrase recalled by Mr. Dulles, a "town meeting of the world," which influences peoples everywhere. From the U.N. deliberations throughout a decade has flowed a long series of international efforts in behalf of peace.

Foremost among these is the stand, taken under the leadership of Mr. Truman, against naked aggression in Korea. Of this heroic achievement Secretary Dulles well said, almost on the fifth anniversary of the violation of the thirty-eighth parallel by the Korean Communists:

> Today there is no longer fighting in Korea. But why? The reason is that 16 members responded to the call of the United Nations and fought the aggressor who had struck from the Communist north and almost immediately overran South Korea. After three years of bitter fighting, the aggressors were back at, or behind, their point of beginning. The aggression had failed.

It was good to hear the Republican Secretary of State thus place the Korean war in its correct historical setting. For that tragic struggle was no one man's war, as some deliberately miscalled it. The Korean war was a demonstration that, to quote Mr. Dulles again, "without collective strength, despotism would have free rein; the rights of nations would be trampled and human beings would be made slaves."

Korea, Indochina, Iran, Yugoslavia, Japan, Austria, elsewhere—Mr. Dulles called the roll of danger spots or problem areas to which reason has been applied under U.N. or other international auspices. All this has been, as our Secretary of State said, "an evolutionary process," and "out of it much good has come." To these "solid accomplishments" which he cited he might well have added Trieste, for many years an international trouble zone, now happily pacific following a settlement that both sides have accepted. While the U.N. has been putting out fires and stopping other conflagrations before they could start, it has engaged in important activities that are less widely known. Foremost among these was the U.N.'s formulation of the Declaration of Human Rights.

Mr. Dulles described the Declaration of Human Rights aptly when he said that through it "the United Nations holds aloft a standard which will lead increasingly to respect for the individual human being and his sacred God-given rights." We trust it is a fair conclusion that this indorsement of the Declaration of Rights by Mr. Dulles presages an overdue effort by the White House to obtain ratification in the Senate.

The Secretary of State took justified satisfaction in the record of President Eisenhower in behalf of the creation of an international atomic agency designed to "harness for human welfare what was only a weapon of war." In this connection Mr. Dulles recalled the "unprecedented proposal" made by the United States 10 years ago for the internationalization of atomic energy. That plan, which was offered when Harry Truman was President and rejected by the Soviet Union, would, in Mr. Dulles's words, "have prevented the present competitive production of these weapons of awesome destructive power."

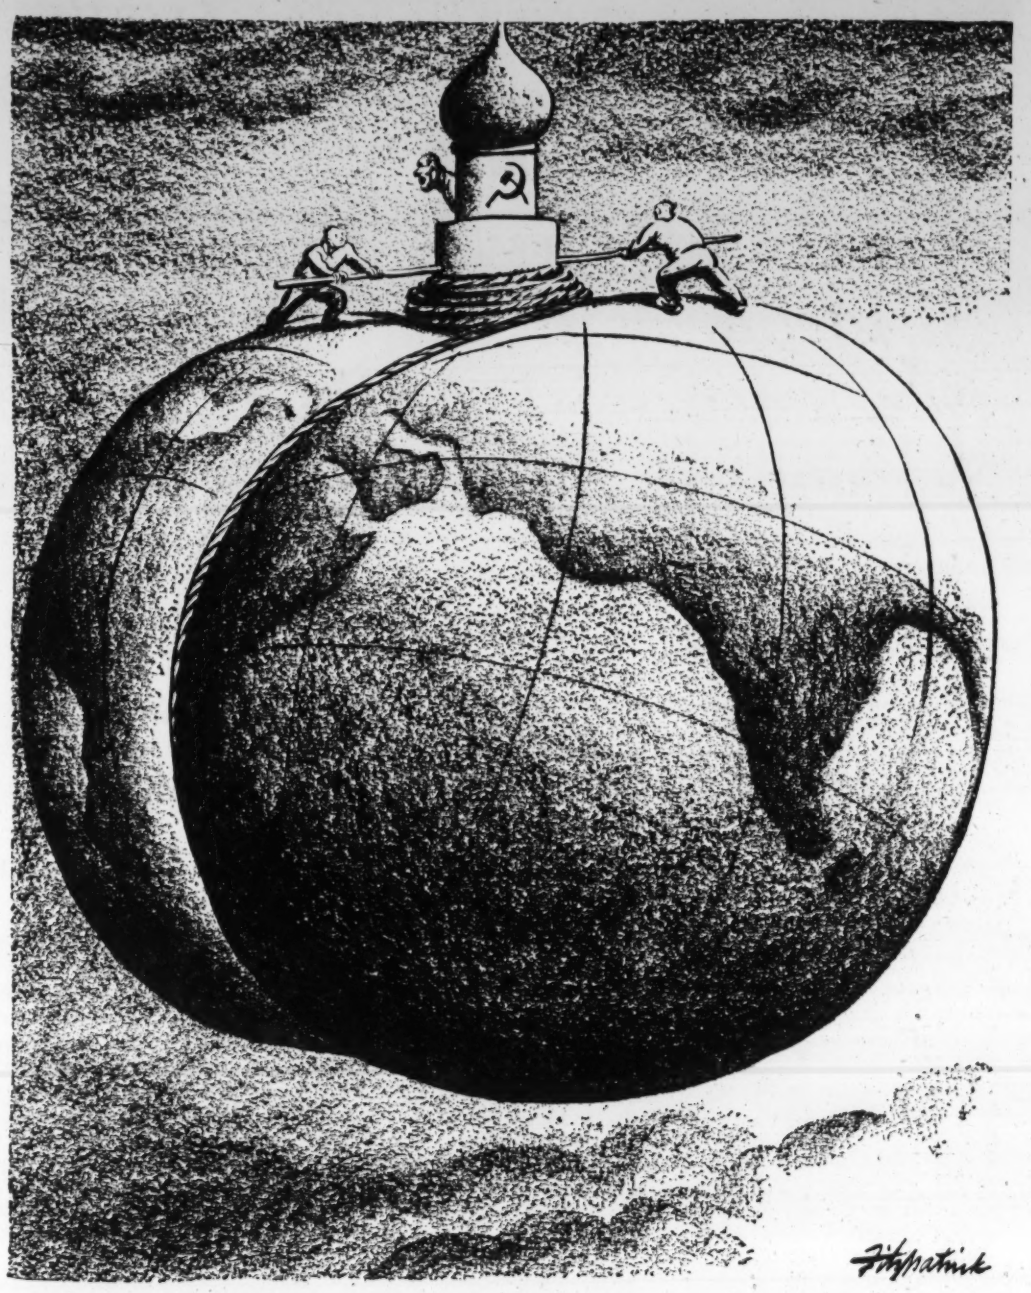

Disarmament is presented as a goal of the Dulles address. So is the unification of Germany whose partition, the Secretary said, "cannot be indefinitely prolonged without breeding more evil to plague the world." So is the application of the right of peoples to decide how they shall be governed and who shall do it. So is the ending of the Cold War which the Secretary said could be brought about solely by observing the Charter of the U.N.—"refrain from force or even the threat of force in international relations" and "from the support and direction of subversion against the institutions of other countries."

Mr. Dulles did not minimize the problems ahead. He admitted that many of them would not be easy to solve. He frankly stated that there is room for honest differences of opinion. And he was entirely right in saying that we are not for peace at any price. But differences are not insurmountable obstacles. It all depends how they are approached and what the parties to the differences seek to do. If that is our attitude as we go to Geneva and if it is also the attitude of the others who will sit down at the conference table with us, next month can see what President Eisenhower has called a "new dawn."

Yes, it is a "magnificent challenge," to return to Mr. Truman's address to the diplomats whom the Secretary addressed earlier. For as the private citizen from Independence so well put it: the choice before the world is plain and grim: "Live together or die together."

The U.N. starts its second decade in an improving climate. True enough, the plane incident and other occurrences are reminders that we cannot for a moment let our guard down. But from San Francisco, we are persuaded, comes new determination that peace, lasting and just, shall be the way of the world. New determination—and new hope.

"EASE UP A BIT, COMRADES, AND TURN ON THE CHARM"

Brothers of the Angle—and Others

The bitter, biting wind of black heresy is chilling the hearts of some of our letter-writers. Out of the slough of despond, John Slaton cried the false doctrine: There are no fish! Now others come to say: Yea! Yea!

Here as everywhere, sound teaching has its defenders. But they—and we—are dubbed dunces and fools so weak of mind that we empty our purses for the doo-dads of the tackle-makers who hypotize us into believing that there are bass and trout, perch and pike in our streams—although there is no place for such except in medieval bestiaries.

But what a wonderful company has been seduced into the Brotherhood of the Angle, and what a pleasure to be partner in their talk: Juvenal and Ovid, old Cervantes who fell as hard for fish as for windmills, the salty Rabelais who was more in the habit of fooling than of being fooled, Alexander Pope ever ready to take time from the proper study of mankind to study a likely stream, and autocratic Dr. Holmes and so many others, not forgetting Simon Peter and his friends in the apostolic occupation.

It is true enough that testy old Sam Johnson said that "a fishing-rod is a stick with a hook at one end and a fool at the other." But he was speaking only of those using devices other than the noble fly rod. He was quite in accord with Dean Swift's dictum that a "fish should swim thrice . . . first it should swim in the sea (do you mind me?), then it should swim in butter, and at last, sirrah, it should swim in good claret." The garnished plate, the warming glass and the cheering pipe, as much as rod, line, leader and fly, lead to that mellowness in which every Brother of the Angle agrees with Izaak Walton's friend, Sir Henry Wotton:

> 'Tis an employment for my idle time, which is then not idly spent; a rest to my mind, a cheerer of my spirits, a diverter of sadness, a calmer of unquiet thoughts, a moderator of passions, a procurer of contentedness.

All a dream? But then a dream which supported gallant men in honor and nobility even when the enemy held the field. Gulled fools? Ah, then what a splendidly mad company in which to march.

Just Who Gangster Impostato Is

Some new information from an authentic source has come to light in the case of Nicolo Impostato who was born in Italy in 1900, came to the United States in 1923 and wants very badly to remain in the United States. Since 1943 when Impostato drew two years on 199 counts of a narcotics peddling charge, it has been apparent that he is a completely undesirable citizen. Yet Senators Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina and Langer of North Dakota are sponsoring a bill that would save him from deportation.

Senator Johnston has said that in due time it would become clear why Impostato should not be deported. That was two weeks ago and there has been nothing favorable to Impostato brought to light. But now Senator Wiley of Wisconsin, who believes Impostato should be deported, has received a letter from Dr. Harry J. Anslinger, commissioner of the narcotics bureau.

The letter states that Impostato "is a professional killer," that he "was brought to Kansas City to enforce the edicts of John Lazia, Italian underworld czar" and that "he had a lengthy criminal record in Italy which he did not reveal at the time of his entry into the United States." So the mystery of why the United States Senators should be striving to save Impostato from deportation is even more baffling. They certainly are aware that private bills of their type are for correcting wrong and preventing deportation of a worthy person. Perhaps they were not fully aware of Impostato's real record.

If the Fountain Danced

If the wedding of the Mississippi and the Missouri in Aloe Plaza fountain was a bit merrier last Friday than usual, if the water sprays arched higher than ever, there was good reason. It was Carl Milles's eightieth birthday.

The stocky, white-haired Swedish sculptor was far away, in Rome, where he has been living recently after his long residence at Cranbrook, in Michigan. But then he lives wherever his graceful, poetic statues are—Stockholm, London, Brussels, Zurich, Berlin, Venice, New York, Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia, St. Louis. Indeed he lives not only in the water sprite display at Union Station, but in the very heart of the Illinois cornland prairie, where Milles's Sun Singer seems to raise his voice in song to the flaming god of the skies.

Admirers of the St. Louis fountain who never have seen the Sun Singer, will be well rewarded by visiting Allerton Park, two miles south of Illinois Highway 47 about midway between Decatur and Champaign. The Milles statue, along with the whole of the Allerton grounds and gardens, was given to the University of Illinois by Robert Allerton. It is a little known place of beauty in the Middle West.

Working the Prophets Overtime

The political experts stretched the art of necromancy just about to the limit when they tried to read a deep meaning into President Eisensower's joking remarks in New Hampshire.

The President told a smiling crowd that he was often asked how long he would like to live at 1600 Pennsylvania. What people should ask, he went on, is how long it is going to take Sherman Adams to finish his lectures on New Hampshire, because the former Governor doesn't seem to be a third of the way through yet.

That's not much to spin a political prophecy out of, but the experts did their best. With the aid of mathematical science they soon had it figured out that the time needed for Gov. Adams to complete his lectures would be a little over five years. And so the wires buzzed with news that the President had "hinted" he will run again.

Oddly enough, there seems to have been little of such finely spun speculation about another remark which the President made on his New England trip. He promised to return to New Hampshire again "as soon as I am in another kind of livelihood."

If the experts' first deductions were right, then the proper deduction from this second remark is that the President hasn't the faintest intention of revisiting New Hampshire for at least five and a half years. That is an insult which no President would offer any state if he expected to ask its vote for re-election to a second term. It follows therefore that he does not intend to seek a second term. However——

But we shan't go on. Has anybody considered the possible explanation that both of the President's remarks were pure, pleasant, small talk, carrying no hidden meaning whatever?

Help Yourself to Ozark Poke Sallet

The Mirror of Public Opinion

The wild green it is made from is incomparable for promoting health, prolonging life, curing rheumatism and the itch, and painting barns; it is better than okra when rolled in flour and fried; and goes with cornbread, green onions and buttermilk.

James C. Morris in the Ozarks Mountaineer

It is poke pickin' time in the Land of the Crossbow in the heart of the Arkansas Ozarks, and nobody knows as much about the use of poke and other wild greens as Aunt Mary Woody of Onia, who will be 100 her next birthday.

Aunt Mary says, "Law, child, they ain't nothing in this world as good for a body as poke sallet.

"If you want to feel good all summer and not be sick nary a single day, then be sure to eat nine messes of poke sallet every spring, and you will have good health and happiness all the year.

"Why, I never took but two doses of medicine in my whole life, and that was against my will, and it didn't do me any good either. All a body needs to keep well is just plenty of canned poke sallet and eat a mess every week when you can't get them fresh."

"Didn't Uncle Jess Goodman," Aunt Mary continued, "go through the Civil War in Tennessee and then move to Arkansas and become a great bear hunter and Baptist preacher and live to be over a hundred years old? How could he have done all that without his nine messes of poke sallet every spring?

"Didn't Aunt Marge Cothron live to near 120 and remember being sold three times as a slave? And who knows, she might have been living yet had she not gone blind and couldn't see how to pick wild greens any more."

"Just gather an apronful of wild greens," says Aunt Mary, "wash 'em and bug 'em, and wash 'em again. Put them in a pot with plenty of water and boil until they are tender.

"Of course you want to put some seasoning in and plenty of salt. Some people like to pour off the first water after boiling, put in new water and boil again.

"Then you can put them in a skillet with plenty of grease and fry down until there is not much water left.

"If you want something good just bake a pan of cornbread, get some green onions and fry some bacon and pour a big goblet full of buttermilk.

"If you want to go to a wild greens pickin', come with me. Watch out for bugs and spiders, and keep a sharp eye for snakes.

"Rub some pennyroil on your shoes and legs and the ticks and chiggers won't bother you.

"Now this tall plant by the side of this old building is poke weed, the best vegetable in the whole wide world."

We learned from her all about poke, narrow dock, wild lettuce, lamb's quarter, tongue grass, wild mustard, deer's tongue, crow's foot, dandelion, green plantain, mouse's ear, shonnie, sour vine, wild beet (speckled dock), and many more wild plants that make delicious greens.

The wild poke vegetable has many other uses. Mrs. Lloyd Richardson of Timbo likes to make poke pickles. She gathers tender poke stems, boiling until the thin peel comes off, cutting the desired lengths and pouring vinegar over them.

"My man, Lloyd, can eat a bowlful of poke pickles," says Mrs. Richardson. "They have made him both healthy and a good singer."

"Why should I grow okra," says Denie Looney of Alco, "when fried poke stems is much better eating?

"Just take the poke stems, wash them and slice crosswise as you would okra for frying, salt and pepper them and roll in flour, cook to a golden brown in hot grease or oil."

"Did you ever have the itch?" asked Pres Looney. "Poke root bath used to be used to cure the itch, and it was the only thing that would really kill the seven-year itch.

"It is not a disgrace to catch the itch," says Pres, "but it is a shame and a disgrace to keep it.

"If you have the itch and the doctor can't cure it, dig some poke-root, wash and clean it, put in a wash kettle and boil with plenty of water and be sure not to get it too strong or it will set you on fire."

The old timers say that poke berries make a most delicious wine with a potency once well known for three-day hangovers.

"Birds eat them. They may be used to stain cloth, and one man I know of painted his barn with pokeberry juice."

Whisky and pokeroot make the best rheumatism medicine in the world, according to many Ozark natives.

Nancy Goodman swears by this medicine, and here is her recipe for making "rheumatiz cure":

"Take a half gallon of whisky, and it don't matter if it is bought at the liquor store or is just good old moonshine.

"Take a poke root just big enough to reach around with your thumb and forefinger and about six inches long, split the root in several pieces, put it in the fruit jar of whisky and let it set a few days.

"First, take only a teaspoonful three times a day. After while you can take a tablespoonful three times a day, and later maybe you can take more, or as much as you want.

"This is the best thing I ever took for the rheumatism."

That brings to mind the story of the moonshiner who was being tried in court years ago.

It was a clear-cut case against the old man.

The judge gave strong instructions to uphold the law. But the jury was out only five minutes and came in with a verdict of "not guilty."

The spectators were speechless and the judge was furious, but the foreman explained, "You see, Judge, we all get our rheumatiz cure from this man. What are you trying to do, put us all on crutches?"

Taxation Doubled and Redoubled

From The Christian Science Monitor

Half a century or more ago, the Federal Government in the United States drew most of its revenues from tariff collections while the state governments drew most of theirs from property taxes. Then, with the Sixteenth Amendment, the Federal Government entered the graduated income tax field, which has since become its main reliance.

As costs of government and governmental services increased, the states were hard pressed to find sources of revenue. Two thirds of the states now impose sales taxes, while only one less than that number, or 31 in all, collect individual income taxes.

For the 48 states as a whole, sales taxes raised 12 per cent of the revenue; individual and corporate income taxes, 10 per cent; gasoline taxes and auto registrations, 15 per cent; and miscellaneous revenues (including property taxes, inheritance taxes, and so forth), 25 per cent, while more than 12 per cent came in the form of federal aid.

Only the Fisherman

From the New York Herald Tribune.

Only the fisherman upon the lake
In the long vigil of a summer day
Can know the simple secret of a spell
Which sight and sound and silence will betray.

Only the fisherman can see the woods
Shadowed and glistening, scented, fresh, and cool
Where the sheer rising slopes of rock and pine Reveal a hidden cove or minnow pool.

Where he may watch a crag-born rill descend
And whiten over fall and pebbled stream
Or listen to the cry of water bird
Echoing across the tableau of a dream.

The angler, drifting; now with feathered oar
Through shadowed inlet, shimmering in the sun
Is nearer to the meadowed hills above
Than those who gaze from where the roadways run.

CATHERINE HAYDON JACOBS.

Serenade

Take my guitar,
Play, play an' sing,
Shout my song far,
Make the hills ring.

Song of the fox,
Wolf an' panther;
On my string box
Mustangs canter.

Thrum to a star,
The moon, the sun . . .
Where's my guitar?
I ain't got none!

Native Son

From The Christian Science Monitor.

Steeped in culture, he comes back to live
In our small town. Behind him, world events
Have been a backdrop, with his name well known
To press and public. He has traveled far,
Has walked with kings, has been in council with Great men who shape our policies abroad.
But now he walks our Main Street unconcerned
By current problems. Every day he speaks
With farmers and storekeepers, not about
Details of government; his talk abounds
In local-interest items; the new dam
On Crooked River, and prospect for crops.
It is as though he'd never been away,
This native son who has come home to stay.

Indian Dance

From The Wednesday Club Book of Verse.

Jutting above the plain
Mighty rock bastions;
Straight from their flat tops
Altar smoke rising.

Dark against sunset
Tall feathered figures
Circle the fires,
Bending and rising.

Now shake the gourd-rattle,
Beat the drum loudly;
Shuffle the dust,
Sink down exhausted.

Spirit of Thunder,
Send rain to the dry corn;
Let there be harvest,
That people may prosper!

Reserve Plan Offers Youths Facing Service a Variety of Choices to Decide Own Future

Administration's Program Presents Sort of Lottery; It Is Not Perfect but It Does Provide Incentive to Enlist and It Has Survived Many Pitfalls.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Ret.)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 25.

THE NATIONAL RESERVE PLAN, urged by President Eisenhower to supplement the regular forces, after as many rescues from death as Pauline in her Perils, appears at the moment to be heading toward passage.

If it does escape the fresh trap being prepared for it by Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (Dem.), New York, and is passed, it will be due to the perseverance, the energy and the refusal to be discouraged of Carter L. Burgess, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower and Personnel and an assist from the President.

President Eisenhower urged the passage of the legislation first in a message to the Congress Jan. 13. He again called attention to its importance in his address during the civil defense test "Operation Alert."

Stressed Five Points.

In his first message, the President emphasized five points of importance in the new reserve scheme. These were:

1. The importance of having a ready reserve in a high state of training in adequate numbers that would be quickly available in emergency.

2. The need to bring young men into the reserves besides those who have completed military service. It would be an advantage both to bring younger men into the reserves and would make the military obligation more equitable.

3. Provision to assure the National Guard a flow of young men with appropriate basic training.

4. Compulsory training in the reserves.

5. Authorization for a state militia to replace the National Guard when it is called into federal service.

The President's requests for points 3 and 5 are not included in the bill as finally amended by the subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee of the House. The original provision to permit men below the draft age to enlist in the National Guard for eight years and then to take six months of active training in the armed forces was lost when an amendment to the bill, by Representative Powell, which would have barred segregation in National Guard units, was accepted. With this added to the original bill, Southern Representatives joined with other opponents of the bill to send it back to committee.

The national reserve plan seemed lost at that time. For reasons that are incomprehensible to most Americans, politicians are deathly afraid of making equitable and necessary provision for reserve forces. Many were very happy with the chance to turn the bill down that was offered by Powell's amendment.

Rescinded by President.

The President rescued it from the House Armed Services Committee, where it was decently interred for the remainder of the session, by his plea from his secret civil defense hideout.

Committee Chairman Carl Vinson (Dem.), Georgia, in response, produced a watered-down version of the plan which left out any mention of the National Guard, so as to evade the segregation issue, and eliminated the provision for voluntary enlistment in the reserve for six months' training and a total obligation for reserve service for eight years. It also cut the obligation for active and reserve service from eight years to six years for those who served two years or more on active duty.

When the Armed Services Committee met to consider Vinson's version, the members of the subcommittee that had prepared the original bill protested. In a dramatic meeting, they expressed their disagreement with Vinson's version and moved that it be returned to the subcommittee. The motion carried 16 to 14.

The subcommittee, with Assistant Secretary Burgess in the witness chair, rewrote Vinson's bill, restoring most of the provisions of the original bill. As in Vinson's version, the National Guard was left out entirely and total service obligation for men with two or more years active service was kept at six years.

Bill as It Now Stands.

The major provisions of the bill as it now stands are as follows:

1. Every person inducted or enlisted into the armed forces has a total military obligation to serve for six years. Five years of this obligation is on active service or in the ready reserve and one year in stand-by reserve.

2. Under quotas fixed by the President, not more than 250,000 men under age 19 may enlist annually in the reserve for eight years to include six months of active training. The National Security Training Commission acts in an advisory capacity to the Secretary of Defense for the active training. During active training the men are paid $50 a month. If, during his reserve service, a man fails to fulfill the training requirements, such as 48 two-hours drills and 15 days of active training annually, he may be compelled to serve on active duty for not to exceed 45 days each year. Provision is made for substitute methods of training, by correspondence courses and weekend active duty periods, to make it possible for men at isolated localities to fulfill their obligation.

3. ROTC graduates are required to perform six months of active training on graduation, if there are no vacancies for them to fulfill their obligation to serve two years.

4. A ready reserve of 2,900,000 men is still the declared object of the plan.

5. A new provision is inserted for the reserves, similar to that now in effect in the National Guard, by which a man below the age of 18 years and six months may enlist in the reserves and escape any training whatsoever except the prescribed inactive duty drills and training so long as he serves satisfactorily in his unit up until the age of 28. While this provision is the same as that for the National Guard, it is understood that the men who enlist under this provision will be required by regulation to take six months' training.

6. In time of emergency proclaimed by the President, the President is authorized to order not more than 1,000,000 reserves to active duty without the consent of Congress.

7. A provision has been added that any person, who while subject to a reserve obligation, becomes a duly ordained minister of religion shall be entitled to a discharge on his request. Students preparing for the ministry in a theological school are not required to serve in any category while in that status.

8. The age at which military obligation expires for those who have been deferred for any reason is reduced from 36 years to 28 years.

Here Are the Choices.

The various provisions in this bill and in effect for the National Guard give the young man facing military service a variety of choice. Which he may take will depend on his guesses about the future and his personal situation.

The choices are:

1. Due to reduction in draft calls and the increase in size of the annual increment of men becoming of draft age, there may be a chance that by doing nothing he can escape any military service. The average draft age now is 21.5 years, but in some states it has reached 24 years. By 1959, without the national reserve plan the average draft age will be 24.5 and in some states it would be over 26, at which age men are exempt from draft obligation. With the national reserve plan in effect, it is expected that the draft age in 1959 will be about 22 years. These are only guesses, however, and unquestionably there are states where there will be a chance to escape wholly any military obligation.

2. Enlist in the National Guard while under 18 years and 6 months of age and perform his training satisfactorily until the age of 28. This type of obligation would be an advantage to young men who have financial obligations and could not spare six months for training under another provision, but they are obligated in this case for nine and one half years of ready reserve training.

3. Enlist in the reserve for eight years while under age 19 to include six months of active training. This would permit the man to get his active military obligation out of the way, but leaves him liable for call in emergency for another seven and one half years.

4. Enlist in any one of the services, for two or more years with a total active and ready reserve obligation of five years and a standby reserve obligation of one year.

5. Wait to be drafted, in which case the same obligation as in 4 above is accepted. However, waiting to be drafted means that the young man's career will be interrupted for two years at ages 21.5 and up and creates a far more serious personal problem than if he had performed his military service earlier.

The various choices present a sort of lottery which will be the subject of almost limitless speculation among young men as they try to decide what is best for themselves.

The national reserve plan is far from perfect, but it does provide incentives to enlist in the reserves and take basic training and this is a voluntary act. It had been the serious hope of the President and the Defense Department that the same provisions could be enacted for the National Guard.

Due to legislation that permits a man to enlist in the Guard and take no active basic training, the Guard is now composed of more than 50 per cent of men who have not had basic training. This disqualifies it as a genuine ready force which it wants to be. The National Guard today would require six months to a year of training, depending on the unit (some are infinitely better than others), before it could be used. The Pentagon estimates that the reserves under the national reserve plan could be made ready in about five months.

Another Problem.

Another problem arises in connection with the so-called voluntary enlistments with which the strength of the Navy and Air Force is maintained. A substantial portion of these volunteers enlisted in the Navy and Air Force to escape being drafted into the Army when the draft boards were breathing down their necks to snatch them for Army duty in Korea. This was a form of compulsion that is disappearing with the end of the Korean war and the lessening chances of being drafted.

The national reserve plan, through the incentive of six months' service and a long reserve obligation, will take a large number of young men subject to induction annually out of the manpower pool and will pose a threat of the draft to those who do not take their military service in this form. It is feared that unless some such measure is passed, the Navy, Marines and Air Force, dependent on long-term enlistments will not be able to fill their quotas.

The manpower pool qualified and eligible for induction now is 710,000. This will increase to 1,790,000 in 1959 under present conditions. If the national reserve plan is enacted, it is expected that the pool will reach about 1,000,000 and will remain about that size, with an average induction age of 22 years. The act, as written will expire in 1959.

Douglas Assails $600,000,000-a-Year Grab To Exempt Natural Gas Rates From Federal Control

Illinois Senator Spells Out Opposition to Fulbright Bill in Senate and Harris Bill in House.

By PAUL H. DOUGLAS
U.S. Senator, Democrat, Illinois.

CONSUMERS' gas bills—residential, industrial and commercial—are bound to increase by 8 to 25 million dollars a year in Missouri, by 14 to 44 million dollars a year in Illinois, by 11 to 33 million dollars a year in Arkansas, and by comparable amounts elsewhere if the powerful oil industry has its way in the present Congress.

At issue is a bill (the Harris bill in the House, the Fulbright bill in the Senate) to exempt from federal regulations the interstate sales of non-transporting natural gas producers, and to fix up the interstate pipelines with highly inflated cost allowances, as attempted in the Moore-Rizley bill in 1948.

The effect of the bill, if passed, would be to let producers of this excellent and much-sought-after fuel charge all that the traffic will bear, and to give the interstate pipelines an enormous handout also. Reasonable estimates disclose that this may add as much as $600,000,000 a year to the nation's present gas bills.

The interests which would get the biggest part of this bonanza are not the sturdy and struggling little "independents" and wildcatters in dirty overalls, in whose name the legislative attack on the captive consumers is being made by the big interests. Ninety per cent of the gas sold in interstate commerce is produced by about 175 producers.

Of the 29 largest producers, who produce nearly two-thirds of the natural gas, 20 are major oil companies or their subsidiaries; Phillips Petroleum, Stanolind Oil & Gas (Standard of Indiana), Humble Oil & Refining (Standard Oil of New Jersey), Magnolia Petroleum (Socony-Vacuum), Shell Oil, Gulf Oil, Atlantic Refining, Shamrock Oil, Skelly Oil, Sun Oil, the Texas Co., Sunray Oil, Union Oil, Pure Oil, Sinclair Oil, etc. They read like the "who's who" of America's oil industry and are not exactly a needy or penniless group — or a neglected one, if we recall their 27½ per cent depletion allowances.

Oil Men's 'War Chest.'

With such enormous sums at stake, it is no wonder that the oil, gas and pipeline companies have gathered a "public relations" war chest for this exemption bill which the Wall Street Journal estimated at $1,500,000 —or that we in Congress are receiving lots of inspired mail, identically worded resolutions from chambers of commerce and an occasional misinformed city council, slick literature and editorials with the industry slant clearly showing beneath alleged consumer appeals, plausible economic analyses to show how little of the consumer's dollar the poor little gas producer gets, snide attacks on opponents of exemption as "socialists," etc.

Standard Oil of Indiana, whose subsidiary, Stanolind Oil & Gas Co., is the second biggest gas producer in the country, has singled me out for special attention with one three-page letter to employes in Illinois, and one nine-page memorandum seeking to refute some of the arguments I have made for fair regulation.

The company tactfully urges letters—not form letters, though —to show me the light. I suppose I should feel complimented by such attention from this two-billion-dollar enterprise, which has also loaned its top economist to head up the big brain trust of the American Petroleum Institute, mobilizing the forces for exemption.

Fight For the Consumers.

In the face of this concerted drive, it is fortunate that a growing number of members of Congress, mayors and law officers of scores of the nation's biggest cities, and a few civic and union groups, state utility commissioners and distribution companies have taken up the battle for the consumers.

The narrow margin (16-15) by which the Harris bill was voted out of committee in the House and the window-dressing of apparent, but actually useless, federal controls ("reasonable market price") included in the bill, show that there is a good chance to beat the exemption drive if the people understand the issues.

In conformity with its great traditions, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch has consistently done more than any other paper I know to explain these issues to its readers.

Historically, the efforts to win exemption for these producers' sales began with the Moore-Rizley bill in 1947-48. This was too raw even for the Eightieth Republican Congress. It was shelved. An exemption measure (the Kerr bill) was unfortunately passed in 1950, but President Truman courageously vetoed it.

The increasingly industry-minded Federal Power Commission gave the producers exemption in 1951, only to be reversed by the Supreme Court in the Phillips case in 1954. The court held that the Natural Gas Act gave the commission power to regulate those interstate rates, and that it should get on with the job.

So now the industry is back again seeking "clarification"—or more bluntly, exemption.

Argument Against Exemption.

The basic argument against exemption is simply this:

Competition does not and cannot operate between gas producers to keep the field prices "just and reasonable."

In the absence of such competition, only fair regulation can protect the consumers of this essential commodity.

Since the sales transactions between producers and pipeline companies are in interstate commerce only the Federal Government can do the job.

Natural gas can be distributed only by a system of pipelines and gas mains that tie the city users inextricably to utilities, the utilities to the pipeplines, and the pipelines to the producers, so that neither pipelines nor consumers can "shop around" for better prices.

With expensive cooking and heating appliances bought (about $10,000,000,000 worth for the nation), the gas user is caught. With expensive big lines laid ($40,000 to $100,000 a mile), the pipeline company is caught.

With a desirable fuel that is in great demand, the producer now has the upper hand, and he has started acting that way in jacking up his prices. He has the pipelines and the consumers over a barrel.

Not Like Coal, Copper, Iron, Etc.

These marketing relationships differentiate the natural gas industry completely from coal, copper, oil, iron ore and the other commodities with which the oil industry publicists mistakenly try to compare it. Barges, trucks and railroads can haul those other materials. Competition among producers is possible.

But with natural gas the testimony is conclusive to the opposite effect: the transportation is monopolistic, and now that demand is outstripping the supply, the only effective competition in the field is between pipelines bidding up the price. These higher prices then get passed along the chain to the consumers. Clearly this situation requires utility-type regulation.

It is illuminating to see what has already been happening to field prices of gas while the Federal Power Commission has followed its hands-off policy.

From 1946 to 1954, the average cost of gas to the 17 pipelines that bought 96 per cent of the gas sold interstate by the non-transporting producers increased from 4.4 cents a thousand cubic feet (MCF) to 9.7 cents per MCF, or by 120.8 per cent.

In aggregate terms, this means the increase in the cost of gas to these pipelines is running at the rate of over $196,000,000 a year. This may be chicken feed in Texas, but it is big money in Illinois and Missouri.

Moreover, I introduced into the Senate committee's record tables showing gas purchase contracts in the Southwest running as high as 20 cents and 22 cents per MCF. New contracts at 14 cents are common. A May 27 prospectus of People's Gas in Chicago states that it expects the average cost of gas purchased by its affiliate natural gas pipeline to be 13 cents in 1955.

The upward movement is thus rapid and getting faster, and "most-favored nation" clauses and renegotiations, which hike the prices under existing contracts whenever another producer in the area gets a higher price, speed the spiral upward.

Increases Passed On.

These higher costs are being steadily passed through to consumers. The 14 principal pipelines transporting gas from the Southwest whose sales are regulated by the FPC have since 1949 either been granted or have pending rate increases totaling $251,000,000 a year, a great part of which is due to higher field prices.

The utilities, in turn, have been passing these increases on to their customers. Recent rate increases for People's Gas in Chicago, for instance, have been $4,657,000 in 1953, $5,000,000 in 1954, and $3,716,000 thus far in 1955.

In consequence, the unit costs of gas to consumers have been going up, while the unit costs of electricity, the principal competitor to gas for residential use, have been declining.

Higher gas costs have disappointed the New England consumers and already jeopardized the success of the recent pipeline projects there. Distributors in Oklahoma and elsewhere are also complaining that higher prices for natural gas may price it out of the market for industrial users or else saddle the major burden of all increases on the captive residential users, who cannot transfer to coal or oil as easily as industries with alternative facilities.

The lobbyists for the exemption bill try to minimize the impact of these higher prices on consumers by saying it will only mean a few pennies a day to each. But 2 cents a day—which is far too low an estimate—is over $131,000,000 a year for the 18,000,000 residential customers.

This is the way all utility regulation works, saving modest sums per day for the small users. It is a shocking concept that pennies extracted from the many which mean millions for a few are a trifling matter.

Competition Preventive.

I have already pointed out how the physical arrangements of the gas distribution system (pipelines and gas mains) and the various escalator provisions in purchase contracts prevent competition from being effective to keep prices down.

Other factors also obstruct competition among producers:

(A) Gas reserves, according to the American Gas Association, are not building up as rapidly as before in relation to gas consumption. If an exhaustible resource faces a demand that is rising faster than supply, the situation is made to order for price-gouging.

(B) All available statistics show that the major oil producers dominate the interstate gas sales markets and the ownership of known gas reserves.

(C) There is much evidence that the only competition is between gas purchasers. The Messrs. De Golyer and McNaughton, noted geologists and petroleum engineers of Dallas, recently advised Natural Gas Pipeline Co.: "The availability of this gas to Natural depends upon its aggressiveness in obtaining such gas in competition with other pipelines." And I understand Natural is bidding 5 cents per MCF more than the highest present field price to try to get gas in Jack and Wise counties in Texas.

(D) State conservation rules and laws for minimum well-head prices likewise reduce competition.

(E) And finally, the pipeline companies, under regulation, can pass on all increased costs to their customers. Furthermore, under an inexcusable ruling of the FPC, they get a bigger allowance for the gas they themselves produce if the market price goes up. Thus the pipelines lack any real incentives to bargain with the producers for a low price.

A Public Utility Situation.

All of these factors reinforce the conclusion that this is a public utility situation, that competition does not operate to keep prices fair, and that regulation is the only possible answer.

The inevitable high costs to the consumers in the absence of regulations are made quite clear in the statements of industry spokesmen about proper field prices.

Gen. Ernest O. Thompson, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, seems to believe a 5-cents-per-MCF increase over present field prices would be fair. That means $200,000,000 a year more from consumers. Dr. Richard J. Gonzales, economist for Humble Oil, declared that 20 cents per MCF might be right—a rise of 10 cents over present averages. If this became the average, gas consumers would pay over $400,000,000 more each year. Others suggest 25 cents per MCF, which means over $600,000,000 a year more from consumers.

An 'Atrocious Decision'.

Obviously, the producers stand to collect billions in added profits if the exemption bill is enacted. For example, a 10-cent increase in price would bring Humble Oil & Refining Co. $1,600,000,000 of additional profits from its presently owned gas reserves.

Another feature of the proposed legislation which will eventually add several billion dollars more to gas consumers' costs is the provision to allow the pipelines to charge as an operating expense the "reasonable market price" of the gas which they themselves produce. This would write into law the basic principle of the FPC's atrocious decision in the Panhandle Eastern case which reversed, for pipeline-produced gas, the long-standing "cost" or prudent investment method of rate-making.

This may be legal gobbledegook to the casual reader, but it means millions of dollars more to the pipelines and it persuaded them to enlist as staunch and contributing allies of the big oil companies in the drive for this legislation.

What it means in simple terms is this: It is costing Panhandle Eastern Pipeline Co. an average of 2.35 cents per MCF to produce gas from its wells, including a fair return on its investment. But Panhandle is now claiming the "weighted average field price" of 10.42 cents per MCF, or 8 cents more than its real cost. Or take Colorado Interstate Gas Co.: It claims a field price of 9.4 cents per MCF while its actual cost of production is 2.23 cents, and the consumers must pay the difference.

Increased profits thus handed to the pipelines through the back door already total over $40,000,000 a year, according to data from the FPC.

The standard in the new bill, "reasonable market price," is even looser and higher than the method applied by the FPC. On the basis of 1953 gas production by the pipelines, if the difference between actual cost of production and "market price" is 10 cents per MCF—and that may be a conservative estimate if regulation is killed—the additional profit to the pipelines would be $100,000,000 annually.

Obviously the enactment of the proposed legislation would be a gold mine for the pipelines as well as the non-transporting producers.

My bill, S. 1248, would, on the contrary, compel the FPC to go back to legitimate cost of prudent investment as a basis for rate regulation. It would stop this pipeline raid on the consumer, which the FPC and the Harris and Fulbright bills seek to legalize.

Spur to Exploration Theory.

It is sometimes claimed that regulation has stifled exploration, and only by allowing the pipelines these phantom costs can they be induced to find new reserves of natural gas, but the facts are to the contrary. The pipeline companies and their producing affiliates in the Southwest produced 50 per cent more gas in 1953 than in 1947. From 1950 to 1953, pipeline funds spent for exploration and development rose from $7,500,000 to nearly $15,000,000. Obviously, regulation was fair and did not stifle new development.

It is said by the proponents of the exemption legislation that the producers could not exist on the 6 per cent return generally allowed utilities, but only the proponents have suggested that they be limited to 6 per cent. I would expect, from the nature of the producing business, that the rates of return allowed would be somewhat higher than those normally granted to gas and electric distribution utilities. I am sure the FPC can be counted upon to be more than fair to the producers in this matter.

It is often claimed that regulation of non-transporting producers' interstate sales is just too complicated and difficult to be feasible, but the short answer to this is that for 16 years the FPC has regulated natural gas transporters who are also engaged in extensive exploration, development and production of natural gas. These companies have prospered and grown under regulation, and, at the same time, down to 1952, the FPC ordered rate reductions totaling $43,000,000 on an annual basis.

The FPC can do the job of protecting both consumers and producers, if it only will. The Congress should leave it with the authority and direct it to proceed.

Expert on Consumer Protection

A DEEP rooted concern for humanity and a burning opposition to injustice and exploitation probably are the best explanation of Senator Paul H. Douglas's great interest in consumer protection.

Going beyond his teaching and general studies of economics and welfare legislation while a professor at the University of Chicago in 1929 and 1930, he delved into the specific utility manipulations of a prominent Chicagoan—Samuel Insull.

Douglas's revelations and his drive against exorbitant traction, electric and gas rates in Chicago were not popular with those in power. Some tried to get him fired from the university, but history soon vindicated his judgment.

Ever since, in state legislative battles, in commission hearings, in election campaigns, in the Chicago City Council and in the United States Senate, Douglas has championed the cause of the unorganized and usually politically weak consumers.

In Senate debates he has fought for competition as a defense for both consumers and small business. Where competition fails in a utility situation, Douglas has supported what he believes to be fair regulation. He is generally credited with the main legislative fight which made the Kerr bill to exempt gas producers from federal regulation a national issue in 1950 and led to its veto by President Truman.

DOUGLAS

Douglas unsuccessfully fought the Hinshaw bill in 1954 which exempted from federal regulation pipe lines operating wholly within a state but, nevertheless, completing interstate transit of gas.

Now he is on the warpath again against the Harris and Fulbright bills to free the interstate sales of gas producers from federal regulation.

PORT OF PUSAN RETURNED TO SOUTH KOREA BY ARMY

PUSAN, Korea, June 25 (AP) —The United States Army today marked the fifth anniversary of the start of the Korean war by returning the huge Port of Pusan to South Korea.

During the war Pusan was one of the busiest military ports in the world. It handled more than 30,000,000 tons of cargo and 3,300,000 men.

France Has Ended Opposition For Restoration of Monarchy

Within Six Months Falangists Have Swallowed Idea — Royalists, Bourbonists, Carlists Accepting Nationalist Movement.

By LOUIS NEVIN
MADRID, June 25, (AP).

IN less than six months Gen. Francisco Franco has prepared Spain for a return of the monarchy and eliminated all serious opposition to it.

By threat and argument he apparently has done what had been thought impossible a short time ago: brought together in a sort of warm friendship a large majority of monarchists and Falangists.

Spain is enjoying more real political calm than it has known in many years.

The Falange, Spain's only political party, many of whose members are former leftists, has swallowed the idea of an eventual restoration of the monarchy.

The monarchists, most of whom are opposed to the ideals of the Falange, have accepted the principle of the so-called National Movement. Until recently the Falange had claimed the movement as its exclusive property.

oDn Juan de Bourbon, son of the late King Alfonso XIII and head of the Spanish Bourbon house, told the Madrid monarchist newspaper A.B.C. in an interview: "The monarchy has always felt solidarity with the ideals of the (National) Movement."

Appeal to Monarchists.

He appealed to all Spaniards "animated by the ideals of the National Movement" to unite to defend Spain against all attacks from within or abroad.

It was his first public declaration of support for Franco. The interview was given in Don Juan's residence-in-exile in Lisbon, Portugal, some time ago but was permitted by Spanish censorship to be published only yesterday.

The declaration brought all monarchists, Bourbonists and the extreme right wing Carlists into allegiance to Gen. Franco. The main point dividing the monarchists among themselves is just who will be king. In his interview Don Juan made it clear he considers himself the heir to the throne.

Franco, however, is known to favor Don Juan's eldest son, 17-year-old Prince Juan Carlos, presently vacationing in northern Spain.

The Carlists, in turn are divided with one group supporting Prince Xavier de Bourbon-Parme and another behind Archduke Antonio de Hapsbourg-Lorraine whom they call "Carlos IX."

The ideals of the National Movement were defined officially for the first time by Raimundo Fernandez Cuesta, minister secretary general of the Falange, in a speech to party workers in Bilbao on June 19.

The National Movement, said Fernandez Cuesta, is made up of all the forces that revolted against the Spanish Republic in 1936, grouped in a political organization in submission to the discipline of its National Chief (Franco) and accepting a doctrine with these main points:

1. Popular representation through the family, trade union and municipality instead of political parties.
2. The supreme authority of the state.
3. The Catholic religion.
4. Recognition of the corporative syndicate regime as the only organization of the national economy and of the world of labor.
5. "Reality of the programatic declarations" of the Spanish bill of rights.
6. The social welfare state.

Doctrine to Become Law.

Fernandez Cuesta said the time had come to give a legal basis to the movement so as to incorporate it into the constitutional law of the land.

Prof. Francisco Javier Conde, director of the institute of political studies, was charged by Franco last January with writing this law. This was done after a meeting between Franco and party leaders in which the Generalissimo was said to have told them the monarchy would be restored and they had better learn to like it or else.

Fernandez Cuesta is typical of the change Falangists have undergone since their political demonstrations just four months ago against a return of the monarchy.

The party chief spends more time now with monarchists and in royalist circles than with the Falange. Just two weeks ago his favorite nephew, Nemesio, married one of the daughters of the Marques de Luca de Tena, outstanding monarchist leader.

Franco's campaign to prepare the restoration began Dec. 29, 1954, with a meeting in southwestern Spain with Don Juan. It was reported on good authority that the two reached complete agreement on aims and means.

As a first result Prince Juan came to Madrid to start his university education in Spain's military academies. He has since been a precious aid to Franco. Little by little opposition to the restoration has diminished in students circles as a direct result of Prince Juan's contacts with them.

At the present only a tiny minority of the Falance, grouped around Manuel Hedilla, and the underground Anarchists, Socialists and Communists, remain opposed to the restoration.

Peron's Swing to Right One Cause of Revolt

at the fury of Peron's anti-Catholic campaign or else seizing on the situation as a favorable occasion for a revolution, launched their attack, as it happened, almost at the moment that the first news of the Pope's excommunication of Peron reached press service offices in Buenos Aires. The timing was such that the news could not have touched off the revolt, which had been planned well in advance.

Peron himself was the obvious prime target. The navy planes dropped bombs both on the old rose-colored Casa Rosada, which houses Government offices, and Peron's personal residence. Morning fog had delayed the take-offs, however, with the result that two loyal non-commissioned officers had time to warn the army, which relayed the warning to Peron at Casa Rosada by helicopter. He fled from the building before the attack began.

Rebels also seized the Government radio station and forced the announcer at pistol point to read a statement saying that "the policy of the tyranny has committed grave errors" and "has made enemies of our sister Latin countries." An electrican hearing the broadcast at last collected his wits and pulled the power switch, cutting the station off the air.

Without army support, the revolution seemed doomed from the first. The army remained loyal and controlled the situation within a few hours.

Speculation ever since has centered on the question whether the revolution was a complete failure or whether the army would curb Peron's dictatorial powers.

A clue to the answer may lie in the army's strong role in the crisis. Always before, it has been the Peronist-controlled General Confederation of Labor (CGT) or its hoodlum arm, the National Alliance, that has come to Peron's rescue in a pinch. This time, the CGT helped little, if any, and it was the army that protected the dictator.

Until two things happen, the situation cannot be regarded as stable. First, the Government must go through with its plan to pick up all firearms held by the workers. Second, the location of the fleet, a mystery ever since the outbreak of the revolt, must be made known and the ships returned to Government control.

Toynbee Urges Locarno - Type Pacts for Peace

both camps gradually to disarm "pari passu" on an agreed plan.

If there is anything in this suggestion for a first move towards peace in Europe, a corresponding plan might be worked out for Eastern Asia.

It has already been agreed that, after a "cooling-off" period, the people of Southern Viet Nam shall freely decide their own future for themselves. Why should not the same freedom be given to the people of Formosa?

The West would have to face the risk that the Formosans might then vote for getting rid of the Kuomintang, and Communist China that they might vote for still holding aloof from Communism. The Formosan Chinese must be longing, not, of course, for a restoration of Japanese rule, but for a recovery of the material efficiency and well-being that was the bonus of half-a-century of Japanese domination.

An East Asian "Locarno Pact" between Communist China and Russia on the one side and the Western Powers on the other might extend the joint guarantees to all the smaller countries of Eastern Asia. Both North and South Korea, as well as both North and South Viet Nam, could be brought under the Locarno umbrella.

The purpose of a new "Locarno," in Eastern Asia and in Europe alike, would be to allow the smaller countries to make a genuinely free choice of regimes, ideologies, and alliances. They cannot be genuinely free unless the Great Powers refrain from putting pressure on them; and the Great Powers will be tempted to curb the small countries' freedom so long as they have reason to fear that it may prejudice their own security.

The path is, of course, beset with difficulties. Germany has not renounced her lost territories east of the Oder-Neisse Line. Can we find an eastern frontier for Germany that will be acceptable to Germany, Poland, and Russia alike?

And what alternative asylum could we find for President Chiang Kai-shek's government and army if the Formosans were to tell us that they did not want to keep them?

Such obstacles are formidable, but the prospect of them must not intimidate us. The snags will be less difficult to deal with if once we can get on the move. We can then grapple with them, as we come to them, one by one.

Meanwhile, our objective is clear. We are in quest of a victory for peace which will be a common victory for all mankind.

REVIEWS OF NEW PUBLICATIONS

Eudora Welty Says Much In Short Stories

THE BRIDE OF INNISFALLEN and Other Stories, by Eudora Welty. Harcourt, Brace and Co., 207 pgs., $3.50.)

Reviewed by
ERNEST KIRSCHTEN

ONE of our leading literary journals recently carried the complaint that a number of American writers—among them Carson McCullers, Truman Capote and Eudora Welty—never "get anywhere." They have high skill in setting a scene, evoking a mood or sketching a character, but that is all.

If this accusation, particularly in the case of Miss Welty, were left to a lawyer, he would at once enter a demurrer. He would say, in effect: The facts may be as stated, but they are far from constituting an offense. True, Miss Welty has not produced Mississippi's "War and Peace," but was she ever under any obligation to work on such a scale?

To change art forms, may a composer write nothing but majestic symphonies? And incidentally, do not some relatively simple songs have great appeal even to a sophisticated ear? Comparisons of this kind, however, are too likely to lead to sterile arguments. So long as composer or author makes no false pretentions for his work, one takes music or story as is.

The song analogy is appropriate in Miss Welty's case. There is a lilt to her style even when her subject is somber, and her longest stories are short. The seven in this latest collection take up a scant 200 pages, but every page is appealing and enjoyable. This brevity is a compliment to the reader's imagination. Every character in "The Bride" collection probably could be woven into something "big," something "significant." Miss Welty presents genuine characters and lets the reader weave, if he will.

"NO Place for You My Love," the book's first story, concerns the even less than casual meeting of a girl from Toledo and a man from Syracuse on a Sunday afternoon in New Orleans. Almost spontaneously they start on a drive through the bayou country south of the city. They dance briefly to juke-box tunes; they kiss once, and they return to the city and their own barely suggested troubles.

That's all there is, except for the brilliantly purposeful description of the countryside, the heat and the insect swarms through which they pass, and it is enough.

No, these stories are not complicated. They are just brief, revealing glimpses into the complications of human lives. With due respect to Tolstoy and other writers who "get somewhere," it is also art, high art, to suggest much with little.

The Men of Vichy

VICHY, POLITICAL DILEMMA, by Paul Farmer. (Columbia University Press, 376 pgs., $5.50.)

THE Men of Vichy, it turns out now on cool reflection after 15 years, were not all 100 per cent evil just because they were willing to do business with the victorious Germans.

France's hard dilemma from 1940 to 1944 was in having to deal with two great forces more powerful than herself, Britain, her old ally, and the Nazis. How she faced it makes a fascinating study in history.

This appraisal is a work of scholarship and research, part of it done in France. It is the first of its kind, on a broad and intensive scale, and it is refreshing because it is objective.

It highlights a constant struggle within the regime—a profound conflict between those who wanted collaboration on a broad scale and those who wanted to keep it narrow.

The author is a history teacher who has long been interested in France. In the historian's way he stops short of sharp and final conclusions on the right and wrong of what these men did. He does find that some of them may have served France well for the long run.

"In an age gone by," he observes, "anyone could readily distinguish between patriotism and treason," but now the distinction is not so plain to see.

READING AND WRITING

Aims of Education Stimulatingly Discussed

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch

THE PURPOSE OF HIGHER EDUCATION, by Huston Smith. (Harper, 218 pgs., $3.50.)

"THE PURPOSES OF HIGHER EDUCATION" by Huston Smith of Washington University Philosophy Department lays down a set of principles which he believes would be valid as criteria and as working formulae in preparing American undergraduates for the world they must face. The book is based on a series of discussions carried on for more than a year by 21 members of the university faculty. As each one of them represented a special area of learning and a separate point of view, a good deal of argument must have preceded the arrival at general areas of agreement. Even then it seems likely that a number of opposite opinions were not reconciled.

The educator, however, is not obligated to present his students with a master key to the riddle of the universe. The best he can do is to indicate an approach which if followed will stimulate the inquirer to use his own best faculties in finding the answers. Prof. Smith and his colleagues have, at the very least, outlined certain procedures which require a use of the mind both by teacher and student. They make one or two basic assumptions as if they are axiomatic.

The most important of these is that liberal education should be concerned with "man as man" and not man as a prospective butcher, baker or candle-stick maker. This being so—or being assumed—the purpose of education should be to bring the individual into a confident orientation with life in general and to rally the faculties of mind and heart to a confident meeting of life's trials as far as this is humanly possible. Since most of the great questions are unanswerable in final terms it is the part of wisdom to adopt standards of value which, in the light of human experience can be regarded as stable if not absolute.

PROF. SMITH makes it quite clear that values are essential to significant thought and action. In other words the individual must have a conviction about what is good and beautiful, otherwise his life will be passed in a state of moral and esthetic neutralism where one thing is as good as another—and as bad. Nevertheless people differ in their fundamental principles and there is a tendency in the realm of thought to classify basic principles in a way that makes some of them seem to be direct opposites.

Prof. Smith, reporting in part the results of the faculty discussions, undertakes to explore these opposites in the hope of finding grounds of reconciliation. In the case of "Absolutism versus Relativism" he arrives at something called "objective relativism." This means that actions should conform to the needs of a situation but that the situation must be judged objectively and not according to individual whim or preference. This compromise will not satisfy the absolutists since it does not assume a transcendent or super-human law.

Even so human situations are similar enough to permit generalizations. So it is possible to establish a stable set of values that will apply in most instances. Therefore it is not rational to say that if moral standards are not absolute moral anarchy must result.

SOME of the "opposites," Prof. Smith finds, are opposite only because of verbal confusion. For instance every conscious act by anybody is sometimes regarded as "selfish" precisely because the individual concerned wanted to do it. Yet the practical and the moral difference between an action that excludes every interest except one's own and an action intended for the benefit of others, is enormous. There is a difference, in other words, between "of the self" and "for the self" and to ignore it is to disregard basic distinctions made by the mind itself.

After considering opposites and the possibilities of partial reconciliations Prof. Smith goes into the specific aims of liberal education. He outlines the areas of knowledge in which an educated man should feel reasonably at home, the most important of which, seemingly is a knowledge of man himself together with his social and cultural history and his present situation in the world. To leave Prof. Smith's book at this point is to do scant justice to its specific quality. To attempt anything more valid, however, would require long quotations. It invites quotations to be sure but the reader will be better off if he reads them in context.

BEFORE concluding I must say that Prof. Smith is against moral exhortation in the class room and presumably against "indoctrination" except in a limited sense. He would have the academic community steeped in moral values and inspired with the will to lead, to clarify and to stimulate. But the teacher must never propagandize his students. His object, finally, is to induce the student to proceed under his own steam.

This book is good for anybody interested in education. Prof. Smith is his own best exhibit of what education can produce.

Week's Review Of Business And Finance

ROSY EVERYWHERE

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP).

MRS. MARY JONES, wife of the average United States factory worker, had cause for joy this week. The family's financial situation had never been better. Not only was her husband's take-home pay at an all-time high (if it followed the national average), but for many basic cost-of-living items, especially food, she could make it stretch a little farther. The money in the Jones pay envelope was but one of many indicators pointing up the lusty health of the nation's business.

Retail sales were on the upbeat; construction activity headed for new highs; scheduled steel production (97.4 per cent of capacity, or 2,350,000 tons) was the biggest on record. In the first week of summer, signs of the traditional summer slump were conspiciously absent. The stock market thrust repeatedly into new high ground.

Powering the Upturn.

Powering the upturn were two basic forces. One was the rising trend of spending by big business (General Motors announced it would pump $500,000,000 into new plant and equipment over the next 18 months "to meet the needs of an expanding market"). The other was the continued high level of consumer incomes and consumer spending, as typified by the factory worker and his take-home pay.

Labor Secretary Mitchell, announcing the latest Government figures on factory income, said take-home pay of the average factory worker with a family to support—the money left in his pay envelope after deductions for taxes — rose last month to $70.12, an all-time record. In some industries the average was less than that, in others—notably automobiles and steel—it was substantially higher.

Another significant facet of Mitchell's report: Over-all national stability in retail prices has stopped paycheck-robbing inflation. Said the Secretary: "These two factors—record high take-home pay for factory workers and stable prices for the goods and services the worker and his family buy—are concrete evidence of the strength of our economy and mean continued prosperity for workers and their families."

Wage Increase in Sight.

Meanwhile indications were that pay envelopes would keep on getting fatter. CIO steelworkers, pounding down the home stretch in bargaining talks with "Big Steel," spurned a proffered 10-cents-an-hour average wage boost. It was expected they'd reach agreement—probably on a bigger raise—ahead of the strike deadline next Thursday midnight. Southern manufacturers braced themselves for expected congressional approval next month of a jump from 75 cents to $1 an hour in the legal minimum wage.

One industry approach to the problem of mounting payroll costs could be seen in General Motors' new expansion program. Lion's share of the half-billion-dollar budget was set aside for new equipment—hydraulic presses, machine tools and the like—calculated to raise output while holding unit production costs down. Ford took the same tack. Both big auto makers had just signed union contracts calling for guaranteed layoff pay for their nearly 500,000 hourly-rated workers.

Retailers hoped to siphon off a greater share of the nation's steadily growing purchasing power. The only question was: Who would get what? B. Cearl Puckett, chairman of Allied Stores Corp., said department stores could hope for a larger slice of consumer incomes in the second half of 1955—if people spent a little less money on new homes and new cars. Furniture manufacturers and furniture merchants, converging on Chicago for the industry's summer market, predicted record sales and rising prices.

The Auto Sale Situation.

Auto retailers, with the heaviest inventory of all time (latest count: 841,000 cars) on their hands, got set for another hectic round of discounts, price cuts and razzle-dazzle selling. Most had only about three months left to strip their storage lots and warehouses of the 1955 cars before the arrival of the first 1956 models.

A production slowdown in July-August-September was counted upon to ease retailers' inventory problems, but the big manufacturers, with wage negotiations and wildcat strikes behind them, were going pretty close to full blast again. This week's output (154,169 cars) was up 10 per cent from the week before and a hefty 35 per cent above the year-ago level.

Briefly over the business scene: the United States Commerce Department upped its estimate of construction activity in 1955. It now looks, the department said, as if outlays for new construction this year should climb to $41,750,000,000, a gain of more than 10 per cent over 1954. . . . Americans are buying more pianos. Sales for the first five months of 1955, says the National Piano Manufacturers Assn., were 20 per cent higher than a year ago.

U.S. TREASURY BONDS EXTEND LOWER DRIFT

Corporate Market Spends Week 'Consolidating Its Position.'

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)—The corporate bond market passed a calm and uneventful week. But Treasury liens continued to drift downward.

The Treasury's 30-year 3¼s lost a quarter of a point at 106¼ bid while the 40-year 3s at 100 13-32 bid were off only 1-32. The bellwether intermediates the 2½s of 1963, declined 13-32 at 98 6-32 bid.

Foreign liens were fairly firm. Italian dollar bonds declined as the fall of the Scelba Government unsettled United States investors. But German and Japanese issues tended to rise. And South America obligations were steady despite the revolt in Argentina.

The corporate market spent a week of what technicians call "consolidating its position." There was lots of activity but few price changes as some investors sold their holdings and others purchased new and seasoned issues.

But the Treasury list extended its loss of the previous week. Why? Financial circles say that the expectation of new Treasury financing next month is having a depressing effect. Also, with Congress apparently favorable to an extension of the present 281-billion-dollar national debt limit, several new Government bond issues can be anticipated in the coming fiscal year.

Investors abhor uncertainty and buyers of Uncle Sam's marketable Government bonds are no exceptions. Until terms of the Treasury's latest money raising are known, little firmness in the Government market can be expected.

While Congress debates the necessity of keeping the national debt level at a high level, a study of the nation's mortgage debt may prove enlightening.

The United States Savings and Loan League reports that more than 40 per cent of the nation's home mortgage debt is either insured or guaranteed by the Federal Government.

HOG AND SHEEP PRICES IN SHARP DECLINES FOR WEEK

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, June 25 (USDA weekly review of the livestock market):

Closing prices were generally $1 lower on hogs 180-lb. up, some over 220-lb. weights $1.25 off. Selections of 170-lb. down finished $1.50@2.75 lower, maximum loss on limited number of weights below 130-lb. Sows finished 25c to $1.50 lower due to a late break mainly on weights 450-lb. up. Initial week top of $22.50 was replaced by $21.50 on the close, majority 180-220-lb. late $20.75@21.15; 220-240-lb. $20.25@20.75, a few 240-260-lb. $19.75@20.50. Most 140-170-lb. $18@19.75, 100-130-lb. $15.50@$17.25. Sows 400-lb. down closed at $14.75@17, over 400-lb. $12.50@14.75, with boars $8.50@13.

Consistently declining markets closed spring lambs $3 under the previous Friday, all grades sharing the loss. Initial week sales included choice and prime at $24@24.50 closing sales, mostly choice at $22 down, with majority good and choice $20@22, utility and good $14@20. One load 104-lb. shorn lambs and yearlings brought $18 early this week. Shorn slaughter ewes held at $3.50@5, this spread taking all grades.

A two-way price trend marked cattle for the week ended Friday, steers over 1100 lb. being steady to 50c lower, lighter cattle steady to 50c higher. Heifers and mixed yearlings advanced mostly 50c, demand being especially urgent for heifers which closed on virtually the same price level, grade for grade, with steers. Cow receipts were excessive and prices closed mostly $1 lower. Bulls sold steady as did stockers and feeders. Vealers advanced $1. A load of mixed choice and prime 1100-lb. steers topped at $24.25; a load of high-choice 852-lb. heifers $23.50. Other tops included vealers $24; commercial bulls $15; cows $15.50 early, late $14. The great bulk of steers, heifers and mixed yearlings, of which 280 loads were present, comprised goods to average choice from $20@22.50; about 25 loads average-choice and better $22.75@23.50; some 30 loads commercial and good steers $18@19.50; a few lower grade $15@17.50; bulk utility and commercial cows late $8.50@10.50; utility and commercial grade $11@13.50; utility and commercial bulls $13.50@15; good and choice vealers $18@22, a few high-choice and prime $23@24.

UPWARD TREND OF BUSINESS IS SEEN AS LEVELING OFF

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)—Business is still "excellent" but the upward trend of recent months seems to be leveling out.

That's the consensus among key executives polled on June business conditions by the National Association of Purchasing Agents.

Only 36 per cent of those replying reported increased production this month. Only 33 per cent reported any increase in new orders.

"We have to go back to the summer of 1954 to find lower figures," the association said. "On the other hand, relatively few (7 per cent on production and 14 per cent on new orders) report a worse situation than last month."

The survey found purchasing agents "both relieved and concerned" at the recent wage settlements in the automobile industry. They are relieved because agreement was reached without a crippling strike. But they also feel that the "layoff pay" provisions in the contracts signed by General Motors and Ford "may result in further inflation."

"They are sure that some prices will increase," the association said, "and they are wondering how much effect these higher prices will have on consumer demands."

Great Northern Net Doubled.

CHICAGO, June 25 (INS)—Great Northern Railway reported net income for the five months ended May 31 of $8,017,166, equal to $1.32 a common share. This was more than double the $3,850,808, or 63 cents a common share, earned in like period last year. Gross revenues increased $94,318,339 from $88,817,785 in the comparable period of 1954. May net income amounted to $3,731,007 as against $3,205,203 a year ago.

Another Steel Stock, like Bethlehem, with Excellent Possibilities?
On April 30, 1954, we added Bethlehem Steel to our recommended stock list. It was then $63, it is now past $140! That's a gain of 122% in just 14 months!
Now we are recommending another steel stock which we feel has very excellent potential. This is a medium-priced, investment type issue with no long-term debt and a liberal dividend record. Sales are on the increase. We believe it has unusual possibilities.
We are also recommending a companion issue priced under $30. By reducing its interest charges, this company is expected to be able to release more funds for dividends later in 1955. This issue should prove to be an excellent speculation.

INDUSTRIAL STOCK PRICES DOUBLE 5-YEAR AGO BASIS

Index Figure at Close of Week Is Up 224.58 Points From Day Before Korea.

By RADER WINGET

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)—The stock market stepped ahead this week with its accustomed vigor and registered its sixth straight weekly advance. There were times when the market faltered, however, and some thought they could detect signs of hesitancy developing in the general upward trend. The market's record, nonetheless, was clear—in the past 15 sessions of the current six-week advance, the market has hit 11 new record high marks as measured by the Associated Press average of 60 stocks. The average closed Friday at $172.50, only 30 cents under its record high registered the previous day.

Market Values Doubled.

The United Press, using Dow-Jones figures, reported that the industrial shares closed this week on the stock exchange at an all-time record high, just about exactly 100 per cent higher than they were five years ago at the outbreak of the Korean war. The industrial average closed Friday at 448.93, up 4.85 points over the previous week, up 116.40 points over a year ago, and up 224.58 points from the day before Korea. The railroad average closed at 162.20, up 1.04; 48.44, and 106.35 points respectively. Utility gains were 0.05; 6.11, and 20.32 points respectively. For eight straight sessions the industrials registered record tops. For a time the rails lagged. Then on Wednesday, they turned in a brilliant performance and reached a new high since Oct. 26, 1929.)

For some time technicians have been a little worried about the rails. They had trouble getting up to their old high mark to match the forward pace of the industrial segment of the market. Without such confirmation, these technicians contended, the market lacked a firm foundation for its advance.

Rails Come Through.

In midweek, the railroads came through with a new record high. The market made momentary progress in the light of that accomplishment, but then it subsided.

There were no major market influences at work during the week, but there were many minor ones.

Nervous selling developed at one time when in the same day one company passed its dividend and another cut its payment in half. The stocks of the companies involved were deeply affected, but the market as a whole acted well.

Good news, too, had its effect. A prime example was the statement by General Motors that it intended to spend a half billion dollars by the end of next year to expand its passenger car production. Such a declaration had a tonic effect on G.M. stock, and the rest of the market—especially the blue chips—reaped the benefit.

Monday's market was quite mixed with the average down a shade but with more gainers than losers in the list. Railroads were depressed.

The next day the market got back in stride again with an advance to a new record high. Gains were generously distributed through major divisions of the market. On Wednesday, the railroads hit their new high mark, up $2.60 at $139.10 in the Associated Press average, the best since 1929. Business amounted to more than 3,000,000 shares for the first time in two weeks.

Oil Boom at Weekend.

Thursday's market generated almost as much business, but the pace slowed. The list was rather mixed. The average was up but there were more losers than gainers. Selling appeared in the final hour.

Friday's market slumped quietly. It looked as though the week would bow out on a downbeat. Late in the session, however, the oils started a buying boom to bolster earlier strength shown by aircrafts. That gave a final boost to things, but it wasn't enough. The market ended lower.

WASHINGTON U. DEEDS TRACT TO EASE TRAFFIC CONGESTION

Washington University has deeded to University City an 80-square-foot plot at the southeast corner of Millbrook and Big Bend boulevards for construction of a right turn lane for vehicles going from Big Bend east into Millbrook, it was announced yesterday.

Construction will start in about 60 days, Walter Heimbuecher, University City director of public works, said. The lane, to cost about $1500, will reduce congestion at the intersection, he said.

FOUND DEAD IN AUTOMOBILE; EXHAUST FUMES PIPED IN

Warren H. Hancock, 325 Atalanta avenue, Webster Groves, an interior decorator, was found dead last night in his automobile in the garage at the rear of his home. Webster Groves police found a garden hose leading from the exhaust pipe of the car into the right rear window.

The door of the locked garage was forced by police after they had been summoned by Hancock's grandson, Jack Clausen, of Memphis, who was visiting him. No note was found, but Hancock's wife, Ethel, told police her husband had been under a physician's care for low blood pressure and seemed depressed. He was dead on arrival at St. Louis County Hospital.

OHIO STATE ART DISPLAY

An exhibition of water colors and prints by five artists who are members of the Ohio State group will open Friday at the Central Public Library art room, it was announced yesterday.

In the Teacher's and Parents' Room on the library's lower floor, the annual show of children's work from the People's Art Center, Community Chest agency at 3657 Grandel square, will open the same day. Exhibition hours for both shows are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Both displays will close July 31.

PASSENGER FLEET SEAMEN CALL OFF STRIKE IN BRITAIN

LONDON, June 25 (AP) — Striking seamen today called off their wildcat walkout which bottled up Britain's trans-Atlantic passenger fleet for 26 days in the midst of the tourist season.

Still out are 18,000 stevedores, their ranks divided in an inter-union fight for bargaining rights along the country's long waterfront.

The striking seamen—mostly dining room stewards and kitchen workers — demanded better living conditions at sea, a shorter work week and higher allowances while on shore.

Voting to go back to work on Monday, the seamen admitted many of their number already had returned because of dwindling funds and the Government's move to draft those under 26 into the armed forces.

At Liverpool, where the strike began, the seamen said they were returning on one condition — that the strike committee be reinstated in the merchant navy pool. Reports from Liverpool said the committee probably would be reinstated.

Who's showing its heels to the high-priced cars?
The other low-priced cars aren't even in the running!

IT'S EXCITEMENT ON WHEELS!

The light turns green . . . you nudge the accelerator ever so gently . . . and you're gone! That's the way it is in the Motoramic Chevrolet. When your toe says "Let's go," a hoodful of high-compression horsepower explodes into action, sweeping you away from traffic tangles, making short work of steep hills, putting a new kind of fun in your driving life!

RECORD-SMASHING ACTION!

That's what you get with Chevrolet's new "Turbo-Fire V8!" In the recent NASCAR* stock car competition at Daytona Beach, Chevrolet showed its heels to all other low-priced cars. In the one-mile straightaway run, the first two cars—and six of the first ten—were Chevrolets! And in acceleration runs from a standing start against all comers, Chevrolet beat all other low-priced cars – and every high-priced car except one!

Chevrolet's two new "Blue-Flame" sixes have plenty of sizzle, too. In fact, they're the highest powered sixes in the low-price field!

TREAT YOURSELF TO ADVENTURE

Come in and drive the car that is making 1955 famous! That's the only way you'll discover all the exciting reasons why Chevrolet's stealing the thunder from the high-priced cars!

REQUESTS FOR LITERATURE ON TUBERCULOSIS CONTROL

Requests for more than 1,233,000 booklets, pamphlets and leaflets on tuberculosis control have been filled in the last 12 months by the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis, Walter L. Metcalfe, president, announced yesterday.

Metcalfe said total pieces of literature distributed in the city and county have exceeded 1,745,000. He said during the same period the society's information service handled 4095 calls, a 26 per cent increase over the previous year.

"The publicity attending new developments in tuberculosis case finding and treatment has aroused the public to learn more about both the disease and progress being made in combating it," Metcalfe said. "Requests range from individuals asking for a specific publication to those of schools of medicine and nursing for text materials."

FOUND DEAD IN AUTOMOBILE

Michael N. McHugh, a tile-setter, 38 Oakwood lane, Lemay, was found dead in his automobile, apparently of a heart attack, yesterday at the intersection of Watson road and Juniata street.

The body was taken to City Hospital where it was identified by Miss Jane McHugh, 3504A Humphrey street, a sister. An inquest will be held tomorrow. He was 49 years old.

FUEL BARGES CATCH FIRE; MEN, TWO WOMEN BURNED

Richard Aye, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Aye, 721 North Seventy-first street, East St. Louis, and two Alton women suffered burns yesterday near Chattanooga, Tenn., when three gasoline barges caught fire in a thunderstorm. Eight others were reported injured or burned.

The Alton women, Miss Louise Tilton and Miss Elise McCann, were listed as cooks aboard the towboat of which Aye is chief engineer. All are in a Chattanooga hospital. Miss Tilton's condition was listed as critical.

Aye, who telephoned his parents from the hospital, said he had been burned about the face and arms. A man whose name he did not give was killed in the accident, Aye said. Two of the injured were firemen hurt in a traffic accident as they hurried to the scene of the blaze. The St. Louis area injured were aboard the Donna Lee, a towboat owned by the Texas Co.

BROTHER, SISTER ELECTED

Charles W. Salter and his sister, Miss Beverly-Ann Salter, were elected to top positions of American Legion Post No. 312 at St. Charles, it was announced yesterday.

Salter, head of the post's drum and bugle corps, was elected commander. Miss Salter, for four years secretary of the organization's auxiliary, was elected president of that group.

NEW DEMON JET DELIVERED TO NAVY BY M'DONNELL

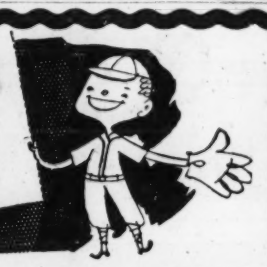

The first F3N-2N Demon, a new single-jet carrier-based fighter, has been delivered to the Navy by the McDonnell Aircraft Corporation, it was announced yesterday.

Like its predecessor, the F3H-1N, the new Demon is an all-weather fighter which is said to combine interceptor speed and fighter maneuverability with the pay-load of an attack bomber. Top speeds are over 600 miles an hour. A large internal fuel capacity gives the Demon sufficient range for fighter-bomber missions.

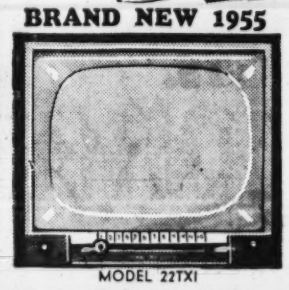

Now under production, the new Demon series is scheduled for delivery to Navy operational units through 1956.

ST. LOUIS U. STUDENT GETS MARCH OF DIMES FELLOWSHIP

Courtney G. Clower Jr., student in the St. Louis University School of Medicine, has received a March of Dimes fellowship from the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Robert T. Hensley, chairman of the city and county chapter of the foundation, announced yesterday.

The fellowship awarded to Clower, 7300 Glades avenue, Richmond Heights, is open to medical students who have completed at least two years of their course and have two to three months of free time to study.

Hensley said by offering experience in the field of rehabilitation at this stage of a medical career, the fellowship help students determine their individual aptitudes for future service in this area.

OBERWINDER RETIRES FROM D'ARCY FIRM

Succeeded by Percy J. Orthwein as President of Advertising Company.

J. Ferd. Oberwinder, president of the D'Arcy Advertising Co., retired yesterday after 43 years of service and was succeeded by Percy J. Orthwein. He had been president since 1945.

"I have always considered advertising as a means of stimulating the normal human quest of the consuming public for easier, healthier and happier living," he told the board of directors on stepping down.

"Having spent my life practicing that philosophy, I feel it is time to be a consumer myself, consuming time in relaxation and forgetting what time it is. After all, 50 years of work should be enough for most anyone."

Oberwinder started in the business as an apprentice in 1904. Later he tried his hand at representing newspapers and magazines, and returned to agency work in 1912, with D'Arcy.

With World War I approaching, he helped recruit the Fifth Missouri National Guard Regiment, which became part of the 138th Regiment, Thirty-fifth Division. He served in France, returned to the company in 1919 and was elected vice president.

He was a founder of the Advertising Club of St. Louis, the Plaza Bank of St. Louis, the Municipal Opera, and has had many other civic interests.

Orthwein said no major change of policy is contemplated.

ORIGIN OF WHEAT, BARLEY BEING SOUGHT IN PAKISTAN

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio

KARACHI, June 25—A Japanese scientific expedition has arrived here to explore the northwest frontier province in the hope of finding the origin of such important cultivated plants as wheat and barley.

Prof. Hitoshi Kihara, leader of the expedition, said that great importance is attached to the Karokoram and Hindukush districts of Pakistan by scientists throughout the world because these areas are believed to be the places where wheat and barley came from.

Prof. Kihara, who has won world-wide fame as a geneticist, said the expedition members are "the first Japanese scientists ever to enter these districts."

PAUL KNABE IS RETIRING

Paul Knabe, secretary and production manager of C. V. Mosby Co., publishers of medical and dental books and magazines, will retire Thursday after 48 years service with the company.

Knabe, 8041 South drive, Hampton Park, started with the company with the late Dr. C. V. Mosby when the firm first began publishing in the Metropolitan Building.

$350.00 WEEKLY INCOME

National well rated organization will select a limited number of people with ABILITY to handle the sale of the finest "Impulse Sale" item to reach the market in 10 years.

NO CANVASSING!

Definitely a dignified, straight, fast-selling opportunity. In cities tested results were amazing—the demand great—and the profits immediate. Salesmen averaged not less than $45 daily net profit with a top of $85 six days per week without traveling. This was, and is, due to the tremendous "on sight" sales appeal of the article coupled with the fact there is nothing remotely similar on any market.

This is a simple, fast, sales promotional opportunity that will appeal to men used to making unusual money.

If you can sell and manage yourself and your time efficiently, you will be booked for an interview. Two exceptional and qualified men will be appointed to handle state areas as distributors. We will be unable to give information by phone and will appreciate your cooperation. If you can qualify call Mr. E. R. McCulloch at JEfferson 3-7700 for an appointment any time after noon Sunday.

I NEED AN ASSISTANT

Nationally-known manufacturer and sales corporation will train right man for position of responsibility; earnings while training around $350 monthly; 21-45; promotion to junior executive may be attained in 3 to 6 months; group insurance benefits, also profit-sharing trust; no canvassing; car necessary. For appointment to be interviewed, call FR 1-3601 Monday 9 to 12 a.m. only.

WANTED

3 part-time men over 21 for special evening work. With high cost of food and taxes you may want to add $30 to $50 to your present income. 8 to 12 hours weekly will do it. Will not interfere with present employment; car necessary. Box G-282, Post-Dispatch.

Outstanding Opportunity
If you are over 65 years old retired, would like to supplement your income; we have openings for 2 vigorous men, who are neat appearing and have a car, for appointment phone KY 3-1769 between 10-2.

SALESMEN WANTED 83

SALESMEN

ONCE-IN-A-LIFETIME
OPPORTUNITY

Four years ago the DICTOGRAPH CORPORATION, a name famous in American Industry for more than fifty years, opened a new division; since that time, more than 150 additional offices have been opened throughout the nation, and more than 8000 men have found the career for which they had been looking all their lives.

Now we are again expanding our existing operations in Missouri and Illinois, and we are offering men of high caliber a chance that comes only once in a lifetime. You must have a car, but because of our intensive training program, we will be much more interested in appearance and personality than in experience.

If selected, you will be trained at Company Headquarters School for 3 days and then assigned to a sales force where immediate average commission earnings will exceed $150 weekly, and in some cases go as high as $25,000 yearly.

A luncheon will be held at the SHERATON HOTEL, CRYSTAL ROOM at 12 noon, Tuesday, June 28, at which time the program will be discussed in detail.

We cordially invite you to be our guest at lunch to investigate this opportunity which may be the turning point of your life.

$185.00 WEEKLY INCOME

National well rated organization will employ a limited number of ladies locally and two to travel the state. You will handle an "Impulse Sales" item which will sell on sight.

NO CANVASSING!

This is a dignified, straight selling opportunity. In cities tested local saleswomen averaged $125 to $200 weekly income. Saleswomen traveling state grossed substantially more. These figures are based on fact, not theory. This is a simple, fast, sales promotional opportunity for people used to making above average income. Ladies selected must be reliable, of responsible means and character, attractive and between the ages of 21 to 40. If you desire to travel within the state, you should be unencumbered. A car would be helpful. We will be unable to go into details over the telephone and would appreciate your co-operation. If you can qualify call Mr. E. R. McCulloch at JEfferson 3-7700 any time after noon, Sunday, and you will be booked for an interview.

COME OUT TODAY!

3-BEDROOM FRAME, $13,750

Here is the ideal plan for the medium-sized family, requiring a third bedroom. This plan offers the much-desired entrance into the hall from all 6 rooms, a design not readily available in many plans.

2-BEDROOM FRAME, $12,500

This plan designed for the smaller family requiring only 2 bedrooms. Its main features are the exceptionally large kitchen and the living room-dining room combination that is so much in demand.

4 BEDROOMS—2 BATHS

If you're the "big" family man, this plan you must see. It has 2 bedrooms on the first floor and 2 large bedrooms on the second. Also, it offers you 2 full baths, "and you just can't get them no more," in this price range.

Whatever your housing needs may be, you'll find the answer in TARA. Discover for yourself the secret behind the tremendous volume of sales in this beautiful community.

A TREMENDOUS CHIROPRACTIC VICTORY

The defeat of Medical Senate Bill No. 226 during the recent session of the legislature is a tremendous Chiropractic Victory. Much of the credit for this defeat goes to you citizens who wrote letters and interviewed members of the legislature calling their attention to the unjust aims and provisions of this bill.

It is not possible to greet all of you personally so please accept this as a hearty 'Thank You' for your efforts. It is comforting to know that when a principle involving the American way of life is in jeopardy so many will rally to its defense.

This institution, its Alumni and every Chiropractor feel forever grateful for the help you have given and as we accept it as a token of your appreciation of our work, we can go on with a renewed spirit to do our utmost for the sick and suffering.

FOR SALE IN ILLINOIS NEAR KEOKUK LAKE

A Quiet Secluded Country Home with many money-making possibilities

Among the many income-producing uses for which this unusually desirable 82-acre property is splendidly suited are . . . stock-breeding, horse-raising, corporation conference or resort use, or a home for a religious group or for convalescents.
There are two attractive residences. One lovely Colonial style home, well built and comfortably modernized, has 12 spacious rooms, 2 baths—including 5 bedrooms (1 downstairs, with a bath)—a well-equipped electric kitchen and a large screened or glass-enclosed porch. The second residence has 8 rooms, 2 baths.
The farm has more than ⅔ of its acreage in tillable land and pastures—the balance is woodland. There are 4 substantial farm buildings.
In a quiet country area, the farm is only a few minutes from the lake, the river, town facilities, Keokuk RR station and airport. Offered at $52,500 with equipment. For illus. leaflet SD-75037, ask RUSSELL COSGROVE, broker, Hamilton, Ill., or

CARDINAL HOMERS BEAT GIANTS FOR ARROYO'S 9th WIN

Bob O'Nick Is 3-Time Winner

Bob O'Nick had to rush to make it, and under the guidance of Jockey Raul Alonso the horse did so to win the fifth race at Fairmount Park last night and thereby became a three-time winner in the current meeting. Bob O'Nick made a fast bid in the stretch to win by a length from Dainty Dish.

Those among the 9193 fans present who had a daily double combination of Blazer-Hornet in the first race, and Young Romance in the second race, did rather well by their wallets. The combination returned $73.80.

In the feature seventh race, King Bebe was the winner. It was the second victory of the meeting for the horse, which has been a steady contender, finishing second on four occasions and third in two other races.

Stop, Luke and Listen

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

A battle and a long trip ended perfectly, on the steps of the Boston Red Sox dugout, for 11-year-old LUKE HOLLINGSWORTH of Elkton, Ky., yesterday. He met TED WILLIAMS, and received a baseball and an hour's conversation from the Boston star. It all began when Luke fought another youth who was so brash as to claim Cleveland's Al Rosen excels Williams. (Story on Page 3E.)

SPORTS EDITOR of the POST-DISPATCH

How Do You Like Your Baseball Questions?

ON the sports desk is a questionnaire sent to sports editors and baseball writers in the United States by a New York organization selected by Commissioner Ford Frick to conduct a survey of baseball.

The implication is that there may be something wrong with the business that is more or less loosely called our "national game," and that Frick and his club owners, or vice versa, would welcome accurate information. Another implication, at least for those who draw inferences loosely, is that baseball plans to do something about it, if anybody can pinpoint anything that's wrong with the business operation.

One weakness in the questionnaire—at least that's the way it was received in this corner—is that the answers to most of the questions are rather on the obvious side. No profound thinking is necessary and a quick conclusion is that Frick and his associates should know the answers.

After asking "If you could cover and write about one sport only, would it be baseball?" (which is none of their business), the questionnaire requests opinions on nine ideas "from the point of view of the spectator," as to whether they would serve to improve the game and build attendance.

The "ideas" are: more double-headers, shorter games faster paced, better seating conditions, better parking facilities, lower prices by concessionaires, easier ways of getting good tickets, more television coverage, less television coverage, different starting times.

Is the survey company so naive as to expect anybody to come out flatly against more convenience, more comfort, better bargains and more living room entertainment?

Then you are asked to check three of seven suggestions that "would most improve baseball over the long run."

Think: Are These Queries Necessary?

THREE of the seven leap out at a man questioned, because the answers are so obvious. They are: "A clearer policy by the major leagues for relations with minor leagues; a definite policy calling for more accessibility on the part of owners, managers and topside personnel to the press, and more attention to the comfort and convenience of spectators."

That "clearer policy" about the minors obviously should be a realization that what is ruining the minor leagues will eventually cut off the supply of major league talent, and/or impair the caliber of baseball.

Other ideas in the group involve the question of a third major league, the effect of TV coverage, the importance of owner-player problems, and whether baseball is doing a good job of selling its product.

Baseball fans may want to tell how they feel about the business most of them believe they own, in part. If so, the survey company, Stephen Fitzgerald and Co., 575 Madison avenue, New York 22, N.Y., undoubtedly would welcome communications. The questionnaire, covering 2½ pages, goes on to ask for opinions on the following: What effect has radio had on interest in baseball? What effect has television had? Does television increase or decrease attendance? How would people react to pay-as-you-see TV of ball games? How do you feel about night games? Are top-management popoffs, inter-club squabbles bad for baseball? And do you think the commissioner's office and league offices are doing a good, fair or poor job?

An answer to that last query might depend on whether your allegiance was to the owner, the players or the public. For instance, that squabble between Hank Greenberg and Paul Richards, following Billy Cox's announcement that he was going to retire, finally was settled. But we didn't think Frick was considering the ball player's side fairly when he announced that the whole deal would be called off if the two clubs couldn't reach an agreement. We felt that Frick should have told Greenberg and Richards that they absolutely and positively would have to settle the argument; and that Gene Woodling wouldn't be pushed around any more. But perhaps Frick had that in mind.

And More Questions, These on Golf Rules.

JOSEPH C. DEY, executive director, United States Golf Association, has an interesting piece in the current issue of Collier's, testing golfers' knowledge of the rules. . . . Mr. Dey knows all the answers and it would be folly to question his decisions, because he's the court that makes them stick. However, he'll have to admit that he picked a few real stupid golfers to make some of his points.

For instance: "I tee my ball and on the backswing discover that a branch of a large shrub interferes. I stop my backswing and break off the branch, contending my action is proper because the ball is not in play until I actually have struck it. Am I right?"

Mr. Dey's answer: "No, you are not permitted to improve your line of play by moving, bending or breaking anything fixed or growing, with certain exceptions which do not apply here. Your penalty is loss of the hole."

We'd like to ask Mr. Dey: Where the where was the chairman of the greens committee when the teeing ground was marked so close to an over-hanging tree? And why didn't the golfer just re-tee his ball when he found that the man had placed the marks so stupidly?

Another question in Dey's piece: "I use a club to pull my ball out from under a bush where it came to rest, counting the operation as one stroke. Did I score this correctly?

And the answer: "No, your penalty is loss of the hole for not hitting the ball 'fairly' with the clubhead."

Now, as we've seen it, the golfer, when he finds his ball under that bush, says "Pal, that's an unplayable lie. So I'll rake the ball out from under that there bush with this here 9 iron, and go back and shoot from approximately the spot where I took my last shot. I'll add one penalty stroke to my score."

And we believe Mr. Dey will agree that our friend is smarter than his.

Miss Hopps Again Wins Net Title

Janet Hopps of Seattle, Wash., the country's sixteenth ranking player, waged an uphill fight to retain the college girls' tennis tourney championship yesterday afternoon on the Washington U. courts. The 20-year-old Seattle U. co-ed dropped the first set and then changed her strategy to overcome the powerful hitting of her challenger, June Stack of Hamtranck, Mich., to win 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Miss Stack, ninth ranking junior girls' player last year and recent winner of the Eastern Collegiate title at Bryn Mawr College, started out with a 2-0 lead in the first set and built this up to a 5-2 margin. She missed on a set point at this stage of the match before Miss Hopps rallied to take two more games.

In the second set the champion maintained the lead after taking the initial game on her serve. Miss Stack won the second, seventh and eighth games.

The third set resulted in a real struggle. Miss Hopps took the first game on Miss Stack's service but dropped the next three to trail, 3-1. The Seattle player went out in front, 4-3, and then trailed, 5-4, before winning the next three for her victory. In that final set the first game score went to deuce 10 times and the same was true for the eighth game. In her critical tenth game Miss Stack failed to break Miss Hopps's serve to win the match.

Game score of the Hopps-Stack match:

FIRST SET
Hopps — — 1 2 4 2 3 5 6 8 4 1—36—4
Stack — — 4 4 0 4 5 7 4 6 1 4—39—6
SECOND SET
Hopps— — — 4 3 4 4 4 7 3 1 4—34—6
Stack — — — 1 2 2 0 5 5 4 2—24—3
THIRD SET
Stack— 8 4 4 5 2 2 1 10 4 2 2 1—45—5
Hopps 10 2 2 3 4 4 4 8 1 4 4 4—50—7

Miss Hopps, winner of Washington, Oregon and Northwestern championships during the past two years, will strive to gain the Missouri Valley women's title next week at Winfield, Kan. It will be her first Valley meet. She played No. 1 position on the Seattle U. team during past two years. Miss Hopps possesses an all round aggressive game but found it hard to keep up with her opponent's terrific placements in the final. Miss Stack is 19 years of age, a student at Michigan State Normal, won the National Indoor junior girls' title last winter at Boston.

Miss Hopps paired with Jeanne Arth of St. Paul, singles runnerup last year here, to defeat Marilyn Montgomery of San Antonio and Jane Ellingson of Arizona U. in the doubles final, 6-2, 6-3. Miss Arth and Sally Reilley of Kansas City won the doubles in 1954.

In the semifinal doubles matches, played on private courts yesterday morning, Misses Hopps and Arth beat Carole Boshard and Lois Weinstein, 6-3, 6-2. Misses Montgomery and Ellingson defeated Misses Stack and Reilley, 2-6, 6-4, 6-1.

Speedboat Driver Dies In Collision

DETROIT, June 25 (AP)—Bill Cantrell drove his Gale IV to victory today in the unlimited class of the Detroit Memorial speedboat regatta today as five boats crashed in the blinding spray of the first heat and a driver in a smaller class was killed in a second collision.

The fatality was the first in the long history of speedboating on the Detroit River. Lloyd Maddock, 51, of Pontiac, Mich., died almost immediately after a crash of Holiday, which he was driving, and Little Audrey, driven by Harry Vogel of Dearborn, Mich., in the 135-cubic-inch class. Vogel was injured seriously.

Cantrell swept to victory in the first 15-mile heat in an average time of 93.729 miles per hour and also copped the second heat with a 92.028 MPH average. He finished third to a sister boat, Gale V, in the third heat. The Gale boats are owned by Joe Schoenith of Detroit.

Gale IV ran up a point total of 1,025 points to 925 for Gale V, the second place finished. Back of the leaders came George Simon's Miss U.S. with 825 points followed by Such Crust III with 565, Tempo VII, 391 and Wha Hoppen Too with 283 points.

Two drivers were injured slightly in the first heat crash. Miss Cadillac, My Sweetie, Short Circuit and Canada's Miss Supertest were forced out of the race. Tempo VII, singer Guy Lombardo's new boat, also was involved but not damaged.

Jack Ban, My Sweetie's pilot, was taken to a hospital for leg X-rays. Chuck Thompson, Short Circuit's driver, received hospital treatment for facial cuts.

Going into the first turn of the opening 15-mile heat, witnesses said five of the 10 starters were bunched together. Miss Cadillac skidded into Miss Supertest. The resulting melee, My Sweetie was sandwiched in between and both sponsors were broken.

All three came into the pits. My Sweetie in a sinking condition.

Ban was hurled from his cock-

SCORE 5 TO 3; MUSIAL, MOON, SCHOENDIENST PUT IT OVER

By Bob Broeg

Luis Arroyo, the Cardinals' pitching candidate for the All-Star game and rookie-of-the-year honors in the National League, hitched up his belt in the pinches last night and hurled with a determination that must have impressed Leo Durocher as well as his teammates and 15,821 Busch Stadium patrons.

With the stubby southpaw star choking off all except one New York threat on a night when he obviously didn't have his customary control, the Redbirds rode to a 5-3 victory—Arroyo's ninth against only two defeats—on home runs by Wally Moon, Red Schoendienst and Stan Musial.

Moon and another St. Louis outfielder, Rip Repulski, contributed two standout defensive plays that helped Arroyo hurdle the Giants. Except, however, for slow-reacting by ailing Ken Boyer at shortstop, Lefty Luis might have had a shutout even though he yielded eight hits and issued seven walks.

12 Giants Stranded.

The fact that the portly pride of Puerto Rico finished what he started again, forcing the world champions to strand 12 runners with clutch pitching, might be expected to have impressed Durocher, who'll pick the National League's staff for the annual inter-league dream game with the American League July 12 at Milwaukee. Leo the Lion always did admire Moxie.

If Durocher needs a few more facts and figures to help make up his mind, Arroyo has 32 per cent of the Cardinals' victories and owns a 2.01 earned run average that is the lowest in the league. In 93⅔ innings he has yielded only 75 hits and 21 earned runs, walked 31 and fanned 41. Significantly, too, when the home run is rampant in baseball, Arroyo has served only six fat pitches.

It was, as mentioned, the home-run ball that won for the Redbirds and beat Jim Hearn last night as the Cardinals collected nine hits, three by Moon and two by Nelson Burbrink, the well-seasoned catching newcomer who was relieved midway in the game when Manager Harry Walker wondered—with some wisdom—whether regular batterymate Bill Sarni might help Arroyo zero into the strike zone.

Why Wait for the 4th?

Moon's tenth homer, a line shot into the pavilion near the 354-foot mark where the screen used to end, followed a single by Solly Hemus in the first inning. The Giants went ahead briefly in the fourth, but in the home half Schoendienst walloped his seventh circuit smash to the right field roof, tying the score. And in the fifth after Moon singled, Musial golfed a low pitch into the pavilion for his thirteenth homer.

That was enough for Arroyo, who had proved as early as the third inning that, though his aim might be off, his heart still was in the right place as he hurled out of a tense jam.

With one out Al Dark was credited with a sharp bad-hopping single through Musial and pulled up at third on Whitey Lockman's double to right-center. Here, Arroyo dipped sidearmed to strike out hard-to-fool Don Mueller, probably the most difficult man in the league to fan and the author of three hits eventually. Then after yielding an intentional pass to Willie Mays, filling the bases, Luis stopped Henry Thompson on an infield fly.

In the fourth, thanks to Moon and his own efforts, Arroyo seemed to have pitched out of a corner, too. After an inning-opening pass to Ray Katt, Moon charged in and slid on his chest to snatch Wayne Terwilliger's low line drive. Gail Harris also walked and both he and Katt advanced on a wild pitch. Hearn struck out, however. And after Dark was passed purposely to load the bases again, Lockman grounded slowly to Boyer.

Mueller Drives In Two.

Whitey seemed a certain out, but Boyer, back at shortstop after a night off with a stiff back, aggravated the injury, it was reported, as he played the ball awkwardly, and, as a result, Lockman hustled his way to a run-scoring infield hit. And Mueller then singled through the middle for two more tallies.

Arroyo walked the leadoff

Sowell 'Redeems' Self, Beats World 880 Mark

BOULDER, Colo., June 25 (UP)—Arnie Sowell of Pittsburgh, driven by a desire to vindicate his lazy failure in the N.C.A.A. championship last week, unofficially bettered the world record in the National A.A.U. 880-yard finals today by a full second.

Despite the rare atmosphere of the 5000-foot altitude at the University of Colorado here, Sowell set such a blistering pace from the start that four other runners beat the A.A.U. meet record trying to keep up with him. Lonnie Spurrier, who earlier this year also bettered the world 880-yard mark of 1:48.6, matched Sowell stride for stride for the first 440 yards today but finished fifth.

Despite low, rain-heavy clouds and occasional sprinkles, a crowd of 13,500 showed up for A.A.U. championships at Folsom Field. They had hoped to see Sowell, Mal Whitfield and Wes Santee vie in the 880, but Santee entered only the mile and Whitfield chose the 440. The 880 turned out to be the finest event of the two-day meet, just the same.

In the preliminaries of the 220-yard dash, Texas University's Dean Smith equaled the A.A.U. mark of :21.1 around a curve in winning his semi-final heat.

But Rod Richard of the Army won the final in a flat 21 seconds, breaking the A.A.U. record set by Art Bragg in St. Louis in 1954. Dick Blair of Kansas University was second in :21.1, and Smith could do no better than fifth.

Frank Held of the San Francisco Olympic Club, the world champion, won the javelin with a throw of 260 feet, 3 inches, boosting his own A.A.U. record again. He had topped his 1954 A.A.U. record of 249 feet, 8 inches with a throw of 253 feet, 11½ inches in the preliminaries yesterday. But his best throw today was more than three feet off his 1953 world record.

Victor Paredes of the Cuban National Physical Education Institute won the hop, step and jump today with a 50-foot, 3-inch effort. Ken Reiser of the Eugene, Ore., Town Club took the two-mile steeplechase in 10:20.7, a good eight seconds ahead of Bill Ashenfelter of the New York Athletic Club.

Sowell's time today was 1:47.6. Spurrier's mark of 1:47.5 is now being considered for official world record status. If it is rejected, then Sowell's time will have a chance at world recognition.

Mal Whitfield established the recognized world record in 1953. Gunnar Nielsen of Denmark tied it in 1954.

'If It Kills Me.'

Sowell "fell asleep" last week in the N.C.A.A. meet at Los Angeles, and failed to qualify for the 880-yard finals. He considered himself disgraced, and came here vowing to "set the pace if it kills me."

When he burst through the tape, the full effect of running in an atmosphere 20 per cent less dense than at sea level hit him and Sowell collapsed into a near-faint. But he recovered in time to receive the accolade of "outstanding athlete" at the end of the A.A.U. championships.

After Spurrier dropped out of contention, Tom Courtney of Fordham and Billy Tidwell of Kansas State Teachers College

GOLF

Snead vs. Hogan?

TED NEIST, St. Louis Country Club professional, brought the story back from the National Open. Sam Snead would like to have a cross-country, man-to-man competition with Ben Hogan.

Snead, said Neist, asserted he couldn't play his best unless he could keep one eye on Hogan and that was a bit difficult in the Open.

The idea of a Snead vs. Hogan series lights a spark in any golf fan's eye. It would "pack 'em in." Either player by himself still is a sure-fire exhibition attraction and if there were an added element of competition, it would bring out a crowd in any city, town or hamlet.

It's a question now, of course, whether Hogan would engage in such a series. His golf club business is his primary concern and he has indicated that he won't again try to prepare assiduously for any of the big tournaments.

The last time Hogan and Snead met man to man, Snead was the winner. That was in the 1954 playoff for the Masters crown.

Air-Conditioned.

GOLF cars, these three- and four-"wheeled" runabouts that are growing more numerous on the links these days, have come to this: A man in Texas, reports Algonquin's Spencer Gould, has built an enclosed outfit that is air-conditioned.

The golfmobiles have not become so very common on St. Louis courses. Some clubs have adapted regulations closely restricting their use, barring them for all but a few who because of age or health may need them.

But it's a growing business for manufacturers and it's easy to see, on such up-and-down golf courses as Des Moines's Wakonda Club, how members would go in a hurry for that type of locomotion.

The low-slung, electric buggies usually carry two players, side-by-side, with their golf bags in a rack behind them. The speed is about 10 to 15 miles per hour and the carriers will go uphill with ease, the makers claim.

Not mentioned, of course, is a characteristic of those with a single steering wheel in front. If the operator doesn't watch his ruts, he is apt to find himself pitched out on turf that is not always as soft as it is right now.

"Most of the few thousand cars now in operation," reports a national business publication, "are concentrated on the Pacific Coast (the swanky Thunderbird course in Palm Springs has a fleet of 180), the Southwest and Southern resort areas.

"But bigger builders are feeing off for the lush markets of the East, which has the greatest geographical concentration of golf courses in the country."

The United States Golf Association is on record as opposing, if not barring, the use of golf cars in tournaments. And many clubs don't want them because they can be rough on the turf under wet, soft conditions.

Rules Clinics Needed.

BOB WALKER of South Bend, Ind., a former Western Golf Association director, suggests one of the great needs in golf is the holding of rules clinic sessions.

Young players would be greatly benefitted by such schooling, the one-time golf official said, especially by a review of the basic rules, not the more knotty problems that usually are decided by official interpretations of the rules.

Also, said Walker, a round-table discussion of rules following a club invitation event can be a lot of fun as well as instructive.

Sometimes fundamental rules are ignored by the tournament committee. In these last few drouth years, an old St. Louis habit of "teeing" the ball in the fairway became rather common again. But it was with some astonishment that golfers noticed the women teeing the ball with the clubhead during their district title event last week at Algonquin. . . . The course was in good condition and there was no particular need. . . . The women, usually sticklers for the rules book, apparently just booted one on this occasion.

Despite the teeing up, the scoring done by the winner, Marilyn Herpel Conroy, was impressive. With further practice—she had played relatively little this spring—she should be ready to make a strong bid for a third straight Missouri state title at Kansas City's Indian Hills July 18.

Dutch Harrison is eyeing the golf calendar again. If business slows at Old Warson with the hot weather, he has ideas about the St. Paul and Milwaukee Open events, the P.G.A. and Tam O'Shanter. . . . But if business is good here, Dutch will stay close by.

White Sox Homers Lift Dixie Howell Over Boston

NEW YORK, June 25 (UP)—Jim Konstanty, the 38-year-old comeback kid of the year, turned in his second sparkling relief performance in less than 24 hours today to gain credit for the New York Yankees' 3-2 triumph over the Cleveland Indians.

Konstanty, who won Friday night's 2-1, 10-inning opener of a four-game series, held the Indians to one hit in three innings today to pick up his sixth triumph of the year without a loss. The six victories already give him the fourth highest single-season win total of his career.

The victory stretched the Yankees' lead over the third-place Indians to six games and left them two ahead of the second-place Chicago White Sox, who beat the Boston Red Sox, 8-3. The Detroit Tigers downed the Washington Senators, 4-0, and the Kansas City Athletics played a rain-halted, 10-inning, 3-3 tie with the Baltimore Orioles in the other American League games.

In the National League, the runaway Brooklyn Dodgers beat the Milwaukee Braves, 5-3, as Don Newcombe won his thirteenth game, and the Chicago Cubs defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6-4. Philadelphia and Cincinnati were rained out.

Al Smith homered behind a walk to Bobby Avila to give the Indians a 2-0 lead in the sixth inning but the Yankees tied the score again in the last half of the frame, when Gil McDougald singled and Yogi Berra homered. The Yankees scored the winning run off Art Houtteman in the next inning when Andy Carey doubled and pinch-hitter Bob Cerv singled. Smith also doubled and had 4 for 4 for the day.

Jim Busby, Sherman Lollar and Wait Dropo hit homers to pace an 11-hit White Sox attack that gave 35-year-old Rookie Dixie Howell his first major league win. Howell yielded only six hits and one run in 6⅓ innings of relief hurling.

Steve Gromek tossed a four-hitter for his seventh victory as the Tigers dealt the Senators their eighth consecutive defeat. Earl Torgeson drove in two Detroit runs and every Tiger hit safely except Bill Tuttle.

Doubles by Hal Smith and Hoot Evers in the ninth enabled the Orioles to tie the Athletics in a game played in a steady rain and finally halted after 10 innings. The contest was delayed for 45 minutes in the first inning and the remainder of it was played under the lights.

Newcombe became the first National League pitcher to beat every rival and also treated himself to three hits that raised his season's batting average to .451. Brooklyn's Paul Bunyan needed help in the ninth inning, however, and got it from Karl Spooner, who got the last out. The loss was charged to Gene Conley, who yielded three runs in the fifth inning after being hit on the arm by a liner by Newcombe. It was Brooklyn's fiftieth victory of the year.

Warren Hacker retired 20 of the last 22 Pirates to gain his eighth victory for the Cubs. Eddie Miksis, Dee Fondy and Walker Cooper drove in all Chicago's runs while Jerry Lynch homered for Pittsburgh.

man again in the fifth and once more in the seventh, but there was no further excitement until Mueller, first up, singled in the ninth and Mays lined a full-count pitch to the left field wall, where Repulski leaped and one-handed the ball. Thompson and Katt were easy outs to end the game.

And with just enough hitting and fielding help, Yo-Yo Arroyo had pitched himself a step closer toward Mucho Dinero next year and perhaps All-Star team and rookie-of-the-year recognition this season.

Redbird Notes.

HARVEY (4-8) Haddix and Larry (2-4) Jackson of the Cardinals probably will be opposed by Southpaw Johnny (6-8) Antonelli and Righthander Ramon (0-2) Monzant of the Giants in this afternoon's doubleheader beginning at 1:30.

Stan Musial went into last night's game only five short of the 2500-hit mark, achieved by 36 players in Major League baseball history. In addition, Jim Toomey of the Cardinals and Cliff Kachline of the Sporting News dug up the fact that The Man could become only the eighth player with 1000 extra-base hits by getting 22 more long hits. Mel Ott holds with the National League record with 1071. Musial has 520 doubles, 154 triples and 304 homers.

A pressbox visitor was Jimmy Burns, sports editor of the Miami (Fla.) Herald.

August A. Busch, Jr., president of the Cardinals, will hold his third annual party for the ball players and their families tomorrow afternoon at Grant's Farm.

St. Louisans Lose In Chicago Regatta

CHICAGO, June 25 (AP) — John Brune and Richard Brandt of the St. Louis Central Rowing Club lost to Paul Eberhardt and Richard Melee, St. Paul, in the heavy double race of the Central States Amateur Rowing Association Regatta today. The time was 6:36.

Chicago's Lincoln Park Boat Club scored 127 points in junior events to take the lead.

The regatta will close tomorrow after the senior events.

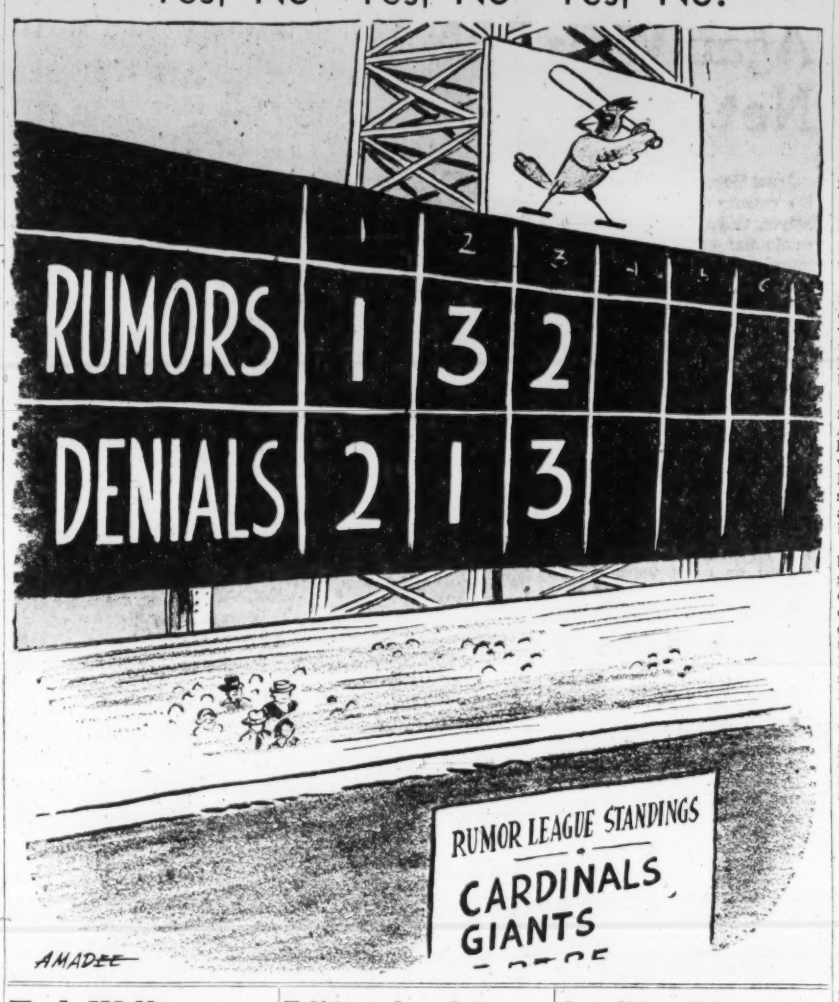

St. Paul Rowing Club landed in second place with 57 points after the Lincoln Park heavyweight beat St. Paul by five lengths in covering the mile in 5:34.

Missouri U. Again Tops Big Seven in Four Major Sports

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 25—The University of Missouri again had the best composite record in the four major sports in which Big Seven Conference schools compete, statistics showed today.

The Tigers placed second in basketball and indoor track, third in outdoor track and tied for third in football.

Ted Williams May Return to Lineup Today

BOSTON, June 25 (AP)—Ted Williams, the Boston Red Sox slugging outfielder with a .387 average, sat out his second straight game today with a muscular disorder in his back but may be in the lineup Sunday.

"It's nothing serious," Manager Mike Higgins said before the game. "It's just one of those things that needs attention and Ted will rest again today."

The amazing Williams, hustling harder than ever at 36 and handicapped by little more than two weeks of preparation before he was inserted in the lineup May 28, is bothered by cool, damp night air. It was such a night, last Tuesday, when Ted got the muscular pain.

Despite the trouble he blasted a three-run home run in the eighth inning that beat Detroit 5-4.

The next day Williams walloped three doubles — curving two of them to left field (he's a lefthand hitter). Afterward he explained why he hit to the "wrong" field:

"I've been so stiff I don't have much whip in my swing."

Thursday Williams got a single and drew three walks before being pulled for a pinchrunner.

At the start of Friday night's game, opening a weekend series with Chicago, Higgins decided on a double precautionary measure by leaving Ted out—not risking further damage to the soreness and not subjecting him to the cool night air.

T-Shirt to Law Suit: Firm Sues 9 Braves

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 25 (UP)—Nine Milwaukee Braves players were sued for a total of $62,000 today for alleged breach of contract with a firm which wanted to use their names on various products.

Braves Pitcher Warren Spahn and Third Baseman Eddie Mathews were sued for $10,000 each. Suits of $6000 each were filed against others.

Harry Zaidins, attorney for the Braves players, said some 60 other major league players were involved in the same case.

Zaidins said the players originally signed contracts with Scott Douglas, Inc., New York, for the use of the players' names on T-shirts, photographs and similar articles. Zaidins said the firm then assigned the contracts to Preferred Products Co., Milwaukee, without the players' consent. He said he notified the Milwaukee firm four months ago that the players would not honor the contracts.

He said the athletes were paid "less than $100 each" under terms of the original contracts.

pit. His body narrowly missed an observation cruiser. He was picked from the water by coast guardsmen.

Thompson, who finished out the heat won by Bill Cantrell in Gayle IV, said, "I was blinded by spray and thrown against my dash, smashing my goggles."

None of the drivers seemed to know just what happened. High spray obscured vision from shore.

Before the race, officials had considered running the first heat in sections because of the size of the field. The drivers had agreed to the plan should more than 10 of the unlimited horsepower craft be entered. But just 10 boats answered the starting signal.

Souchak Leads Western Open By Two Strokes

PORTLAND, Ore., June 25 (UP)—Big Mike Souchak, booming balls three city blocks, carded a hot 67 for an 11-under par 54-hole total of 205 today to lead the field into Sunday's final round of the Western Open Golf tournament here.

Souchak, of Durham, N.C., fired six birdies and had trouble only on the par three 12th hole where he three-putted. He was tied for second place at 138 with Bob Rosburg of San Francisco before teeing off this afternoon.

Holder of the P.G.A. 72-hole record set last February at San Antonio, the 210-pound former Duke football playeer was deadly with drives, irons and putts. However, the shot that brought squeals from the great gallery around the 18th green was a blast out of a deep bunker.

Souchak, his head barely visible to the hushed crowd, slammed into the ball. It soared over the pin, over the green and onto the apron. Groans were caught in spectators' throats as the ball suddenly skidded sharply backward onto the green, stopping within eight feet of the hole. Souchak got his par.

Most of the excitement of the tourney was centered on that green at that moment. Gene Littler of Palm Springs, Calif., missed an 18-inch putt to take a 69 for 208.

Ralph Blomquist of Glendale, Calif., dropped his short putt for another 67 and a 54-hole total of 207 to finish in second place with second-day pace setter Billy Maxwell of Odessa, Tex., and Rosburg.

Slammer Sam Snead also carded a hot 67 today to finish with a 209, four strokes off Souchak's sizzling pace in the $15,000 four-day tournament being played over the par 72 Portland golf club course.

Snead missed his sixth birdie by the width of a few blades of grass, but he favored his right leg. His only comment on the recurrence of his old hip and knee trouble was that it was giving him "a little trouble."

Manager Suspended For Bumping Umpire

MONTREAL, June 25 (AP)—Reggie Otero, manager of the Havana Cuban Sugar Kings, was suspended indefinitely today by President Frank Shaughnessy of the International Baseball League for misconduct during last night's game at Columbus.

Otero bumped Umpire Bob Smith several times during the fifth inning, after Smith had ejected Outfielder Pedro Formental for throwing his bat. Columbus won the game, 3-2.

Trabert and Patty Only Yanks in Wimbledon Quarterfinals

BETWEEN ROUNDS

by W. J. McGoogan

Marciano Will Have To Be at His Best.

ODDSMAKERS have established Rocky Marciano, heavyweight champion of the world, as a 5 to 12 favorite over Archie Moore, who holds the 175-pound title, even before the match between the two has been made.

It is expected that the bout will be held in Yankee Stadium in September and while Marciano rates his position of favorite, he will have to be better than he was at San Francisco when he knocked out Don Cockell of England in the ninth round.

Betting men are basing their predictions as to Marciano and Moore on the line through Ezzard Charles. Charles defeated Moore three times, once by a knockout. Marciano defeated Charles on a 15-round decision, then knocked out Charles in eight rounds.

So how can Moore hope to beat Charles, they ask?

Well, for the first and most important thing, Marciano will be fighting Moore. Charles won't be in the ring and what he did or did not do against either man doesn't count.

Moore is a fine boxer and he can hit, too. Marciano is one who cuts easily, as has been proved ih his important matches, and Moore's short, sharp blows may mess up Marciano enough so that a doctor or referee will order the match stopped.

Certainly the longer it goes, the tougher it will be for the champion.

Monroe Harrison, former boxer here, now a custodian at a school, who is probably closer to Moore than anybody else, is strongly of the opinion that Archie has what it takes to defeat Marciano.

"Archie will have to stay away from Marciano and box him," Harrison said. "He can't let Marciano bull him around but if Archie is satisfied with jabbing the champion, I believe he will be able to cut him up so badly that the bout will be stopped. You know that Marciano has been cut many times before and that scar tissue just won't stand up under the kind of punching Archie will give Marciano."

Marciano against Cockell gave conclusive evidence that he can't remain out of action months at a time and be at his best. He has demonstrated that before and always his second bout following another by a few months has found him in much better form.

He'll have to be at his best against Moore, regardless of the comparison on the basis of what each did against Charles.

Rocky can't miss wild swings as he did against Cockell, and as he has done on other occasions, when Moore is his opponent, without taking severe punishment. Moore can hit in the heavyweight class and he's a good boxer, too, a combination which should prove very difficult for Marciano.

Rocky, however, very likely will be much better in September than he was in May. That has been the case before. He has always shown to much better advantage with a fight under his belt.

Moore, and his manager, Charley Johnston, expect that. Even in their discussions the day after Moore kayoed Olson in three rounds in New York, Johnston and Moore were agreed that Archie could anticipate fighting a better Marciano than the one who kayoed Cockell.

The match, of course, has not been made as yet. But the pressure on Al Weill, manager of Marciano, has been so great (and likely will become greater) that there is hardly a doubt that he will sign soon, if he hasn't already done so, in effect.

Two other St. Louis boxers, besides Moore, are much in the limelight today. Virgil Akins has been cutting a swath through the welterweight ranks and Sonny Liston created a good impression when he knocked out Emil Brtko in Pittsburgh, recently.

Akins has a match coming up with Andrew Brown in New Orleans soon and he may appear in important matches here during the next indoor season.

Liston, a big, strong heavyweight, has had trouble getting matches and probably will experience more difficulty in the future but reports in the east are that he could be moved into important spots, with proper handling.

Doris Hart, Three Other U.S. Women Advance

WIMBLEDON, England, June 25 (UP)—United States prospects of winning the Wimbledon men's tennis championship became the bleakest in several years today when only Tony Trabert survived an American "Black Saturday" to join Budge Patty in the quarterfinal round.

Trabert, the top-seeded tournament player from Cincinnati, O., scored a 6-4, 6-2, 6-2 victory over Naersh Kumar, India's Davis Cup captain, but appeared to be below his best form.

Three Californians who had reached the fourth round—Art Larsen of San Leandro, Gil Shea of Presidio and Bob Perry of Los Angeles—all were eliminated. Patty, seeded seventh, gained the quarterfinals with a victory on Friday.

Lurking in the path of an American men's singles championship were Ken Rosewall and Lew Hoad, Australia's two top stars who impressed the teeming Wimbledon galleries with their victories today far more than did Trabert.

As a result of the Aussies' excellent performances, British bookmakers revised their odds on the tournament entries. Rosewall was installed favorite to win, while Trabert was knocked down to second choice. Hoad was moved up to third choice.

Giant-Killer Shea is Out.

Hoad the fourth-seeded men's competitor, demonstrated an overwhelming service and a casual grace that indicated he was in peak form as he eliminated Larsen, 6-4, 6-4, 6-8, 6-3. Jaroslav Drobny of Egypt, the defending champion, eliminated Perry, 8-6, 6-3, 6-4; while Shea was beaten by Nicolo Pietrangeli, Italy's unorthodox Davis cupper, 2-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

Rosewall gained the quarterfinals by beating Giuseppe Merlo of Italy, who retired because of an injury from a fall in the third set. Rosewall led 6-4, 6-1, 2-1 at the time. Kurt Nielsen of Denmark also reached the round-of-eight with a 4-6, 6-1, 6-4, 6-3 triumph over Abe Segal of South Africa.

The quarterfinal pairings will be: Rosewall vs. Sven Davidson of Sweden, who reached the quarterfinals on Friday; Pietrangeli vs. Nielsen; Patty vs. Hoad, and Drobny vs. Trabert. Both Americans are in the bottom half of the draw. Pietrangeli and Nielsen are the only unseeded quarterfinal survivors.

United States women fared far better than the men, advancing four players to the quarterfinals. Doris Hart of St. Louis, Mo., and Coral Gables, Fla.; Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif.; Dorothy Head Knode of Alameda, Calif., and Darlene Hard of Montebello, Calif., all won in straight sets. They are seeded 1-2-5-6 in that order. Still another United States girl in the fourth round—third-seeded Beverly Baker Fleitz of Long Beach, Calif., was not scheduled to play today.

Miss Hart Winner.

Miss Hart trounced Josefa De Riba of Spain, 6-1, 6-3; Miss Brough eliminated Heather Brewer of Bermuda, 6-2, 6-2; Mrs. Knode whipped Shirley Bloomer of England, 6-2, 6-2, and Miss Hard beat Mary Carter of Australia, 6-3, 6-3.

Despite the fact that he won his fourth consecutive straight-sets match, Trabert did not appear sharp today. He appeared to be playing only at half-pace against the nimble but outclassed Kumar.

Shea, who on Thursday eliminated United States champion Vic Seixas in the third round, became exasperated with Pietrangeli's slowed-down offensive and permitted his own game to disintegrate. The curly haired Italian, who is built like a football fullback, put a great deal of cut on his shots and gave himself plenty of time to get into position for volleys at the net. The Italian's game was erratic, but as the match progressed Shea's double-faults and faulty ground strokes increased.

RECORD PLAYER WILLIE ISN'T ROCKIN' AND ROLLIN' LIKE LAST SEASON, BUT HIS HOTEL ROOM IS JUMPIN'

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

WILLIE MAYS, New York Giants outfielder who played sensationally in their pennant drive last season, relaxes in his hotel room here. He keeps his record player spinning, preferring the "rock and roll" records and Frank Sinatra pieces. Willie's batting is down a bit this season and so are the Giants.

By Jack Rice

Gary Crosby was making faces and he looked like a Crosby singing for his supper but the face on the television set and the song in the air in Willie Mays's hotel room didn't match. The singer being heard was Jo Stafford, analyzing a love affair gone wrong. There didn't seem much hope for its reform, either.

Giants Centerfielder Mays did not consider this a conflict in entertainment. He had the television picture on and the sound off, not because he prefers crooners that way, but because it brightens up the room with various, silent faces. For listening, he carries his own stock of music.

"I like it this way," Mays said of his parlay in sight and sound. He put a hand on a portable record player, loaded to its spindle top with 45 r.p.m. records. The top record had written across its label, "Property of Ruben Gomez."

"You can get the music you want," said Mays, "and nobody busts in on it, trying to sell you something." On the television screen, a box of soap was the darling of the camera's eye, as boxes of soap will be. Willie looked at it, unmoved because the urging to rush right out and buy was unheard. Something about "The Way You Left Me" was playing on the record machine.

Rock, Roll and Sinatra.

"Rock and roll music," Mays said, answering a question. "I like that. What? Oh, it's old favorites, brought back and changed. Jazzed up, you know. I like Sinatra, too. Got six or seven of him along this trip."

His attachment to popular music, of all weight divisions, and the machine that plays it is more secure than his attachment to other things, such as his wallet and his room-mate, Monte Irvin. He lost the wallet, and he lost Irvin, en route to St. Louis.

The wallet has been returned to him. Friend-and-counselor Irvin probably won't be coming back to Willie. Time, and the Giants' difficulties resembling last year's champions, made a back-to-the-minors case of Irvin Friday. It completed a most unusual week for Willie Mays, centerfielder without peer, as the kids tell it to one another between innings of the stick-ball games in Harlem, and disk-jockey without portfolio.

Before Irvin left, Mays had been benched. To make the picture and the contrast to things past complete, they should have draped the 1954 pennant around him as he sat there, watching others play.

You Just Gotta Laugh.

"Willie's unhappy," said a New York sportswriter. "You can tell it because he laughs only twice every five minutes, instead of every minute on the minute." In his room, spinning a dozen records on his forefinger while the tuned-low record player worked at spinning through another dozen, Mays recognized out loud that there are troubles in this world.

"I'll miss Monte, he was like a father to me," he said. "Guess I'll be rooming by myself a while now. You gotta keep on laughing. That's the true champion, I guess; takes the downs with the ups. There's an awful lot of front-runners in this world."

The record player made sounds that indicated a ruptured relay or bone chips in the needle. Mays nodded approvingly. Rock and roll.

Williams's Small-Fry Defender Finds His Hero Worth Battle

Luke arrived by bus in Boston from Elkton (pop. 1300), some 1250 miles away.

The Red Sox rolled out the welcome mat for their small-fry fan from the South. He met his No. 1 hero—slugger Williams. They sat and talked for an hour and Ted, out of the lineup with a sore back, gave him an autographed baseball and picture.

During the game, Luke had the special Red Sox box atop the grandstand all to himself. He explained that residents of Elkton took up a collection ($64) to send him to Boston after his battle in a drugstore with "Dogface."

The small, thin youngster virtually was adopted by the Red Sox players en masse. When he entered the clubhouse after the game, Luke found himself grabbed by Catcher Sammy White and a rugged-looking fellow in street clothes—Heavyweight Boxing Champion Rocky Marciano.

Asked if he knew Rocky, Luke replied:

"Sure, he's the champeen. I ain't never seen him, but I heard him fight."

Rocky had Luke flex his muscles, then tested them. He pronounced the boy fit.

Luke finally called it a day. It was like a dream. The dream will resume tomorrow — when Luke will be Williams' guest at a doubleheader.

Sowell Runs Record 880 in A.A.U. Meet

came on to challenge Sowell. Courtney, clocked at 1:48.0, placed second, a stride behind the inspired Sowell. Tidwell was third in 1:48.-. Lang Stanley of the air force was fourth in 1:48.6, and Spurrier was fifth in 1:48.7.

Charles Pratt of the New York Pioneer Club won the 220-yard low hurdles in the fair time of :23.5, with Tirrell Burton of Miami (O.) University second and Arnold Jackson of West Chester State Teachers third, both timed in :23.6.

The two-mile walk was won by Henry Laskau of New York's Ninety-second street YMHA, in 15:09.4.

Whitfield Loses.

In the 440-yard dash, Villanova's Charley Jenkins left the once invincible Mal Whitfield and defending champion Jim Lea far behind today, but threatened no records.

Jenkins, who finished second to Oklahoma A&M's Jim Mashburn in 46.8 seconds at last week's NCAA championships in Los Angeles, turned in a good 46.7 time today—one-tenth of a second off Lea's AAU record.

Lea finished in 47 seconds flat today, followed by Dick Maiocco of the New York Pioneer Club, 47.1. Whitfield, of Los Angeles Athletic Club and a rapidly fading American track hero, ran fourth after electing to compete in the 440 instead of defending his half-mile AAU title. His time was a weak 47.7.

Mashburn, who did not compete here today, won the NCAA 440 in 46.6. The world mark is 46 seconds flat.

Parry O'Brien of the Air Force became a two-event winner by whipping world champion Fortune Gordien of the Los Angeles Athletic Club in the discus. O'Brien won the shot put, of which he is the acknowledged world master, yesterday.

Gordien's best toss today was only 174 feet, six inches—20 feet shy of his world record and 13 inches less than O'Brien's winning throw.

Bob Backus of the New York Athletic Club, unable to retain his hammer throw AAU title yesterday against Tom Connolly's American record heave, established the second new American record of this meet today in the 56-pound weight. He slung the weight 43 feet, five inches to better his own record set in 1954 by 11 and one-quarter inches.

440-YARD DASH—Won by Charles Jenkins, Villanova; Jim Lea, Air Force, second; Dick Maiocco, New York Pioneer Club, third; Mal Whitfield, Los Angeles Athletic Club, fourth; Russ Ellis, Los Angeles, fifth; Don Ward, Indiana, sixth. Time, :46.7.

THREE-MILE RUN—Won by Horace Ashenfelter, New York Athletic Club; Gordon McKenzie, New York Pioneer Club, second; Bob Hunt, Los Angeles Athletic Club, third; Dick Hart, Colleg-iate Track and Field Club, fourth; Al Frame, Kansas, fifth; Max Truex, Los Angeles Athletic Club, sixth. Time, 14:45.2.

56-LB. WEIGHT—Won by Bob Backus, New York Athletic Club, 43 feet 5 inches; Stephen Dillon, New York Athletic Club, second, 35-0; Frank Berst, New York Athletic Club, third, 34-4; Stewart Thomson, Yale Athletic Association, fourth, 33-9¾; Phil Sweet, Chicago University Track Club, fifth, 32-2½; Vincent Gatullo, Fort Carson, Colo., sixth, 32-0¾. (New American and A.A.U. record; old A.A.U. record 42-5¼ by Backus, 1954; old American record 42-5¾ by Backus, 1954.)

TWO-MILE WALK—Won by Henry Laskau, New York 92nd St. Y.M.C.A.; John Humeke, Army, second; Bruce McDonald, New York Pioneer Club, third; Eugene Chicura, Army, fourth; Elliott Denman, New York Pioneer Club, fifth; Armer Gustafson, Santa Clara, Calif., Youth Center, sixth. Time, 15:09.4.

DISCUS—Won by Parry O'Brien, Air Force, 175 feet 7 inches; Fortune Gordien, Los Angeles Athletic Club, second, 174-6; Des Koch, Los Angeles Athletic Club, third, 171-10½; Don Drummond, Los Angeles Athletic Club, fourth, 169-2; Jack Ellis, New York Athletic Club, fifth, 167-1; Wendon Linn, Santa Clara Youth Center, sixth, 164-8½.

880-YARD RUN—Won by Arnold Sowell, Pittsburgh; Tom Courtney, Fordham, second; Billy Tidwell, Emporia (Kan.) State Teachers, third; Lang Stanley, Army, fourth; Lon Spurrier, Air Force, fifth; Ted Wheeler, Army, sixth. Time, 1:47.6. (New A.A.U. record; old record 1:50.8 by Mal Whitfield, 1954.)

220-YARD LOW HURDLES—Won by Charles Pratt, New York Pioneer Club; Tirrell Burton, Miami (O.) University, second; Arnold Jackson, West Chester State Teachers, third; Rafer Johnson, Los Angeles, fourth; Jack Matthews, Iowa City, Ia., unattached, fifth; Jim Luttrell, San Francisco Olympic Club, sixth. Time, :23.5.

JAVELIN—Won by Franklin Held, San Francisco Olympic Club, 260 feet, 3 inches; Sy Young, San Francisco Olympic Club, second, 251 feet, 11½ inches; Bill Miller, Phoenix, Ariz., unattached, third, 246 feet, 10½ inches; Al Cantello, Pennsylvania Athletic Club, fourth, 238 feet, 1 inch; Gerry Church, Oregon State, fifth, 236 feet 8 inches; Sidney Kwitt, New York Pioneer Club, sixth, 231 feet, 8½ inches. (New A.A.U. record. Old record, 249 feet, 8½ inches by Held, 1954.)

TWO-MILE STEEPLECHASE—Won by Ken Reiser, Eugene, Ore., Track Club; Bill Ashenfelter, New York Athletic Club, second; Bud Shea, Northwestern, third; Fred Schoeffler, New York Athletic Club, fourth; Phil Coleman, Chicago University Track Club, fifth; Bruce rumDmond, Army, sixth. Time—10m. 20.7s.

220-YARD DASH — Won by Rod Richard, Army; Dick Blair, Kansas, second; Andy Stanfield, New York Pioneer Club, third; Bobby Morrow, Abilene (Tex.) Christian College, fourth; Dean Smith, Texas, fifth; Bob Gary, Washington State, sixth. Time—21.0s. (New A.A.U. record. Old record 21.1s by Art Bragg, 1954.)

HOP, STEP AND JUMP—Won by Vicotr Paredes, Cuban National P. E. Institute, 50 feet 4 inches; Bill Sharpe, West Chester State Teachers, second, 48 feet 6½ inches; Kent Floerke, Kansas City, Kan. (unattached), third, 48 feet 5 inches; Glen Brown, Kansas, fourth, 48 feet 4¾ inches; Sal Mezzanecco, Northeastern University, fifth, 47 feet 9 inches; Ellis West, San Francisco Olympic Club, sixth, 47 feet 3¼ inch.

POLE VAULT—Won by Bob Richards, Los Angeles Athletic Club, 15 feet 2 inches; Walter Lovark and Bob Smith, both Los Angeles Athletic Club, tied for second, 14 feet 6 inches; Ron Morris, Los Angeles Athletic Club; George Mattos, Air Force; Dan Lar, Urbana, Ill. (unattached); and Fred Barnes, San Francisco Olympic Club, tied or fourth, 14 feet.

Determine Runs Away From Slump To Win Inglewood Handicap

Victory First in 5 Starts

INGLEWOOD, Calif., June 25 (AP) — Game little Determine snapped out of a losing slump today and won the $27,550 Inglewood Handicap in a driving finish with Mister Gus and Alidon at Hollywood Park.

A victor for the first time in his last five races, the 1954 Kentucky Derby champion got a rousing hand from the estimated 40,000 fans as he was led into the winner's circle.

He had to come from behind to collar the front-running Berseem and Mister Gus.

In the run for the wire, Jockey Ray York brought the 4-year-old Determine into a hard-won lead, and then held off a second run by Mister Gus, with the able Willie Shoemaker aboard.

In the windup it was Determine, Mister Gus and a late-rallying Alidon, all in a photo finish but with Determine the decisive winner.

The time for the mile and one-sixteenth was 1:40 4-5.

Determine and Alidon were coupled in the betting as an entry since both are trained by Willie Molter, and the return was slim—Determine $3.30, $2.10 and $2.10; Mister Gus $2.10 and $2.30 and Alidon $2.10.

There was a minus pool on both the place and show positions as the public went heavy on the odds-on favored entry.

Mark-Ye-Well Gives Sagging Calumet Luck A Boost at Arlington

CHICAGO, June 25 (AP) — Calumet Farm's sagging track fortune was boosted today as Mark-Ye-Well rushed to a nose victory in the $28,025 Laurance Armour Memorial Handicap before 25,954 at Arlington Park.

It was the first Arlington triumph for the once powerful Calumet Farm since July, 1953, when Real Delight won the Arlington Matron.

Mark-Ye-Well came from the middle of the ten-horse field in the one-mile and a furlong test to beat out Wise Margin with a time of 1:49. Third in the bunched-up field was Hasseyampa.

Mark-Ye-Well, a 6-year-old son of Bull Lea, was winless in 11 previous starts this year and scored his last victory more than a year ago when he set a new American record of 2:01:1 for 1¼ miles on the grass at Santa Anita.

Ridden by Dave Erb, Mark-Ye-Well returned $11.80, $7.60 and $5.20.

Players Accused of Assaulting Writer Who Never Covered Game

SYRACUSE, N.Y., June 25 (AP) — Two rookie pitchers were arrested today on charges of assaulting a sports writer in a tavern.

The pitchers were identified as Richard Farrell, 21 years old, of Brookline, Mass., and Seth Morehead, 20, of Shreveport, La., members of the Syracuse baseball club of the International League.

They were accused of beating up Normile A. Hannon, 26, of the Syracuse Post-Standard. He suffered a nose injury and a cut over the left eye that required five stitches.

In police court, Farrell and Morehead pleaded innocent and were released in $1500 bail pending a hearing July 1.

Patrolman James Dorsey said Hannon was assaulted early this morning soon after he had entered the tavern.

"What are you smiling at?" Farrell was reported to have asked Hannon. The reporter was said to have walked away. Then, according to Dorsey, Morehead injected a nasty name into the discussion and Hannon was assaulted.

Hannon never has covered a Syracuse Chiefs' game. He had no comment on the tavern incident.

Hy Turkin Dies; Edited Baseball Encyclopedia

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)— Hy Turkin, co-editor of the official Baseball Encyclopedia and a sports writer for the New York Daily News, died yesterday of a liver ailment after a six-month illness. He was 40 and is survived by his widow and a daughter. His parents also survive.

Osterkorn Retires.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., June 25 (AP)—Wally (The Ox) Osterkorn today announced his retirement from professional basketball. He had been one of the most popular players on the roster of the world champion Syracuse Nationals of the National Basketball Association.

Osterkorn, 26, six-foot five-inch, former University of Illinois star, said he was leaving the Nats to accept a position in industrial sales.

Brazilian Wins College Tennis Singles Title

CHAPEL HILL, N.C., June 25 (AP) — Seventh-seeded Jose (Pepe) Aguero, Brazilian Davis Cupper from Tulane University, stroked his way to the singles championship of the 71st National Collegiate Tennis Tournament today, defeating fifth-ranked Bill Quillian of the University of Washington. The scores were 6-1, 4-6, 6-1, 6-0.

The smooth-stroking successor to U.S. Davis Cupper Hamilton Richardson as national collegiate singles titlist was in trouble only in the second set—the first he has lost in collegiate play this year.

Richardson won the N.C.A.A. singles crown in 1953 and 1954 while an undergraduate at Tulane.

In the doubles finals, Pancho Contreras and Joaquin Reyes of Southern California met Sammy Giammalva and Johnny Hernandez of Texas.

The match was called because of rain at the end of three sets with Giammalva and Hernandez leading 3-6, 6-4, 6-3. It will be finished tomorrow afternoon.

"I seem to recall seeing Archie Moore fight at the Coliseum during the 30s. Was that possible?" Fight Fan.

Yes, Moore fought several times at the Coliseum. In one of his earliest bouts he knocked out Joe Huff in the third round on a card promoted by Jackie Callahan, Feb. 2, 1937. Moore, who weighed 155 then, fought as a middleweight.

"Is Pittsburgh's Dale Long the same first baseman the Browns had a few years ago? How old is he and with what clubs did he play after leaving St. Louis?" R. D. C.

Yes, Richard Dale Long, who was 29 last Feb. 26, played with the Browns in 1951. He was at New Orleans in 1952 and at Hollywood the past two years.

LURE OF RACING BRINGS EARL POOL, DERBY JOCKEY, BACK AS A VALET

By Herman Wecke

"Once you have been bitten by the racing bug, it's hard to stay away from the sport."

The speaker was Earl L. Pool, former jockey, who now is serving as a valet at Fairmount Park. . . . Pool was born in Butte, Mon., in 1896 and during a jockey career that lasted from 1914 to 1946, he rode more than 1500 winners. . . . He rode in eight Kentucky Derbies, but never was successful in piloting the winner, as well as in other stakes. . . . In his prime, he was considered one of the nation's best at handling two-year-olds.

Pool and his wife now own a 200-acre farm outside of Evansville, Ind. . . . They raise cattle as well as wheat, corn and soybeans.

"It was not necessity that brought me back to the sport of kings," said Pool during a lull in his duties at Fairmount Park. . . . "I just like to be around the boys. . . . It's the first job I have had around a race track since I quit as a rider. . . . The young jockeys come to me for advice and I am always willing to give it. . . . There's a lot of hard work connected with the job of being a valet, but you also get a lot of good laughs. . . . It's good to be back at the races and I'm going to stick to it."

In his eight rides in the Kentucky Derby, the best he ever did was to finish in third place with John Finn, a 22 to 1 shot in the 1922 race won by Morvich, with Bet Mosie second. . . . His first mount in the classic came in 1919, when he finished eighth with St. Bernard. . . . It was eighth again with Uncle Velo in 1921. . . . Step Along finished fifth in 1925; Chap de Mars in 1926 and Rolled Stocking the next year each finished twelfth. . . . Then in 1928, he rode Reigh Olga, which was coupled with Reigh Count, the winner, in the betting. . . . Reigh Olga was fifth. . . . His last Derby mount was Windy City, a fifth place finisher in 1929.

Pool rode his first stakes winner in 1915, when he brought Prince Hermis into the winner's circle in the Falls City Handicap at Churchill Downs. . . . And his final one, according to the American Racing Manual, came in 1941, when he rode the great Alsab to victory in the Joliet Stakes at Lincoln Fields.

Eight of his stakes victories were scored with two-year-olds. . . . They were Misstep in the first running of the Arlington Futurity in 1927; Step Along in the 1925 Blue Grass Stakes; Believe in Breeders Futurity at Keeneland and Current in the same race in 1928; Signalman in the Hawthorne Juvenile in 1933; Kakapo in the Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes and Current in the Selima Stakes at Laurel.

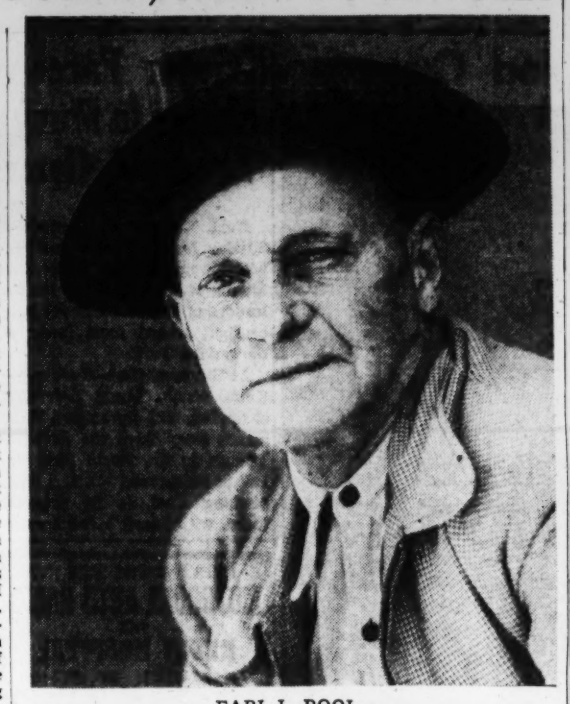

Other stakes triumphs came with Opportunity in the 1918 Ben Ali Handicap and Chicago in the first running of the Chicago Handicap at Hawthorne. . . . One of his outstanding performances came July 20, when he was home first in four of his five mounts.

The veteran served at Fairmount during the heydey of his career. . . . During the 1926 and 1928 campaigns at the Collinsville track, he rode for the late Col. E. R. Bradley. . . . One of the horses he won with at Fairmount was none other than Captain Hal, one of the finest to ever perform on the local track. . . . Among those he liked to ride were Alsab, Equipoise and Wise Counsellor. . . .

Pool did not escape without spills during his career. . . . He remembers two of these especially. . . . In one he suffered a fractured knee and in the other several smashed ribs. . . .

HOOFBEATS: L. J. Stortz, track veterinarian, has been around the course a long time. . . . Has served every year since the 1925 opening. . . . Several times he has been official "vet" for the Illinois Racing Board. . . . Roy Duncan, the 35-year-old jockey who came here from Ohio with George Manley, rode his first race at Fairmount in 1938 and scored his initial victory at New Orleans the same year. . . .

Recent claims sent Why Natch to Mrs. E. Julian for $2000 and Liberty Hill to H. E. Mitchell Jr. for the same price. . . . Texas Reward was taken by L. Pullen and Trip North, which has won three races, was taken by T. O. Logsdon. . . . Guy Schulz, trainer, who formerly raced a stable at Fairmount, hospitalized recently by an attack of ulcers is back on the job at Ar-Sar-Ben.

Two Summer Soccer Leagues Formed, to Start Play July 11

A second summer soccer competition is being lined up, it was announced yesterday. Bill Gockel, coach of St. Paul team, has tentative entries from Holy Rosary, St. Edward and St. Matthew parish teams and plans to start a league schedule Monday, July 11. Games will be played on Monday and Friday evenings at Hickey Field in Pine Lawn.

Earlier, it was announced that eight clubs would play a league schedule of games at Fee Fee Gardens, home of the St. Louis County Athletic Association. The teams competing there, starting July 11, will be: Jones, Richmond Heights, Overland, St. Louis County, St. Philip, Tabacchis, Pastures and Dogtown.

Leaders Have Score to Even In C.Y.C. Today

St. Joseph's of Clayton, C.Y.C. junior champion last season, is doing well in senior competition, too. Leading the Bishop Cody League at Sherman Park No. 2 with a 5-1 record, Manager Erv Fischer's team today meets All Souls (3-3), the only team with a victory over the leaders.

Following that 1 o'clock game, St. Aloysisus (3-3 opposes Holy Cross (1-4).

Fischer can call on two top pitchers, Harry Grasshoff, freshman hurler at St. Louis U., and Jack Willie, ex-Junior Billiken ace.

In the Bishop Winkelmann circuit at Cherokee No. 2, St. Cronan and Epiphany, two of the three teams tied for first with 4-2 marks, meet at 1 o'clock. Then St. Michael, also 4-2, plays Immaculate Heart of Mary (0-6)

St. Pius, only unbeaten senior team in the area outside of the Khoury leagues, goes for No. 7 against St. John (3-4) at 1 o'clock in the Cardinal Glennon League at Cherokee No. 1. St. Raphael (4-2) plays Our Lady of Sorrows (0-7) at 3:30.

St. Philip Neri, defending senior champion, now 4-3, faces the Bishop Helmsing leader, Holy Rosary (5-1), at Fairground No. 2 at 1 o'clock. St. Engelbert (4-3) plays St. Liborius (1-6) at 3:30.

Normandy Miler Graham To Enroll at Missouri

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 25—Howard Edward Darrieux, 6-3 Mokane Class B all state basketball player with a 31-point scoring average, is among six Missouri athletes who have accepted athletic scholarships to the University of Missouri, Athletic Director Don Faurot announced today.

The other scholarship winners are track men, including Eddie Gold of Aurora, who set a Class B record of 12 feet, three and one-quarter inches in the pole vault and placed third in the high jump; Mike Crowley of Kansas City, winner of the Class A 100-yard dash in 9.9 seconds, and third-place winner in a 21.9 second 220-yard dash; James Luther Green of Dexter, second in the Class B low hurdles; Luther Benson Cooper of Jackson, winner of the Class B half-mile in 2:00.7 and John Dalby Graham of Normandy, who placed third in the Class A 880 yard run.

Satch Paige, Monarchs To Play Here Friday

The Kansas City Monarchs, bolstered by the recent acquisition of Leroy (Satchel) Paige, who once pitched for the St. Louis Browns, will meet the Birmingham Barons at Busch Stadium Friday in a Negro American League game.

The Monarchs have an outstanding second baseman in 22-year-old Al Cartmill, who has attracted the attention of major league scouts.

Stars on the Barons include Rufus Gibson and Jesse Mitchell who helped to hand Paige his first loss since joining the Monarchs.

C.Y.C .Title Game At Busch Stadium

St. James and Holy Cross, survivors from a field of 73 teams, meet in the C.Y.C. parochial baseball title game tomorrow at 5 p.m. at Busch Stadium.

St. James qualified for the final by completing yesterday at Hickey Field an 8-3 victory over Our Lady of Pillar. The game had been suspended Friday at Forest Park with St. James ahead, 4-1, in the fourth inning.

Admission at the title game will be 50 cents for adults, 25 cents for children.

Busch Stadium also has been lined up for a tripleheader of smaller division playoffs Aug. 20 and the junior and senior finals Aug. 21.

St. Agatha can repeat as parochial boys softball champion by defeating Holy Rosary tomorrow at 4 p.m. at Forest Park 18. St. Agatha took the opener of the best-of-three final, 11-9.

Gets Rifle Award.

Kenneth H. Meyer, a member of the St. Louis U. High rifle team, was awarded the Expert Rifleman Medal, second highest award in American junior shooting, it was announced by the National Rifle Association of America. Meyer, 15, lives at 1108 McLaran.

Muny Tennis Meet to Open On Saturday

The forty-third annual Muny tennis tournament for men and women will begin next Saturday at Jefferson Memorial Courts in Forest Park, with Al Holtmann and Mrs. Merceina Parker scheduled to defend singles titles.

Winners in men's and women's singles and doubles and mixed doubles will represent St. Louis in the National Public Parks tournament at Pittsburgh in August. The meet here is open to all Muny players not members of private clubs.

Other defending champions will be Ward Parker and Ralph Hart in men's doubles and Marilyn Mueller and Bunny Wall in women's doubles, but all of these veteran players anticipate tough competition from such outstanding young players as Earl Buchholz Jr., Neil Drury, Bev Tolan and Carole Boshard.

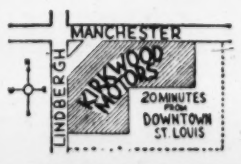

Holtmann, 18-year-old National junior indoor champion, cracked the "old guard" with a singles championship in last year's Muny and Buchholz this year may try for the "grand slam" of senior, junior and boys titles. He's the National Junior of Commerce boys' (15 and under) titleholder and is ranked second nationally in that division by the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

The Muny tourney is scheduled to end July 10. Entries will close Thursday and may be directed to any Muny or individual club officer or to the Muny tennis office, 2319 Hampton, MIssion 7-4374. Sardis Glascock, former Muny Tennis Association president, is tournament chairman. Joe Karl is the current Muny president.

Inter-Park Tennis Today.

Tower Grove and Jefferson Memorial teams will meet in today's feature Muny Inter-Park tennis series at the Memorial courts in Forest Park. In other matches, the Francis team will play at O'Fallon, Oakland at Tandy and Sublette at Carondelet. Starting time, 2 o'clock.

Panama Suspends Two U.S. Boxers in 'Ringer' Case

Promoter Is Barred For Year

PANAMA, R.P., June 25 (U.P.)—Joe Brown and Junius West, two New Orleans lightweights were fined and suspended today by the Panama boxing commissioner for their June 16 "ringer" match.

West appeared as a "ringer" for Nat (Killer) Jackson, another New Orleans lightweight, and was knocked out by Brown in the third round.

Each fighter was fined $25. West, now back in New Orleans, was suspended for three years. Brown, who appeared at the hearing before the Panama commission, was suspended for six months. He drew the lesser sentence because he cooperated in the investigation and "appeared to be penitent and remorseful."

Panama promoter Enrique Martin was fined $25 and suspended for one year. Martin maintained throughout the hearing that he had been duped by West's manager, Seymour Ferina of New Orleans. The promoter said that Ferina had convinced him that "Jackson" was West's fighting name.

Brown, who previously had defeated the real Jackson, readily admitted he knew the fight billing was a hoax. But he said that as long as no one asked him any questions, he thought it best to say nothing.

At the hearing, Brown said everything West had disclosed in New Orleans was true, except the reference by Louisiana State Boxing Commission Chairman Tom Littleton to West being forced at gunpoint to represent himself as Jackson.

Atlanta Boy Wins National Net Title

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., June 25 (AP)—Top-seeded Crawford Henry of Atlanta spotted Norman Perry of Los Angeles a set and then got his game under control here today to whip the fourth-seeded Californian, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, 6-1, for the national scholastic tennis championship.

Bob Macy and John Skogstad of Coral Gables, Fla., emerged with the 1955 doubles championship by defeating previously unbeaten Richard Hoehn and Stanley Wilkins of Exeter, N. H., 7-5, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

It was the second straight doubles title for Coral Gables High School, which also captured the team championship trophy donated annually by the U.S. Lawn Association. Last year, Macy teamed with Jeff Arnold to win the title.

Motor Bike Driver Killed in Tune-Up

NUERBURGRING, Germany, June 25 (UP)—The final tune-ups for tomorrow's grand prix of Germany motorcycle racing, counting toward the world championship, was marred today when Argentine speedster Ricardo Calvagni crashed to his death.

The Argentine, who arrived here only yesterday to make final preparations for tomorrow's competition, was moving at high speed on his 500 CC Norton when he overshot the concrete track just behind the starting line and was killed.

On almost the same spot where the accident took place, Calvagni's fellow - countryman, Armando Poggi, also on a 500 CC Norton, crashed and was admitted to the Adenau hospital, suffering from arm injuries.

Venice Out of Line, Game Is Rescheduled

The case of the missing baseline markings and the missing rubber covering for home plate has been decided in favor of the protesting Collinsville team in the Inter-City baseball league.

The arbitration board ruled that the 4-3 Venice victory be thrown out and the game be replayed. The groundkeeper of the Venice diamond failed to mark the lines and cover the wooden plate because he assumed the scheduled game would not be played.

It had rained the night before and more rain was expected the day of the game. So the groundkeeper failed to appear.

The standings:

| | W. | L. | | W. | L. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Pontoon | 6 | 2 | Marysville | 3 | 4 |
| Smallings | 6 | 2 | Sacred Heart | 2 | 5 |
| Edwardsville | 6 | 3 | Venice | 1 | 6 |
| Collinsville | 5 | 3 | Troy | 1 | 7 |

Hurls No-Hit Game.

Jim Terral, a member of the Merritts in the midget division of the Normandy Township Khoury League, hurled a no-run, no-hit game against the Bel-Nors in a game at Waibel Park. Terral won, 5-0. He struck out 14 batters.

Twice-Filled Cup

By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

MRS. MARILYN CONROY, recently-married daughter of the Algonquin Country Club pro, Homer Herpel, holds a trophy she won in repeating as district women's golf champion, Friday. She will seek her third women's state amateur title next month at Kansas City.

Lead in Women's Western Open to Patty Berg

MADISON, Wis., June 25 (UP)—Louise Suggs smashed out a course record 65, five under par, today and Patty Berg shot a two-under 71 to take over the pace-setting positions after 54 holes of the twenty-sixth annual women's Western Open golf championship. Miss Berg had a total of 219, Miss Suggs 220.

Both improved their chance for victory vastly as the previous front-runners, Mickey Wright, La Jolla, Calif., slumped to a four-over-par 77, and amateur Wiffi Smith, St. Clair, Mich., took a 76. Though they began play today in the 1-2 spots, they finished tied for fourth place at 222 at the three-quarter mark.

Miss Berg, Chicago, who set the women's course record Wednesday at 72, came in first today with her 71, posting 10 pars, five birdies and three bogies to take over first place.

But Miss Suggs, Sea Island, Ga., began tearing the course apart on the first nine, making five birdies and only one bogey to reach the turn four under. On the back nine, she dropped eight pars and one birdie for a 220 total.

Fay Crocker, Montevideo, Uruguay, also bettered par today with her second straight 72 to hold a second-place tie with Miss Suggs.

Miss Suggs took only 27 putts and scored birdies with three putts of five feet, two of 10 feet, and another of eight feet. Her only bogie resulted, though, from three putts on the eighth green.

Both Miss Suggs and Miss Berg, running 1-2 in earnings for women pros this season, were aiming for their fifth title in this annual championship. Miss Suggs had been well off the pace with a first-round 75 and a 77 yesterday, while Miss Berg had been in steady contention with previous scores of 73 and 75.

Beverly Handson, Fargo, N.D., who was fifth at the mid-way point, slipped to a one-over-par 74 today, but held sixth place with a 223 total while Marlene Bauer, Sarasota, Fla., took seventh with 224 on a par 73 today.

Tomorrow, the 32-player championship flight will go the last round for the top prize of $1000 in the total purse of $5000.

Triple Tie in Khoury Senior Baseball Loop

The Trojans and Second Ward Democrats, tied for first place with the Veterans, meet at 3:30 today in the Khoury Missouri senior baseball league at Fairground No. 16. The Veterans, also showing a 3-2 record, face the Aces (0-6) at 1.

At Fairground No. 3 the Radison Pirates (3-0) play Harris (1-2) after the St. Louis Blues (2-0) meet LaContessa at 1 o'clock in the St. Louis League.

Water at Sunset.

A new watering system has been installed on the golf course at Sunset Country Club. It is a portable system that allows the watering of several fairways each night.

Muny Baseball Results.

Campbell and Garrett Tied In College Golf

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 25 (AP)—Joe Campbell of Purdue and Johnny Garrett of Rice Institute finished all-square at the end of the first half of their 36-hole N.C.A.A. golf tournament finals today.

Campbell, 19-year-old sophomore from Anderson, Ind., rallied to win two of the last three holes to square the match.

A second 18-hole match will be played tomorrow morning to round out the finals.

Garrett moved into the final with a grueling 1-up, nineteenth hole victory over Rex Baxter, University of Houston sophomore from Amarillo, Tex.

Campbell disposed of Florida's Pat Schwab, 6 and 4, in the morning. Schwab is from Dayton, O.

Garrett, Houston City title holder and former Texas public links champion, won the eighth and ninth holes to chalk up a 2-up lead over Campbell at the turn. Campbell lost the eighth with a three-putt green and a gust of wind blew his ball off the tee just as he swung on the ninth.

The quirk cost Campbell, Indiana state amateur and public links champion, a stroke and the hole.

Garrett, who consistently outdrove Campbell 30 to 40 yards, increased his margin to 3-up on the eleventh with a par-3. An erratic putter again cost Campbell the hole.

Campbell, who had shot even-par golf on the long Holston Hills course in ousting Schwab, cut Garrett's margin to 2-up on the fourteenth with a par-3.

They halved the fifteenth with par 4s, and then Campbell won two successive holes to pull abreast of Garrett.

The stocky Indianan canned a five-foot birdie putt to win the sixteenth, and picked up the seventeenth on a par-5 when Garrett's drive sailed out of bounds to cost him two strokes. They halved the eighteenth with par 5s.

The medal scores:

Three St. Louis Boys Receive Awards at Yale

Yale University recently named three St. Louisans for spring athletic awards. One of them is Don S. Pruett, son of Dr. Hubert S. (Shucks) Pruett, southpaw pitcher for the Browns a generation ago who gained fame because of his ability to strike out Babe Ruth.

Young Pruett, a graduate of John Burroughs, is a junior and has played varsity baseball for two years. A Dean's List student, he received a major "Y" for the 1955 baseball season.

Calvin Perry Bascom, also a John Burroughs graduate, received a numeral for participation in freshman tennis. His father, William R. Bascom, 1932, was captain of the tennis team at Yale.

Also receiving a freshman tennis award was Newell A. Augur, 6450 Ellenwood, Augur, a Dean's List student, prepared for Yale at Hotchkiss school.

Krieger Faces Mumm in Muny Leaders' Game

Kurt Krieger of Carondelet Sunday Morning Club probably will be opposed by Lefty Don Mumm of Kimacks when the co-leaders of the Muny South Side baseball league meet today at Carondelet Park.

At the same time—1 o'clock—Kutis North, Muny defending champion, will try to pull three games away from the Borbein-Youngs in the North Side circuit at Fairground No. 1. A tight pitching duel is in prospect there, with Lloyd Merritt going for Kutis and Dick Loeser, Kutis ace last season, probably starting for Borbein.

In the Heine Meine League, McNearys (6-1) face Hoffmeisters (4-3) in a makeup game at 10 a.m. at Porky's Field. In the regular 3 o'clock contests, McNearys play Carondelet Advertisers (2-5) at Porky's and Hoffmeisters meet Luigis, formerly the Rebels (2-5), at Meine Field.

Kutis North (6-1) has added Infielder Billy Bullock, former Beaumont and Stockham Legion star who has been a good hitter in the Yankee farm system for several years. Merritt, with Kansas City before going into service, stopped the Borbeins in his only Muny start. In his first start since returning from outfield duty, Loeser last week blanked the Union Printers on three hits. Borbeins have a 4-3 record. The Printers face the Polish Falcons at 3:30.

Chuck Vogt, just out of service, will try to relieve Carondelet Manager Monte Gummels of his shortstop headache. Ken Whitehead will go back to second base and Ray Smerek to third. Ted Beck will be ready to relieve Krieger if the ex-Cardinal falters.

Kimacks, who, like Carondelet, have a 5-2 record, will be back at full strength following their 5-0 upset loss to Kutis South last Sunday. Chuck Stimack, hard-hitting catcher, sat out that game because of an elbow injury suffered in a softball contest.

It will be Bob Boehlew for Hoffmeisters and Dave Lauck for McNearys in the morning Meine game. Boehlow, former Mizzou star, has an earned run mark under 1.00. He handed McNearys their only loss, 10-1. All three Hoffmeister defeats have been by one run.

U.S. Rises to Russian Challenge; Olympic Hopes Bright

Analysis Indicates Strength

By Ted Smits

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)—There is a wave of optimism in American sports circles over our prospects in the 1956 Olympic games at Melbourne as the result of one record-breaking performance after another the past few months.

The United States, it is now clear, is ready for the Russian challenge. In fact, the Soviets may have trouble matching their performances at Helsinki when the U.S.A. won the unofficial team title 614 points to 533½, and took 14 firsts in track and field against none for the Russians.

Here are some of the amazing marks of this spring:

Jim Golliday, Northwestern, tied the world record of :09.3 in the 100-yard dash and unless his leg bothers him again looks like a winner in the sprints.

Lou Jones of Manhattan College broke the world record for 400 meters at the Pan-American games with :45.4 and Jim Lea of Southern California was at his shoulder.

Both Lon Spurrier, California, with 1:47.5, and Wes Santee, the talkative Kansan, with 1:48.5, have bettered the world record for the half mile. Tom Courtney of Fordham and Arnold Sowell of Pitt have cracked 1:50.

And So It Goes.

Roselyn Range, with 26 feet 4⅛ inches, and John Bennett, ex-Marquette, with 26-3⅜, both from the Armed services, became the second pair in world track annals to exceed a broad jump of 26 feet in one meet. They did it at the Pan-American games.

Bud Held, formerly of Stanford, bettered the world record in the Javelin with a toss of 268 feet 2½ inches. Cy Young, the Olympic champion, hit 257 feet and Bill Miller, who was second at Helsinki, did 254-7½. Les Bitner of Kansas threw the javelin 246-1 in the N.C.A.A. meet and Al Cantello of La Salle did 245-3½—all better than Young's winning Olympic record throw of 245-¾ at Helsinki.

Ernie Shelton of U.S.C. is crowding 7 feet consistently in the high jump, and to back him up is Charles Dumas, the Los Angeles High School boy at better than 6-10.

Doug Bragg of Villanova did 15 feet 1 inch in the N.C.A.A. pole vault to give the U.S.A. another 15-footer along with Bob Richards and Don Laz.

Fernando Ledesma of Southern California has twice run the two miles under 9 minutes, his best mark being 8:56.4, when he was second to Horace Ashenfelter's 8:49.6.

Active and in top form are two world record holders in the weights: Fortune Gordien, discus, and Parry O'Brien, shotput. Backing them up is Sim Iness, Olympic discus champion. Tom Jones, Miami, and Bill Nieder, Kansas, are in the 58-foot class in the shot.

Among the high school sensations are Jim Brewer, the 16-year-old Arizona boy who has vaulted 14-2, and Eddie Southern, the Dallas youngster who has marks of :20.7 for the 220 and :47.2 for the 440.

Andy Stanfield, the Olympic 200-meter champion, and Harrison Dillard, the Olympic high hurdle king also are still to be reckoned with.

There are a host of others, too, such as Lt. Rod Richard, the Pan-American sprint champion; J. W. Mashburn, Oklahoma A.&M., who has a non-winning time of :46.3 for the 400 meters; and Dean Smith, the Texas sprinter.

All this boils down to probably the most powerful American track and field team yet. The United States may need to concede the distance races, although Santee and Ashenfelter must be reckoned with, but in most other events Americans will be the top contenders.

Ferris Speaks Confidence.

Says Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the A.A.U.:

"All the talk about how we are going to lose to Russia in the Olympics is responsible for the terrific increase in interest and, I think, for the amazing performances. Our high school boys are fantastic. I would hope we do as well at Melbourne as at Helsinki."

Says George Eastment, Manhattan coach prominently mentioned for an Olympic coaching job:

"As far as track and field are concerned, we are better off than we have ever been. I say 'no' to all the defeatists. We have the best weight men ever. I'll wager it will take 58 feet to make the team in the shot." (O'Brien won it with 57 1½ at Helsinki.)

In addition to the strength in men's track and field, the United States has come up with some good performers in the women's division at the same sport, such as Karen Anderson, 161 1½ in the javelin; Mildred McDaniel, 5 6¼ in the high jump, and Mae Faggs and Barbara Jones in the sprints.

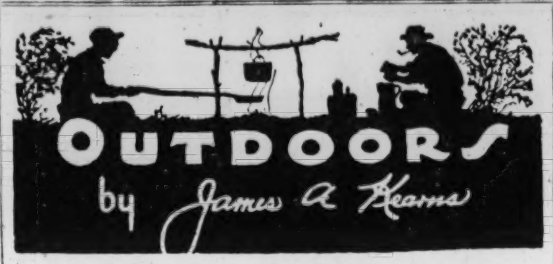

Russia will get stiff competition from its satellite nations, and in addition faces real trouble in gymnastics from Japan.

So despite all the scare talk about the Russians, United States prospects look bright for Melbourne.

Wilson Aces 11-3.

The Wilson Aces, who take on all comers—seniors and intermediates in Muny, Khoury and independents—ran their record to 11-3 with a 1-0 triumph over the Ballentines at Ballwin.

Bill Pleis hurled the three-hit shutout. He has allowed only one run in 28 innings, striking out 42 and walking 10. Manager Dick Stoughton's Aces are in a Khoury intermediate league.

Regulations for Illinois Duck Hunting

THE ILLINOIS Department of Conservation has just completed a list of proposed regulations for control of federally-owned lands north of St. Louis which will be open to public hunting during the coming wildfowl season.

Areas in which the department will take over full management for the first time include Batchtown, Stump Lake, Calhoun Point, Fuller Lake and Middleton Island.

The proposed regulations, which will be issued in final form after another conference between department representatives and sportsmen groups, include:

1. Blinds must be constructed within 10 yards of designated spots marked by posts with orange paint.

2. Not more than three persons may register as builders of a blind.

3. The builders will have until 5:30 a.m. daily in the Batchtown, Calhoun Point and Stump Lake areas and until 6 a.m. at Fuller Lake and Middleton Island to claim their blinds during the season.

4. After the deadline, the blinds will be open on a first-come, first-served basis.

5. At no time may the number of hunters in a blind exceed four.

6. Open fires are prohibited.

As last year, when the department regulated the areas on a limited basis, there will be a ban on leaving decoys overnight outside the blind.

If hunters wish to leave decoys at the blind they must put them in a locked box.

Kill cards will have to be filled out by shooters at the Batchtown, Calhoun Point and Stump Lake areas. At all places children under 16 will not be permitted to shoot unless accompanied by an adult.

Lewis Martin, assistant director of the Illinois Conservation Department, said that if the wildfowl kill at any of the areas appears to be too heavy, a Monday or Friday closing probably will be put into effect—a practice which the department has followed on state public hunting lands.

Registration in August.

Registration for blinds in the federal hunting areas on the Illinois side of the Mississippi river, north of here, is expected to be held in August. An announcement will be made by the department.

There were about 100 blinds set up during the last duck season and slightly more than that number at Swan Lake. The Batchtown area, particularly, has often been the source of controversy over who should have the right to use the blinds.

For several years the conservation department kept the blinds open to the public, strictly on a first-come, first-served basis, but residents of the area squawked, complaining they were deprived of hunting in a section where they had shot for years.

Kentucky Fishing Report.

Kentucky's Fish and Wild Life Resources Department has issued an up-to-date report on fishing results at waters well known to many St. Louis anglers. The report said:

Dale Hollow—Bluegill is still the No. 1 fish there, with good catches reported.

Kentucky Lake—Striped bass are being taken in the middle areas of the lake on spinners and by casting the jumps. Also, many are being taken by fishing with minnows down to 20 feet.

Lake Cumberland—Bass fishing is No. 1 here, with crappie second and catfish third. Bass are being caught by trolling at about six miles an hour.

Fishing for perch and catfish has been good at Lake Killarney near Ironton, Mo., although bass catches are still spotty, Outdoors was told.

Tennessee has increased its take limits on quail for this year to eight daily and 16 in possession. The old limits were six and 12.

It also has lengthened its deer season to eight days, an increase of five over last year. A longer turkey season has been set by the game and fish commission.

Fay's Reaper Sure Entry for July 4 'Cap

Jack Klucina, racing secretary at Fairmount Park, is in communication with Chicago owners in an effort to line up several stars for the $5000 Independence day handicap, which will feature the afternoon program of July 4. Racing on that day, the last daytime program at the Collinsville course, will begin at 2:15 o'clock.

One of the horses certain to be nominated for the one mile and one-sixteenth feature will be Mrs. T. M. Pruett's Fay's Reaper, winner of the Memorial day event. Fay's Reaper has won three races at the Collinsville track.

Other horses likely to be in the field, all previous winners here, are Harry Lou, King Bebe and Bright Imp. Harry Lou was third in the Memorial day event.

Cahokia Downs, which will begin its 60-day-and-night meet July 23, will be opened to horsemen tomorrow. Klucina, who also will serve as racing secretary at the track, expects stables to put in regular appearances to prepare for the races. Several stables, which raced at Ar-Sar-Ben, Omaha and various Ohio tracks are expected to bring their strings here. Cahokia's feature race will be the $12,000 St. Louis Derby for which no official date has been set.

200 St. Louis Turners In National Meet

Some 200 St. Louisans are expected to compete this week in the quadrennial gymnastic and athletic championships of the American Turners at Milwaukee. They will depart on a special train after midnight Tuesday for the U.S. track and field, swimming and gymnastic competition starting Wednesday. The Nationals will be concluded next Sunday.

Concordia Turners will send a 98-man team to try for a national championship the South St. Louis organization has won eight times previously. North St. Louis Turners will have a team of 56 and Schiller Turners about 45.

The American Turners have a membership of about 60,000, according to Charles Layton, a director of the North St. Louis group, and many of the top performers in Milwaukee are likely to be included on the 1956 Olympic team.

Smith to Get His Chance at Carter's Title

BOSTON, June 25 (AP) — A healthy Jimmy Carter, undismayed by statements he's been ducking Wallace (Bud) Smith for the past five years, will be favored Wednesday when he puts his lightweight boxing title on the line against the Cincinnati battler.

The scheduled 15-round bout to start at 9 p.m. (St. Louis time) in Boston Garden, will be televised (ABC) with New England blacked out and broadcast (ABC).

Carter, appearing in his eleventh title fight and the only boxer ever to hold the same championship three times, forced postponement of the fight from the original June 1 date when he became ill.

The 31-year-old Carter, a ringwise veteran, gained a decision over Smith in Cincinnati in 1950 but Wallace thinks he deserved at least a draw. The early odds favor Carter 2 to 1.

"Sure, Bud Smith has improved a lot since I fought him in 1950," Carter says, "but don't forget, so have I. I'm not worried about him. Only guy I ever worry about is me. And I'm in great shape."

The fight will be the third major world championship scrap within a 20-day period. Tony DeMarco of Boston lost his welter crown to Carmen Basilio in Syracuse June 10 and light heavyweight titlist Archie Moore successfully defended his with a third round knockout of Carl (Bobo) Olson in New York last Wednesday.

Trained in Moore's Camp.

Carter trained in the same camp with Moore the past two months at Summit, N.J., and hopes Archie's success will rub off on him. Carter got a draw with DeMarco in Boston in February before losing a 10-round decision to Orlando Zulueta in April.

"I've waited all my life for an opportunity like this," says Smith, the 26-year-old left hook specialist. "I'm going to win and I'm going to win by a knockout.

"Carter has shunned me for the past five years. I've been forced to fight welters and even middleweights.

"I like to fight Carter because he's an all-round fighter. You can put all the cuties in a paper bag and send them away. I like to fight somebody who stands up and fights."

In his last fight, Smith got a draw with Johnny Gonsalves.

Both contestants have been knocked out only once in their professional careers. Carter was stopped by Charley Cabey Lewis in Hartford, Conn., in 1947 shortly after he turned pro. Smith was knocked out by Joe Miceli in the fifth round early in 1954.

Carter has gone 15 rounds six times but Smith never has tried it before though he's gone 12 three times.

Fighter Who Comes Back.

The champion has had an unusual career while winning 70, losing 19 and drawing eight times. Carter won the title from Ike Williams in May of 1951. The next year he lost and rewon the crown from Lauro Salas.

Last year he lost the title to Paddy DeMarco in March and got it back from him in November.

Carter is best known locally for his 10-knockdown belting of Tommy Collins in 1953 which ended in a fourth round technical knockout.

The contract calls for a rematch within 90 days if Smith lifts the championship. In addition to slices of radio-television rights, Carter will receive 40 per cent of the net gate receipts and Smith 20 per cent.

Under rules of the Massachusetts State Boxing Commission, the fight will be scored on a point basis by two judges and a referee. The system calls for the winner of each round to receive 10 points and the loser nine or fewer.

$1350 to Bluth From A.B.C. 'Side' Tourney

Ray Bluth of the Budweisers totaled 1086, good for fifth place and $1350 in the annual Bowlers Journal singles tournament, which was held in Fort Wayne in connection with the recent American Bowling Congress tourney. Joe Simonis of La-Grange, Ill., hit 1108 for first place and $3000.

Pat Patterson, a teammate of Bluth's, who won the tourney at Seattle the previous year, wound up in twenty-seventh place with 1042, which netted $182.50.

Charles (Chuck) O'Donnell, who tied Billy Welu for tenth place in the A.B.C. all-events, finished twelfth in the Bowlers Journal competition with 1067 and collected $450. Homer Holtsclaw, 1063, collected $425, while Ray Jung, 1059 earned $350.

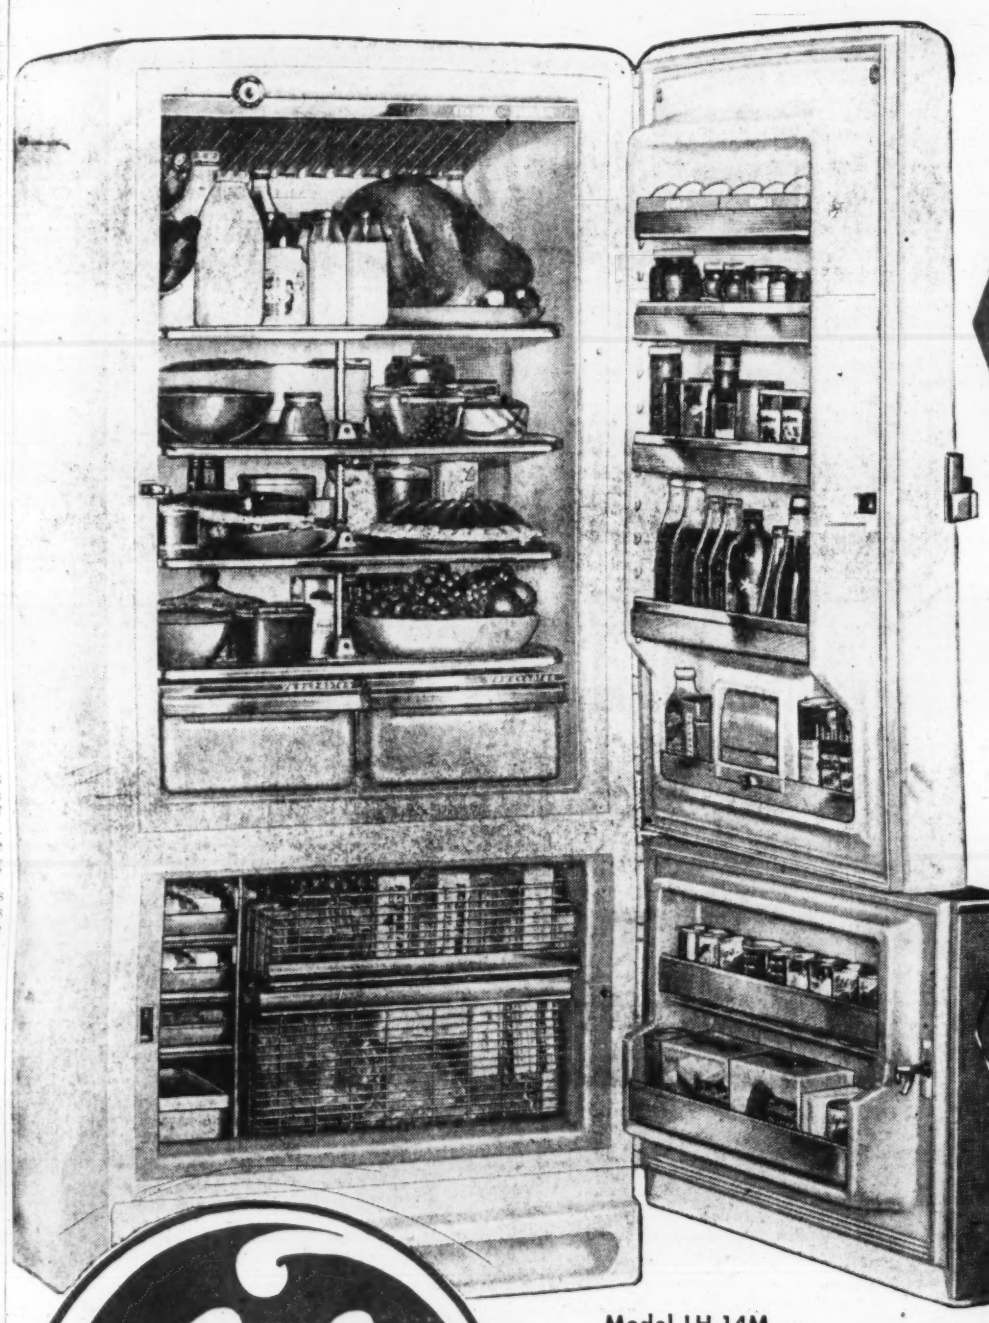

Other St. Louisans who finished in the money in Class A were as follows: Bob Vien $140, Kim Benoist $92.50, Norman Kelpe $84.20, Whitey Harris $84.20, Joe Pallardy $62, Don Callahan $56.40, Ed Easter $53.67, Emmett Cronin $51, Billy Welu $48, Sam Kruger $48, Vic Bliss $47, Charles Snyder $44, Bill Tucker $43.64, Earl Sterling $43.64, Don McClaren $41, Harry O'Neal $38.40, Tony Krentz $36.60, Jim Vrenick $34.73, Nelson Burton $34, Len Springmeyer $34, Ken Rothermich $34, Frank Mataya $33, Don Carter $33, Roland Oetting $31, Art Ziern $30.23, Floyd Touchette $29, Gene Kemper $28.08, Marion Jonett $28.07. Bill Courtwright's 268 took $100 for high single for those out of the money.

In Class B, the St. Louis winners were Gordon Wolff, Vernon Steffen, Elmer Maki and James Samuels.

Plays 'Good' Greek In Alexander's Army

By Art Buchwald

MADRID, June 25.

MOVIE publicity people in Europe work very hard. About four months ago a United Artists drumbeater called us up and said: "As you know, Robert Rossen is making 'Alexander the Great' and we are arranging a junket of hand-picked journalists to tour Greece with Arnold Toynbee, who will point out all the great battlefields. Are you interested?"

"Has Toynbee said he'll go?"

"No, but the hand-picked journalists said they would."

Three months later the same man called and said that Toynbee "had chickened out" (a military expression meaning he wasn't going) and the Greek trip was off. The film was being made in Spain anyway, because Spain looked more like Greece than Greece did. A few weeks later the man called again.

"Rossen is marrying off 5000 virgins in 'Alexander the Great' in one of the greatest scenes ever filmed in movie history. A hand-picked group of journalists has been invited to attend the wedding."

"Who's he marrying them off to?"

"Five thousand Greek soldiers. You see, according to history, Alexander wanted to mate the East with the West, and he decided to make his soldiers marry Persian women—the offspring would be the twain that were never supposed to meet."

We calculated that even if the press agent was exaggerating by double, that still left 2500 marriages—a figure which could not very well be ignored. But when we arrived in Madrid we discovered that we had been taken in. Rossen was making a film called "Alexander the Great" but he wasn't marrying off any virgins to any Greek soldiers.

● "I DO HAVE A MASS WEDDING in my picture, but it won't take place for a couple of weeks, and as far as I know Alexander never specified what kind of girls he wanted for the wedding, as long as they were Persian," Rossen said. "This week we are filming battle scenes. As you know, Alexander fought the Persian and Greek mercenaries at Granicus and routed them in his famous human tank attack. As long as you're here, why don't you play a Greek mercenary?"

"How much does it pay?"

"A dead Greek gets $4.80 a day, a dead Greek lying in the water gets $5.50; a Persian soldier on horseback gets $6, a dead Persian gets as much as a dead Greek; one of Alexander's men who doesn't speak gets $3.95, a refugee from a battle gets $3.80. We are using 800 soldiers from the Spanish Army and they are getting $1.50 a day. Take your choice."

We told Rossen we'd rather be a live Greek than a dead Persian and he agreed to pay us $3.95. Since we were a hand-picked journalist it was decided to put us next to Alexander in the battle line-up. Alexander was being played by Richard Burton, the Welsh actor who began his epic career in "The Robe."

● ON THE BIG DAY we were delivered to a tent at 8 o'clock in the morning for make-up and costume. We were thrown a helmet, a spear, a sword, a gray tunic and a shield. Franco's army and cavalry arrived and they were divided up, half to play Persians, half to play Greeks.

At 11:30 we started to line up for the battle, Persian and Greek mercenaries on one side of the river, Alexander and good Greeks on the other side. We aimed our spear at a Greek mercenary and waited for Rossen to give the word. Alexander, played by Burton, moved in beside us.

"Be careful of these Spaniards," he whispered. "They think they are really fighting a battle and you're liable to get hurt."

"Fear not, Alexander," we told him, "we'll be eating Darius's cavalry for breakfast and we'll be spitting Greek mercenaries out of our teeth in the morning."

"I'm not talking about the Greeks and Persians. I'm talking about the Spaniards. These extras are crazy. They start swinging swords and spears, and no one knows who's going to get hit."

● ROSSEN WAS SHOUTING for us to keep quiet. "Have we got enough blood on the set?" he asked the make-up department.

They said there was enough blood.

Suddenly Rossen gave the signal for Alexander's men to attack the Persians. About 600 grim-faced extras on each side started to square off, throwing spears, swinging swords and dropping rocks.

"Come with me!" Burton shouted, and we both jumped down behind a large rock and hid from the director.

"Victor Mature taught me how to do this," Burton said. "When the scene is over we'll put dirt on each other and Rossen won't even know the difference."

● WE THREW DIRT and some more blood on each other, and by the time Rossen yelled "Cut!" we looked in pretty bad shape. The battlefield was littered with Spanish extras holding their heads in their hands and moaning and groaning. The Persian cavalry had gone off into the hills, completely routed.

We walked back to where Rossen was standing.

"Nice work, boys," he said.

He's Changing West End Skyline

Joe Campagna Came to Town to Build the Montclair, Liked St. Louis, Is Busy Now on Other Major Projects

THE MONTCLAIR, $3,500,000 APARTMENT BUILDING AT 18 SOUTH KINGSHIGHWAY WHICH WAS COMPLETED IN 1951. IT WAS CAMPAGNA'S FIRST ST. LOUIS BUILDING PROJECT.

ARCHITECT'S DRAWING OF THE FRONTENAC, $6,000,000 APARTMENT BUILDING WHICH CAMPAGNA WILL ERECT ON THE SITE OF THE OLD PARK-VIEW HOTEL.

By Dickson Terry

TO MOST St. Louisans the name of Joe Campagna means nothing. Yet in the past five years he has done and is doing more to alter the skyline of the west end along Kingshighway, overlooking Forest Park, than anyone else has done in the last quarter of a century.

In 1949, Campagna came quietly into town and by 1951 he had completed the $3,500,000 apartment building at 18 South Kingshighway called the Montclair, the largest and swankiest apartment building to go up in St. Louis in many years.

Last year he began work on an 11-story office building for doctors not far from the Montclair at Euclid avenue and West Pine boulevard, which is rapidly nearing completion and which is unique in that every suite in the building has been designed to suit the needs of its tenant.

In a few weeks, work will begin on what will be perhaps the most radical alteration of the skyline in that neighborhood when the old Parkview hotel at Kingshighway and West Pine is demolished to make room for a swank, 16-story apartment hotel to be known as the Frontenac.

The man responsible for these buildings — and others yet to come — is a short, handsome, soft-spoken, 44-year-old builder of Italian descent who operates so quietly and modestly that few St. Louisans know anything about him. This has given rise to some conjecture during the past few years as to why the Montclair — and Campagna — happened to come to St. Louis, but there is nothing mysterious about it. It happened because Campagna came to St. Louis to look around, decided it was a fertile field for such development and went to work.

CHANCE, however, did have a hand. Joe Campagna is one of the two sons of Anthony Campagna, who came to this country from Italy in 1908 and became a top-ranking builder of large apartment buildings in New York City. During the past 40 years, Anthony and his kinsmen and partners, the Paterno brothers, have erected some 60 apartment and office buildings in New York, among them some of the city's largest and toniest. One of them, a 16-story co-operative apartment building on Fifth avenue, has only 11 apartments ranging in size from 12 to 22 rooms. The highest price ever paid for an apartment was paid for a 22-room nook in this one. A New York physician paid $900,000.

In 1949, the Campagnas started a building in Washington Square South in New York, the building which was later to become the Montclair in St. Louis. Part of the foundation had been laid and the steel was fabricated. Then a couple of trustees of New York University, one of them Robert Moses, the nationally known authority on civic planning, called on the elder Campagna. They pointed out that New York University had grown up around the site of the proposed building. They frankly admitted the site had been available for many years and that the school had shown a lack of foresight in not acquiring it.

In short, the trustees prevailed upon Anthony Campagna to give it up. Anyway, he had a soft spot in his heart for the school, having studied law there when he first came to America.

"We looked all over New York for another site," Joe Campagna explained, "but we couldn't find one that suited the proportions of the building. So finally we gave up and advertised the steel for sale. We even had the elevators ordered.

"About that time we were approached by a St. Louis group who thought the building might be brought to St. Louis if they could get the corner of Kingshighway and Lindell. The deal didn't go through, but the more I heard about St. Louis and the Kingshighway area, the more interested I became. So I got on a plane and came out to see for myself. Frankly, I was amazed that such excellent possibilities in that area, in a city this size, had been left undeveloped."

CAMPAGNA soon made a deal for the property where the Montclair now stands. The steel was shipped to St. Louis and construction began. The Montclair and the Frontenac are designed to bear out ideas that the Campagnas, father and sons, have long held about the trends in modern living.

"Many well-to-do couples don't want to buy large homes anymore," Joe feels, "especially people who are getting along in years. Neither do they want to live in a hotel. Furthermore, they don't want enormous rooms and high ceilings. They want well-planned, comfortable living quarters, with ample closet space, well ventilated and so designed that they don't have to go through the bedroom to get to the living room."

The $1,500,000 Doctors building will be the result of some ideas that have been turning over in Joe Campagna's brain for several years. He has long felt that most buildings which doctors occupy were erected with little thought to the tenants' needs.

"It's one of my pet subjects," he explains, "and now I'm doing something about it."

The first thing he did, after the rough plans were drawn, was to select his tenants. Then all offices and suites of offices were designed to suit their needs.

The Frontenac will in many ways epitomize the ideas of the Campagnas of what an apartment building should be, and there will be nothing comparable to it in St. Louis, Campagna says. It will be 16 stories high and have 213 apartments with underground garages for tenants available to the elevators, and a second level for open parking. Rents will range from around $135 a month to around $850 a month, depending on size and location.

A typical floor will have 14 apartments ranging from small ones with one bedroom, which will rent for around $135 a month, to larger ones which will cost in the neighborhood of $350 a month. But on the top floor there will be only four apartments. They will have two bedrooms each, also a maid's room, three baths, an entrance hall, a gallery, a large living room, a library, a dining room, two terraces on one of which there will be an outdoor grill for barbecuing, and 11 closets. They will rent for around $850 a month.

The Frontenac, incidentally, will be owned by the Knights of Columbus and operated by the Campagnas. Joe and his brother John, who are erecting the building at a cost of $6,000,000, recently signed an agreement to sell it for a fixed but unrevealed sum on completion.

At the same time the Knights of Columbus signed a long-term lease with the Campagna Management Corp. for 20-year terms renewable to 99 years. The apartment is one of the largest single acquisitions of the Knights of Columbus, which owns millions of dollars worth of property over the country, and the first time they ever purchased a building before it was started.

JOE CAMPAGNA is proud of the fact that when he was a child he could read a blueprint, the result of home environment.

"Dad was always bringing home the plans of some building, and my brother and I used to like to look at them, and in time I got so I could understand them."

When Joe went to college he didn't become an architect, but took some courses in architecture.

"That was my father's advice," he explains. "If you have a feel for it," he thinks, "you will learn more by experience than from books."

That was the way the elder Campagna learned. Anthony Campagna, who is now 71 years old, was born in a village near Naples. His father was a fairly well-to-do builder, and Anthony went away to the University of Naples, where he earned a degree in law. He graduated second in his class and planned to settle down to a career of law in Naples. But he kept getting letters from a former teacher telling of the wonders of a place called Chicago. Anthony Campagna finally succumbed. He went to Chicago, but it was hardly the paradise he expected.

The Paterno family, five brothers of them, had previously emigrated to New York from Campagna's home town in Italy. Starting as laborers, they had become successful builders. They persuaded young Campagna to come to New York. He did, but he still intended to be a lawyer, and went to New York University to study more law. He worked for the Paternos during the day, studied law at night. But he never became a lawyer. The Paternos drafted him into the building business. He married into the family and with the Paternos started building apartment houses.

IN 1943, Fiorello LaGuardia, then Mayor of New York, appointed him to the Board of Education, and as chairman of the committee on buildings and sites he directed, without pay, a $100,000,000 program of school construction.

In 1950, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey appointed him a member of the State Commisson on School Buildings. On a trip back to Italy he restored Virgil's tomb at Naples and contributed to a number of important excavations. In 1930, King Victor Emmanuel conferred on him the title of Count, which he at first declined to accept. When he agreed to accept it, he asked if the title passed only to the oldest son. Told that it did, he said no, he had two sons and unless they could both be counts he didn't want it. So by special dispensation, both Joe and his brother, John, will be entitled to call themselves Count. Like their father, they appreciate the honor, but would never dream of using the title.

Both Joe and John grew up in the building business. They went to Princeton, and then came home to join their father in the company.

"My father," says Joe, "is a man of tremendous vision. Unlike many men, he never looks for the obstacles. When he envisions a building, nothing can stand in his way. Although he is not an architect, he has a great feel for planning. I think I have inherited that feeling to some extent. I get a great satisfaction out of planning a livable apartment, and seeing it become a reality."

Just off the drawing board now are two other buildings which Campagna plans to build in Clayton. One of them, to be erected at the corner of Clayton road and Brentwood boulevard, next door to the new Craig Furniture building, will be an office building, three floors above the ground and two below. The ground floor will house a bank, and the upper floors have been designed for doctors' offices. Then west of that, facing south on Clayton road, he will erect another office building, all of which will be occupied by one St. Louis corporation.

Campagna is married and has three children, two boys, 16 and 10, and a daughter, 9. He lives in a 10-room house at No. 2 Log Cabin lane in Ladue. He doesn't own the place, but he plans to either buy or build in St. Louis.

"When I came here in 1949," he says, "I planned to stay only a year to supervise construction of the Montclair. But when I had been here a few months, I couldn't bear the thought of leaving.

"I like the tempo of life here, which is much calmer than that of New York. And I found that you can get just as much accomplished and more out of life without the pressure and speed of New York.

"Then too, there are all these locations standing idle, and so many buildings that need building—"

JOSEPH CAMPAGNA, LEFT, 44-YEAR-OLD BUILDER, LOOKS ON AS LUKE HART, HEAD OF THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS, SIGNS PAPERS TRANSFERRING OWNERSHIP OF THE FRONTENAC TO HIS ORGANIZATION. CAMPAGNA WILL BUILD IT AND THEN LEASE IT FROM THE K. OF C.

ANTHONY CAMPAGNA, 71, JOSEPH'S FATHER, WHO CAME TO THIS COUNTRY FROM ITALY IN 1908 AND BECAME ONE OF NEW YORK'S FOREMOST BUILDERS.

ARCHITECT'S DRAWING OF THE DOCTORS OFFICE BUILDING AT WEST PINE AND EUCLID, NOW UNDER CONSTRUCTION. IT IS BEING BUILT AT A COST OF $1,500,000.

Sad Song, But Great Big Smile

By John Keasler

AS a close student of the more appalling arts, I have for some time been fascinated by the appearance of many singers on television—they look so all-fired happy while singing those broken-hearted songs.

They had me downright baffled there, for quite a while.

I couldn't figure out if they were suffering from split, or at least badly fractured, personalities or if they just didn't understand the heart-rending lyrics they were smiling about.

However, I have reached the solution that the TV singers merely are trying to keep up our spirits while breaking our hearts.

This, while considerate of them, is quite confusing, and I wish they would quit it. Frankly, if I'm going to have a sad song sung at me I don't want the singer grinning like a raccoon in a salmon cannery.

Take a typical lyric. (These may not be the exact words, as the mind tends to reject horrible memories.)

"You left me here alone in old Iowa, while you broke all our vows in old St. Loo," chortles the crooner. "I wish I was free from this ol' misery, but I got holes in my heart over you."

BUT DOES HE look sad? He starts a warm grin along about "Iowa," is wreathed in happy smiles by "misery" and throws his arms happily wide at the conclusion, chuckling merrily, as if he were peddling happy-gas instead of tales of unrequited love. It is to wonder.

The most incongruous effects, probably, are obtained in the new jump type tunes. ("Da-whop, da-whop! My bitter tears are scalding; Da-whop, Da-whop! My bitter tears are scalding!)

Here the crooner punches the atmosphere in uncontrollable glee, claps hands and in some cases does a hot clog—he's so happy by the time his true love absconds with the refrigerator repairman that you'll be exhilarated enough to get up and change the channel.

There's one popular girl singer who can sing a presumably woeful lament about Lover, Come Back to Me and simultaneously look like a jackpot winner on Stop the Music. I never saw anybody so happy about misplacing a lover boy—the only logical conclusion is she is secretly glad the clod is gone.

There's little relief in Western or hillbilly keening, either. "Although I got my faithful horse I am filled with plumb remorse since our rose of love turned into a cactus, my mesquite baby!" yowls the cow caddy. In anguish? Nay—he beams like a uranium pros- pector with a loud geiger counter, beats a happy tattoo on his suffering git-tar and, at the bitter end, the whole band shouts "Ya-hoooo!"

I DON'T KNOW. There was a day when a singer could get through Birmingham Jail without looking like he had just been paroled, but apparently the old TV-personality-smile has changed all that.

Right now it's time for me to go watch Woogie Wilson and Boo-Boo Jones, the singers on my favorite network show—occasionally they do a hilarious duet of that number where everybody goes off lover's leap in a platoon movement, and I wouldn't want to miss them. I'll tell you, those kids make me cry until I laugh.

The Art of Angling

Catching Fish Isn't Most Important Part

By Leonard Hall

OUR sympathy goes out to any fellow angler who, like John Slayton in his recent plaintive epistle in the "Letters" column, has arrived at the sad conclusion that there exists no such thing as a fish. As the accompanying editorial pointed out, there seems lacking here a true understanding of the Waltonian philosophy that angling is the contemplative art, in which the act of fishing far exceeds in importance the mere catching of fish. The cardinal singing at the stream-side, the red lobelia blooming along the bank—these are as much trophies to be prized as the eight-inch bullhead or two-pound catfish. Yet it seems to me there may also be another failure on the part of the good Mr. Slayton, if he will forgive my pointing it out. Could it be that, like most human beings, he endows his finny quarry with the mental processes of man and thus expects to outwit the fish as he would a human adversary? If this be the case, he would do well to go back again to old Izaak Walton, who thought of fish as fish and each one in accordance with its own peculiar habits and psyche. Or to the captain of the fishing schooner in Kipling's "Captain Courageous" who explained his unusual success on the Grand Banks off Newfoundland by stating that he had "learned to think like a codfish."

The truth of the matter is that fish do exist. The canned tuna and salmon on our shelves might possibly be a concoction made from sawdust and vitamins, but how about the glassy-eyed red snappers, mackerel, pike and lake trout which stare at us from their beds of ice on the counters at the fish markets? More than that: this very morning, down at the Big Pond, I saw a giant bass leap into the air to engulf a dragonfly and later watched the big fish defending its nest under a button bush which grew at the water's edge. And on the other side of the pond, in shallow water, were dozens of bluegill beds, each guarded by an aggressive little fighter.

● ON OUR RECENT EXPEDITION to Current river, our purpose was to capture on film all of the various "trophies" for which one makes such a trip. Among these might be listed the pleasure of camping under the starry sky, of cooking over the wood fire and of thoroughly saturating oneself for a few days in the wilderness scene, unencumbered by most of the trappings of civilization. There was little time for fishing. Yet since fishing—and even an occasional fish—are among the "trophies" to be expected on a fishing expedition, we wanted to film at least short sequences of fly casting and the capture of a smallmouth bass or two. Of course, this was the kind of thing which I explained to the KETC crew could not be guaranted. But I promised that Ginnie and Ray Moss, our guide, and I would do our best. To be on the safe side, we slipped off up the river early one morning with some fat chubs in the minnow bucket. Then by thinking like a bass, rather than like the average fisherman, we selected an almost unfished bit of water that seemed certain to harbor a good smallmouth or two. The method paid off and there were soon three husky bronzebacks on our stringer.

As events proved, we needn't have gone to this effort just to catch fish. When it came time to make the fly casting sequences, we started downstream with Dan Lovins and his cameras in the boat. Ginnie selected her fly with care and I added a sliver of pork rind to the lure to give it that extra wiggle which appeals to bass, goggle eye and perch alike. Ray took us through the first run without result. But in the next one, along a rocky bank where the current ran down into a deep hole, there came a good strike. The camera started grinding, Dan got his pictures and we headed back to camp for the next sequence.

● ONE THING which surprised me about our trip, though I suppose there's no reason why it should have, is the tremendous amount of effort required to shoot a carefully scripted action film, out on location. We were out for a total of six days, though on two of these it rained. And though hours of editing still lie ahead, we're hopeful that we got 30 to 40 mintues of good material. This, considering that we were up each morning at 5 o'clock and worked until there was no more sun, comes out to about eight minutes of film for a 12-hour day. After the editing comes the writing of narration, which is no small chore in itself. In addition to camping, outdoor cookery and fishing, we wanted our picture to tell something of the river story; of how it came into being, of the people who live along it and use it as a "highway," of the geology of the Ozark area and the way in which the giant springs are formed which pour their crystal water into the parent stream.

On the last afternoon we broke camp and drove to beautiful Blue Spring, some 10 miles up the river, to shoot the final sequences. Afternoon sun danced on the spring branch, pouring its 40,000,000 gallons per day of clear water into the Current, and we worked until the steep valley was cloked in early twilight. Then Hugh and Ilene Denny, proprietors of the lodge, insisted we stay for supper, which we gladly agreed to do provided we could furnish our share of the meal. Out of our ice box came a half-dozen good bass which were soon sizzling in the kitchen.

Sitting on the wide veranda with a toddy, we decided the expedition had been a grand success, with only the expectant worry of waiting to make sure the film is up to our high hopes. And all of us agreed—Mayo Simon and Marty Schneider, the directors; Ann Remmert and John Korty and Ginnie and I, the actors; Dan Lovins, the photographer, and Ray Moss, our guide—that the hard work was worth while if you enjoy the films when they show this summer on KETC's "Almanac."

Cooking and Eating Outdoors

Urge to Cook Over Charcoal Is Big Business — Some How-to-Do-It Hints

IF YOU WANT YOUR OUTDOOR KITCHEN TO HAVE AN ORIENTAL ASPECT, TRY THE CHINESE WOK (LEFT) AND THE JAPANESE HIBACHI.

SOME HELPS FOR OUTDOOR COOKING: A PAINT THINNER FOR STARTING THE FIRE; GLOVES TO PREVENT BURNS ON THE HANDS; A PORTABLE GRILL.

By Helen Evans Brown and James A. Beard

COOKING outdoors on a summer evening is becoming a Great American Custom. It's for everyone who may have a 12 by 14 backyard or a 10-acre estate. Helen Brown and James Beard, two of the country's top epicurean authorities have made a study of outdoor cooking. This is the first installment in a series from their book, "Outdoor Cookery," just published by Doubleday & Co., Inc., New York.

THE urge to cook over charcoal is so strong that the manufacture of barbacue gimmicks has become big business. But an elaborate grill is not necessary to enjoy this new form of recreation.

Your broiling facilities may be a piece of gridded iron, salvaged from an old stove and propped up on a pile of rocks. Or it may be a stainless steel cookery unit, complete with an adjustable firebox, an electric spit, and other such luxuries.

Whatever your circumstances, you can find some device that will fit your needs, at a cost of a few cents or several hundred dollars. A grate from an old oven, propped up on bricks, makes a good grill if yard space is available. Another popular one is a Chinese wok or the top of an old hot-water tank, set on a tripod or propped steady with bricks or stones.

There are several types of portable grills. There is the folding type, usually with a trough-shaped firebox and folding legs, and the bucket type with a grill top and a cover. The latter offers the advantage of being able to carry the fuel to the picnic, ready to light on the spot.

THE Japanese hibachis, made of cast iron, may be a little heavy for toting any distance, but they are easily moved from patio to indoor fireplaces, or to station wagon. A hibachi is a little portable charcoal stove or "fire bowl," which has been used in Japan for centuries, mostly for heating purposes and keeping tea-water hot and hands warm. It has captured the fancy of the American hostess, and hibachis are everywhere.

Wheeled grills are probably the most popular. There are four types. One, the brazier, has a large, shallow, round firebox. Another is the cart, or wheeled table. This may be a simple grill with a firebox beneath, or a de luxe job that includes shelves under the firebox, a hood, a warming oven, cutting boards, and a spit, either manual or motor-driven. This is probably the most practical of all grills. The very fancy ones are no more functional than the simpler ones.

The third type is the vertical grill. With this the food cooks in front of the fire rather than over it. Some cooks like this idea, claiming that as the fat or baste cannot drip into the coals there will be no flare-up.

Another grill is the one with multiple spits. Originally designed for skewer cookery, this is useful for cooking meats and vegetables at the same time. For instance, potatoes can roast on one spit, spareribs on another, and onions on a third.

Another type of charcoal grill is growing in popularity: the kitchen grill, the very newest thing in the modern home. These are being installed not only in palatial summer residences but in year-around suburban places and winter apartments. Charcoal cookery, it seems, is more than a fad.

Besides your charcoal grill, you will need a few other necessities and perhaps some niceties. Although the market is flooded with trick gimmicks which, supposedly, no charcoal chef can live without, we have kept our list down to a minimum. Few pieces of special equipment are necessary for outdoor cookery. These few, however, are invaluable.

A TABLE: This may be a makeshift one, but it should be sturdy and a good working height. One with a hardwood cutting surface is ideal.

GLOVES: Both canvas work gloves and asbestos gloves are all but indispensable. The work gloves are for handling charcoal, a method we think far more efficient than the use of tongs. The asbestos gloves are for use when adjusting spit or roast over the fire, moving the grill, spreading the fire, or other hot jobs.

TONGS: These are invaluable for turning steaks and other broiling foods, and for lifting potatoes from coals, corn from grill, and pots from hooks. They are inexpensive, so it's smart to have more than one pair.

THERMOMETERS: One should be attached to the spit so that, when turning, you will know the heat to which your meat is subjected. The other themometer is to determine the interior temperature of the meat that is cooking.

We prefer one with a round dial—it is easy to read without performing gymnastics to do so. Regular meat thermometers have one great disadvantage — their lowest temperature marking is usually 140 degrees, making it impossible to get a proper reading for rare meat.

We use, instead, a thermometer that registers from zero to 220 degrees, thus enabling the cook to know when the meat has reached room temperature as well as the cooking temperature. They are available at laboratory supply houses.

SPRINKLER BOTTLE: A large bottle with a sprinkler top, such as is used for dampening clothes. This to douse over-exuberant flames.

BASTING BRUSH: We sometimes use a faggot of parsley or other herbs, but we have to admit that a good long-handled pastry brush does a better if not so picturesque job. We both reject, and violently, the use of a cotton dish mop as a swab.

HINGED BROILERS: One will do, but three is the ideal number:

1. A basket grill—a sort of shallow hinged box made of wire with a long handle—is perfect for thick whole fish, lobster, chickens and other foods that may be difficult to turn. It is also obviously quicker to turn five or six at one time than to do them individually.

2. A hinged grill with medium grids for thinner pieces of tender meat, such as fish fillets or steaks, sweetbreads and such.

3. A hinged broiler with fine grids for such small tidbits as oysters, kidneys, chicken livers and shrimps.

DRIP PANS: These are essential for all spit roasting. Properly placed, they will catch all the drippings from a roast as the spit turns, preventing the fat from dropping into the coals.

SKEWERS: These are necessary for shish kebab, shaslik and all foods cooked en brochette. They may be simple ones of metal or wood, or elaborate steel ones with wooden or decorative handles. Heavy wire with an end looped for a handle is a satisfactory improvisation.

THERE are three customary fuels for cooking over coals. Wood, not often used, is ideal. It should, however, be sweet-tasting and non-resinous, such as wood of any fruit or nut tree, or grapevine, or a hardwood such as hickory, oak or maple. Charcoal, made from hardwood and available in various-sized chunks, is perhaps the most frequently used fuel.

Lastly, there are briquets, which may be made of charcoal, anthracite, or some by-product such as fruit pits.

Which is best? Wood is fine and what's more it's fun, but it does take time to burn into a deep bed of coals. If both it and time are available, by all means use it. Charcoal is the favorite of many. Its only disadvantage is that the different-sized pieces sometimes make an evenly burning fire a little difficult. This may be avoided by making little pieces out of the big ones.

Charcoal briquets are probably the most satisfactory of all. We have been using them almost exclusively. There are, however, several different kinds. The kind we prefer are made from hardwood charcoal.

The anthracite briquets have recently appeared in small bags, complete with a starter. Just light the bag and forget it until the coals are ready. For ease and cleanliness of handling these are excellent, especially for small portable grills.

The third type are briquets made from by-products, such as fruit pits. These are fine, but they burn very hot, so care must be taken in their use.

Gone are the days when fire started with wood chopping and ended with much huffing and puffing to get the thing going. However, this method is still sometimes resorted to, and should be understood. Crumple newspaper sheets into balls and pile five or six in a heap. Around them lay slender dry sticks of wood, tepee fashion, and light. When the wood is burning merrily, drop some charcoal into the flames. Add to the fire by putting more fuel around the edge and raking it in as it ignites.

THE EASY WAY: Use a commercial kindling fluid, tablet, flare, or jelly, but make sure it's odorless. Unpleasant fumes are apt to linger and add their odor to the meat. We use, and highly recommend, an odorless paint thinner which we buy by the gallon at any paint or hardware store.

Make a heap of charcoal or briquets (or of small logs, if you are using wood). It is best to build up the charcoal into a pyramid, using, for the average fire, about 35 to 40 briquets, or the equivalent in charcoal.

Pour about a half cup of the fluid over the top of the heap, allowing it to stand for two or three minutes before lighting. The fire should be ready to use in half an hour, when the fuel is completely ignited and a little white ash begins to show.

SIZE OF THE FIRE: Most charcoal cooks make much larger fires than necessary. A fire may be added to at will, as long as it is not allowed to die too low. The original size of the fire is regulated by two factors: The capacity of the firebox and the size of the food to be cooked. A small portable grill or hibachi will need only 12 to 24 briquets to cook the portions to which it is adapted.

For larger wheeled or permanently fixed grill, a fire of from 30 to 40 briquets (or a like amount of charcoal) is usually enough to begin with. If the roast is a large one, more fuel must be added later. This is done by edging the buring coals with more briquets and raking them in as they ignite.

FIRE FOR COOKING: Half an hour or a little longer after lighting, the fire is ready for cooking. It should be spread evenly with a poker or other such device, so that the space covered by the burning coals is a little greater than the surface of the meat.

The cooking should start with the fire at the greatest distance from the food, so that as it cools it can be adjusted closer for more heat—unless, of course, you want first to sear whatever you are cooking.

HEAT CONTROL: Here's where many charcoal cooks have trouble. Unless your grill has either a firebox or grill that may be raised or lowered you will have to control the heat by spreading the coals or dousing with water.

News and Notes From the Hollywood Scene

By Sheilah Graham

HOLLYWOOD.

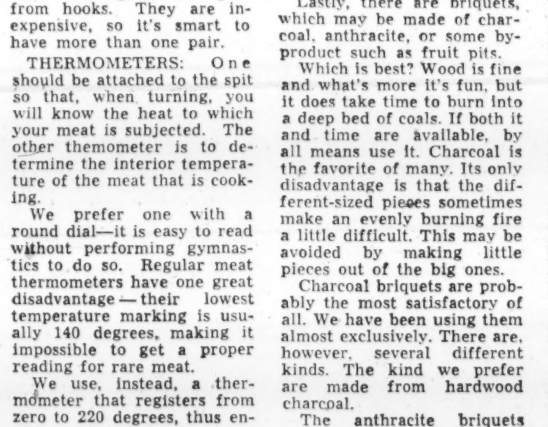

ARLENE DAHL and her husband, Fernando Lamas, are opening a little shop, with the emphasis on lingerie, in the new Beverly Hilton Hotel. . . . Dorothy Warren, daughter of Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren (and former Governor of California), makes her acting debut with Richard Carlson on TV's "I Led Three Lives."

It was the unexpected bad weather in Las Vegas that caused the collapse of Noel Coward. He was lucky to have Gordon MacRae pinch hit for him at the plush Desert Inn. . . . Her current "Kismet" will be Ann Blyth's last picture before the birth of her second baby early next year. Ann's husband is Dr. Jim McNulty. . . Doris Day and Marty Melcher are confabbing with Bob Weiss in London and it looks like Doris will be leaving Columbia Records for Capitol. To me, she's best of the gal singers.

JANET BLAIR, between rehearsals on the Jimmy Durante show, told me TV is her dish. And to do Jimmy's show, plus "Climax" and Video Theater, she gave up the "other woman" role with Debbie Reynolds in "The Tender Trap." . . . Janet, incidentally, has the biggest penthouse in New York—on Fifty-second street, overlooking the East river.

Janet Leigh, now a big business woman—dresses, coats and suits — tells me she always thought that the movie business was pretty mad until she went to the garment district in New York for her dress tie-up. "That's the maddest place in the world. Making pictures is a cinch compared to making dresses."

ARLENE DAHL AND FERNANDO LAMAS . . . OPENING A HOLLYWOOD SHOP.

Olivia De Havilland and Pierre Galante will be among the guests of Elsa Maxwell's cruise to Greece and the Greek isles at the end of August. Galante will cover the doings for his magazine, Paris Match and Olivia will visit the ruins and get a suntan.

Met Diva Licia Albanese has been asked to dub in her singing voice for Gina Lollobrigida in the current movie Gina is making, "The Most Beautiful Woman in the World," based on the life and loves of former Met star Lina Cavalieri. But Licia asks, "Is my voice sexy enough?"

Good and Bad Discipline

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

IN any home where there are children, especially of teen age, family harmony, manners, morality, and basic happiness depend largely upon the sort of discipline exercised by parents. Discipline is good, but many methods of applying it are bad. Bad discipline can defeat every desirable end as thoroughly as no discipline at all. So, I can't agree with Mrs. B. completely when she writes:

"Is there any way to get a husband to enforce order in the home? Our youngsters are out of hand, but I can't seem to make my husband take any responsibility for making them toe the mark. And incidentally, Dr. Popenoe, I think you ought to stress this point a little more in connection with juvenile delinquency. If more young people had fathers who would make their authority felt, we'd have a lot less trouble nowadays."

A good deal depends on how they make that authority felt, Mrs. B., and the experts don't agree that a heavy-handed dad wielding the whip is the best foundation for citizenship. Sociologists Paul H. Landis and Carol L. Stone of Washington State College studied the backgrounds and behavior of 4310 high-school seniors.

"A COMPARISON of the democratic and authoritarian families on the basis of these data leaves little doubt as to the superiority of the former in terms of harmonious parent-teen-age relationships," they report. "Teen-agers in democratic families have fewer problems by far than those in authoritarian families. They enjoy a closer relationship with their parents and experience far fewer frictions. This is true of both sexes and of rural and urban young people alike."

The young people who grew up in authoritarian families with the patterns of "Do as I tell you" also had more problems entirely outside the field of the family—in community, school, in personal relationships and in social participation generally.

Incidentally, the authors found that "by far the most democratic family, as far as boys are concerned, is the town family — that is, families in places of below 2500 population." Parents in general were twice as likely to practice a democratic form of family administration with boys as with girls. This may be because the girls are considered more in need of protection, and the parents therefore keep them on a tighter rein.

"The superiority of the democratic family," these authors decide, "probably lies in the fact that, by and large, it substitutes co-operation for commands."

IT IS THEREFORE a better training ground for citizenship and for future marriage.

Answers to Questions.

Q. How can I keep my teenage daughter from getting involved in the "going steady" habit?

A. It's not easy; but if you plan tactfully for or arrange enough occasions when she goes out with others, you'll help to break up a "grewsome twosome."

Q. Should a child be forced to study music lessons just the same as school lessons?

A. This is a point on which teachers differ widely. Some think his unwillingness is evidence that the teacher is incompetent. Some think he won't get much value from music lessons that are practiced at the point of a gun—figuratively speaking. Some think a child might as well learn right now that he will have to do, all his life, important things that he would prefer to shirk.

Leather Goes Into Print

By Elizabeth Hillyer

AS if we hadn't been falling in love with leather all over again for the past three years, along comes something startlingly new and fascinating —leather imprime, which presents leather for the first time as a printed material.

Sketched are four of the first pieces of furniture in the imprime leather as it was introduced at the Southern Furniture Market at High Point, N.C.

LOOK LIKE FABRICS, don't they, those upholstery covers? And they do take the printing as clearly. But this is leather that wears and wears, wipes clean with a flick of a damp cloth, and keeps its color—all this and fetching new design, too.

A sprinkling of tiny flowers in many colors patterns the leather for two chairs, the one at top left an antique French chair, the other a white-painted eighteenth-century style English pull-up chair. Then, to prove the scope of possibilities for the new leather in a wide variety of chair style, a wrought iron and wicker chair has a seat cover which is patterned with a scattering of small abstract triangles. And finally, big sketchy black shells on white make removable slings for a collapsible chair with rawhide bindings.

Colors in the new imprime leathers already include 400 as they head for the stores.

THERE WERE other new leathers, too, in the showings. One is called tulip shadow and has an unusual glow to it. Another is a silver and black tortoise shell leather, and still another palomino, a tawny tough top grain with all the natural markings.

Start Off With a Shower

A REFRESHING shower is one summer beauty favor that you cannot afford to forego. Let it be an eye-opener in the morning and rain loveliness upon you.

Maybe you're a tub enthusiast . . . you can continue to be at night when you want to relax. But, we're talking about the morning shower that starts your day off right. You can't be too sparkling clean.

A shower makes you feel so good . . . stimulates your circulation, tones body muscle, improves the texture of your skin, and altogether peps you up. Dry yourself with a heavy absorbent towel. It's twice as refreshing if you splash on a lovely floral cologne before dressing.

THE SKIN is one of the organs by which we eliminate certain unpleasant but perfectly natural odors. This is done through glands which cover the entire surface of the body. It is Nature's way of throwing off body poisons, actually. So, we must be cautious about following basic rules of cleanliness . . . particularly in summer when the temperature soars. A shower washes these impurities and at the same time wakes you up. It should be a tepid, quick shower, though. Be generous with the soap, or the natural oils of the body will shed water. Do not be a big, brave girl or a Spartan and try an icy-cold shower just because you heard someone rave about the benefits of it.

IF YOU TO TRY IT and are pleasantly warm afterwards, it's all right. But, if you are chilly and have a shivery, goose-pimply session followed by cold hands and feet . . . forget the whole thing. Also, remember never to stand under the cold shower for more than three minutes, nor take one if your body is either over-heated or chilled—you remain a warm-shower-girl!

Try and Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

PANGLOSS, the peppery pilot, flew from one coast to the other for a big airline, married one of its most attractive hostesses, and in general was sitting pretty. He did like to go on a bender once in a while, however, which annoyed his bride plenty. One night she locked all the doors, and when Pangloss came staggering home, the poor lad couldn't get in.

"Hey, sweetie, open up," he begged. "We've decided to go on strike Monday, and I was held up at headquarters talking about it. Honest."

The wife was not too impressed. "Talking about the strike, eh?" she jeered. "Now suppose you march right back to headquarters and tell them about the lockout."

Five Generations in Ministry

Three Sons of the Rev. August C. Rasche All Are Following in the Family Tradition

By Mary Kimbrough

IT SHOULDN'T have surprised anyone who knew the family that the three Rasche boys, Paul, Theodore and Carl, decided to go into the ministry as each finished college. In fact, if any of them had decided differently he would have broken a family pattern firmly set for five generations.

Their father is the Rev. August C. Rasche, former pastor of St. Peter's Evangelical and Reformed Church at St. Louis and Warne avenues and now pastor of the Evangelical and Reformed Church in Bay, Mo. Their paternal grandfather was the Rev. Frederick Rasche, who served in pastorates in Iowa and Missouri. Their maternal grandfather was the Rev. I. T. Seybold, who held pastorates in Illinois, Indiana and Missouri.

The uncle of their great-grandmother on their mother's side was the Rev. G. W. Wall, a founder of the Evangelical Synod of Missouri and the first pastor of St. Peter's and St. Marcus churches.

In addition, according to their mother's carefully-kept records, the boys are following in the professional footsteps of two great-great-grandfathers, three great-uncles and seven uncles. They also have seven first cousins, three second cousins and one third cousin in the ministry. At the last count, they could claim kin to 27 living and deceased pastors, all but two of them having served the Evangelical and Reformed Church. One became a Methodist and the other a Congregationalist.

CARL, the youngest, gained an additional 24 ministerial relatives when he married the former Ruth Weltge. Her great-grandfather, grandfather, father, four great-uncles, three uncles, one brother, one brother-in-law, three first cousins, seven second cousins and two third cousins all have gone into the church. One of her second cousins is the renowned Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, professor of applied Christianity at Union Theological Seminary in New York.

Carl, 38, is chaplain and administrator of Deaconess Hospital in St. Louis where his father formerly served as president of the board. Paul, 45, holds a pastorate in Huntington, Ind., and Theodore, 42, is pastor of Trinity Evangelical and Reformed Church in Belleville, Ill. The boys, like their father, are graduates of Elmhurst College, Elmhurst, Ill., and of Eden Theological Seminary in Webster Groves.

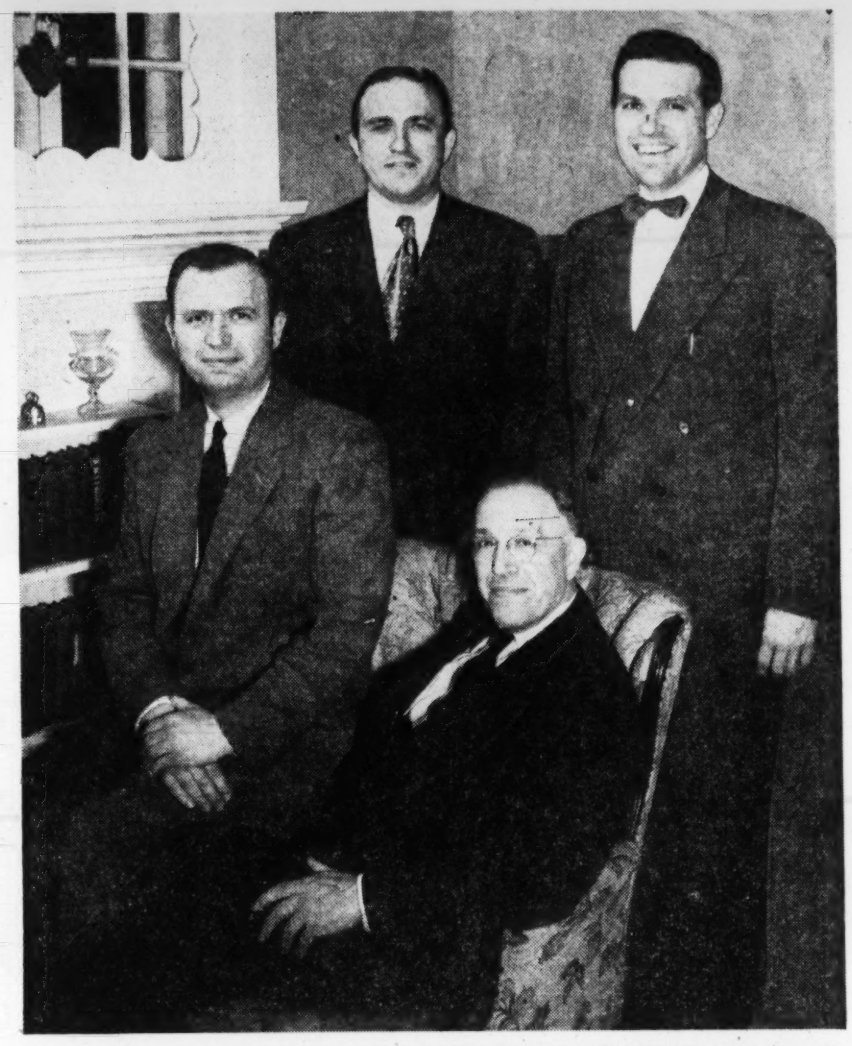

And again like their father, the boys made their own decisions to go into church work. None felt compelled by parental pressure. All saw in it a path of service and the most appealing of all professions.

Of the three, only Carl has remained out of a full-time preaching job. Leaning toward social work as a college student, he found in his former association with Caroline Mission and later at Deaconess an opportunity to combine preaching and pastoral work outside the church itself. Although he is responsible for the administration of the hospital, he gives much of his time to counseling staff and patients and each Sunday conducts a worship service in the hospital chapel for nursing, medical and maintenance personnel as well as for any patients who can leave their rooms.

Speaking for his brothers, Carl said each of them made his own decision to go into the ministry just as their father had followed his own father into the church.

"But neither Dad nor Mother ever told us that was what they wanted us to do," he said.

His father smiled and nodded his head in agreement.

"No, we didn't tell them—but Mother and I were mighty happy when they decided," he said. "I remember being in a young people's meeting one night when the boys and girls were talking about the work they would follow. Remember, Carl, how you spoke up and said you would be a minister? That was the first time you had said so definitely."

"ONE of the other boys, I recall, came home from school and said he had told his teacher he wanted to be a pastor," put in Mrs. Rasche. "He said she told him, 'Well, you'll never have any money if you do.'"

But, having grown up in pastoral homes themselves, both Dr. and Mrs. Rasche felt that there were many advantages to overbalance the traditionally low ministerial salaries.

"Why, when we were married and had our first church, we were paid an annual salary of $450," Mrs. Rasche said. "But that was more than my own father had earned."

Mrs. Rasche was born in Blackjack, Ill., where her father was pastor of an Evangelical Church. From there, the family went to Rockport, Ind., and on to Wellington, Mo., where her path crossed that of her future husband, son of the pastor at nearby Levasy. They met at a church meeting and were married in Wellington a few weeks after his ordination in 1907. The three boys were born in Wheeling, W. Va., where Dr. Rasche was pastor of St. Paul Church before coming to St. Louis in 1926.

"It wasn't so hard growing up in a minister's home," said Carl. "We were expected to reflect good judgment and we were aware of our own obligation in that respect."

He laughed as he recalled that "at times we may have misused the freedom that Mother and Dad gave us.

"I remember slipping off and going to a show on Sunday just to see how it felt. I was pretty uncomfortable, believe me. But we really didn't feel that the restrictions were harsh. Living in a minister's home had its advantages. It was the center of activity and there was always a generous spirit shown toward the pastor's family."

NONE of the boys, as Carl recalled, ever seriously wanted to "kick over the traces" and turn his back on church work.

"But I can remember going through a period of questioning when I was in college and wondering just what I believed," he said. "Somehow, I felt I had certain convictions but I couldn't back them up when others challenged me.

"Finally, I forced myself to go back to the fundamental truth. I believed in God and I started from there. Gradually, I worked my way back."

Carl also attributed part of his desire to follow other members of the family into church work to his devotion to his parents and his admiration for the service they had given.

"We were a very happy family," he said. "Of course, Dad was out of the home a great deal on pastoral visits, but we grew to accept that as a natural sacrifice any pastor's family must make."

"YES," agreed Dr. Rasche, "the visiting program always appealed to me a great deal. After that came my interest in confirmation class, the teaching of young people, and finally preaching.

"I'm sure one of the reasons our family has been held together so closely is that Mother and I write a letter to one son each week and send carbon copies to the others so everyone keeps up with everyone else.

"Another thing was our own family altar. We had joined in family worship in our childhood homes, and we continued that when we established our own homes. Now, our sons carry on the custom with their own children."

Paul and his wife, the former Luella Steckmann of Le Sueur, Minn., have two daughters, Gerda and Kyra; Theodore and his wife, the former Ruth Heyl of Waterloo, Ill., have two daughters and one son, Ellen, Margaret and David; and Carl and his wife have one daughter, Christine.

"It has been a good life for us," said Dr. Rasche, "and it has been made richer for us by the lives our boys have led. Carl said a moment ago that we didn't urge him to go into the ministry. That's right, but I think I know one good reason why they chose the church.

"It was Mother's and my prayers."

King of Sands at Waikiki

By Stan Delaplane

HONOLULU.

IN THIS CAREFREE Pacific Paradise of happy carefree natives, the happiest is probably Chick Daniels. Daniels is the barefoot Sherman Billingsley of Waikiki, Maitre d'beach boys. King of the sands.

Daniels, father of five and grandfather of nine, is known as a "beach boy." If you are smart, however, you will address him politely. The seating arrangements on the carefree sands of Hawaii are as rigid as behind the gold ropes of the Stork Club.

It is Chick who sits under the shady kau tree and arranges the beach tastefully in front of the Royal Hawaiian. At this moment, Dean Martin is dressing up the front row.

In the little roped enclosure toward the Outrigger Club, we have Warner Shelly, president of N. W. Ayer; Dan London, manager of the San Francisco St. Francis; Robert Johnson, vice president of United Air Lines. This is the Waikiki version of the Cub Room.

Properly sorted, sheep from goats and presidents from account executives, we lie under the Waikiki sun. And Mr. Daniels annointeth us with sun-tan lotion.

CHICK DANIELS went on the beach in 1918. He is the oldest member of that tight fraternity of beach boys who give surf board and ukulele lessons. He has seated diplomats and brushed off brash movie stars to the back row.

In 1950, Chick was discovered by Arthur Godfrey. Apparently he showed the proper amount of humility for Godfrey took him to New York where he appeared for a month among the cake mix talent.

His true name is William Daniels.

"Long time ago," said Chick, "they have a plantation strike and three of us sign up for guards. Three Bills. Little Bill, Tough Bill and me. Finally they got to call me Chick because that time they have fellow name Chick was great detective in book.

"Like Turkey. They call him Turkey because he speckle like turkey egg. Panama, he always talk to people: 'I just come from Panama.' No, he never be in Panama, 'jus' say that, you know."

Chick works for the Royal Hawaiian. But the rest of the beach boys are under the command of the very social Outrigger Canoe Club. There are 12 beach boys. A handsome job with some outstanding tips at times. I was present a few years ago when a grateful customer handed Panama $400. Panama disappeared for a week.

At Christmas and New Year, Chick said, the beach boys give a party.

"Maybe 150 people. Everybody sing, dance, laugh. Everybody happy! No trouble at all. Start at 9 o'clock, stop at 1 o'clock. Sometime little trouble brewing, but we stop just like that.

"Everybody happy. No trouble. Sometime laugh, sometime cry. But no trouble. Drink, dance hula, play ukulele, whatever you want. Some party!"

CHICK SAID it was no bed of plumeria, however, this catering to the sun-tan set.

"Some people want umbrella up even when the wind blow, OK. I tell boys, 'Never argue.' They say, 'Chick, I get a bad time.' I go talk those people myself. No trouble at all. Everybody happy."

Chick said next to the New Year and Christmas party, the biggest thing on Waikiki is a beach boy's funeral.

"We take all canoes, big one in center with ashes. We take way out to sea. Sing all his favorite songs. Have service with priest just like in church. We get way out to sea, we sing canoe club song. We throw ashes out to sea, then all come in, fast, fast. Race in! Catch big wave, paddle fast! Back to beach."

Chick said about 15 beach boys are laid away, out there beyond the big combers that carry the outriggers and surf boards in to shore. Most of them Chick knew when——:

"Only the Moana Hotel here in those days. Every night we go out on the pier. Play music. No charge. Everybody happy. Now more commercial, no music on beach. But no trouble. No trouble at all."

A 75th Birthday, Then Rest, for Helen Keller

By Cynthia Lowry

Editor's note: Helen Keller, the great lady who has just completed a grinding world tour on behalf of those who, like her, are blind and deaf, turns 75 June 27. It will be a day of celebration and still more honors but, perhaps more important for Miss Keller, it will be the day before she can start a well-earned vacation.

EASTON, Conn., June 25 (AP).

TARGET date at Argan Ridge is Monday, June 27. Then a bone-tired woman will really begin to unwind from:

A five-month, 'round-the-world tour during which she was more often the sight than the sightseer;

Endless speeches, interviews, photographs, autographs;

The excitements of accepting Harvard University's first honorary degree to a woman.

But first, on Monday, comes Helen Keller's seventy-fifth birthday. And, with some irony, it is a milestone which this smiling, white-haired, blue-eyed woman, who conquered deafness and blindness, must celebrate in spite of her own wishes.

By proclamation, Monday will be Helen Keller Day in Tuscumbia, her birthplace, and in New York City; in Alabama, her native state, and Connecticut, her adopted one. The previous day CBS will present a full-length biographical film narrated by her friend, Katharine Cornell. At the same time Free Europe Press will start dropping the story of Helen Keller, with text and pictures, from balloons behind the frontiers of Communist-held Europe.

Surrounded by her closest friends and associates, Helen will spend the day at her beloved home, Arcan Ridge. Present will be, of course, Polly Thomson, her companion, eyes, ears and alter ego for years; Nella Braddy Henney, her editor and intimate for three decades; executives, both sightless, of the American Foundation for the Blind and the American Foundation for Overseas Blind, which she serves as a working consultant; Et Tu, her shy German shepherd which, no guide dog, flunked out of Seeing Eye School because of a tendency to car sickness.

At some point during the day, she'll cut a cake, a huge, three-tiered lemon-iced masterpiece decorated with sugar roses of red and white. Messages will pour in from the world over.

INDIA'S PRIME MINISTER JAWAHARLAL NEHRU WITH HELEN KELLER ON HER RECENT TOUR OF THE FAR EAST. SHE CALLS NEHRU "A DARLING."

Nearby hospitals will strike it rich with overflow floral tributes.

But the truth is that while a blonde, normal child was born in Tuscumbia, Ala., on June 27, 1880, Helen Keller thinks her real birthday was March 3, 1887.

On that day Anne Sullivan, a young teacher, came to Tuscumbia in an effort to reach the walled-in mind of a 6-year-old child deafened and blinded at 19 months by illness; mute because she never recalled hearing sound.

"I BEGAN to live when Teacher came," she has said often of her "soul's birthday." Within weeks Anne Sullivan—later Mrs. Anne Macy—taught her to relate objects with words spelled into her hand. Within three years she was able to say, gutterally, slowly, painfully, "Now I am not dumb." Mrs. Macy died in 1936, and this fall Helen's biography of this great woman will be published.

So to Helen Keller, Monday really is just another day which she would like to spend picking up the threads of her usual life—rising early for a period of contemplation and Braille Bible reading, walking the paths of her well-cared-for grounds, hands touching lightly the cedar guide posts, savoring the fragrance of the roses, lavender, lemon, thyme and verbena, making sure the feeders and baths are full for the birds, feeling the play of sun and shadow on her face, talking with friends.

Probably it will not be that simple, although there's a conspiracy among her friends to keep things as simple as possible. Miss Keller, whether she likes it or not, is one of the most celebrated persons of our time—no less a legend for the fact that the miracle of her communication with the world occurred 65 years ago.

Miss Keller Says It's Worse to Be Deaf Than Blind

EASTON, Conn., June, 25 (UP).

HELEN KELLER has concluded after a lifetime in silence and darkness that to be deaf is a greater affliction than to be blind.

She says she might have devoted more time to working for the deaf if she had her life to live over again.

"Deafness in a way is harder than blindness," she said. "Hearing is the soul of knowledge and information of a high order. To be cut off from hearing is to be isolated indeed.

"When I was young the question of helping the blind came up first. I wanted to work, and I cast my lot with the blind. I imagine if I had been given a choice I would have taken up work for the deaf first."

Miss Keller thinks that if she had not been blind and deaf she might have become a doctor or a nurse.

"Those instincts are strong in me," she said.

Traveling on behalf of the Foundation for Overseas Blind, Helen's and Polly Thomson's recent globe-girdling trip was a triumphant tour. They traveled 40,000 miles. They were received by Sir Winston Churchill, on the eve of retirement, at 10 Downing street. They dined with Nehru ("He's a darling," reports Miss Keller enthusiastically.) They were feted wherever they went; they inspected hospitals, clinics, homes; they talked with government officials, municipal officials, with adults and children, handicapped and whole.

"BELIEVE ME," said Miss Keller over and over again to the sighted, hearing audiences, "the blind are what you would be in darkness. They are not in need of charity, but in need of opportunities for work which should give meaning to their life. . . .

"Go forth from here and do not rest until the handicapped of your country can hold their heads as high as you do. . . ."

But to the handicapped she brought another message. "Be independent," she told them. "Don't pity yourself."

Her impact — in the British Isles and throughout the East—was so strong that John Wilson, sightless director of the British Empire Society for the Blind commented with amazement in his voice: "I always know when Helen Keller has been to a place before me. Government leaders are not only interested, but they have got some grip on the problem of the blind. They have seen it in reality and this makes a profound difference in building up positive services."

Building up positive services, as a matter of fact, has been the life work of Helen Keller. At Arcan Ridge the other day Miss Keller—still too fresh from her trip and still too tired to have hammered out more than a general impression of her working junket—answered the question of whether the journey had been worth the effort and fatigue. Her words tumbled out in a rush:

"It was most marvelous. Magnificent. It was more than an inspiration to me. There is no measuring the joy I have had in my opportunity to break more of the chains of blindness and deafness. If my friends can measure that joy, then they will rejoice in the good that has come to others through them. . . ."

"IT was marvelous," added Polly. "But it was hard, too. Always taking off or landing. But we were fortunate. We were so well looked after. It seemed that as soon as we got off a plane, there would be a doctor looking us over to make sure everything was all right."

She sighed, and added with a wry smile:

"But I do think it will never end, even after we do. I've always figured that when Helen and I are crossing the River Styx, Charon is going to be standing there saying, 'Please, just one more autograph. . . ."

From Chester Bowles to Oveta Culp Hobby, Miss Keller's diplomatic work of good will has been praised. But perhaps the one which pleased Helen—and undoubtedly Scotland-born Polly—most was a letter signed "Crastinius" and published in the Dundee Evening Telegraph and Post during their visit.

"The United States of America," said Crastinius, "is to be congratulated on the choice of Dr. Helen Keller as a plenipotentiary to world peace. In her hour in the Far East she will, I am sure, convince even the Communists that we in the West mean well. She is indeed a diplomat par excellance."

"But now," said Polly as Helen smiled assent, "we're going to rest—at home. Then later, perhaps, a little while at Martha's Vineyard. "It's wonderful to be home."

"It is," said Helen. But it was a wonderful trip, too."

'Wide Wide World' Debut Tomorrow

NORTH AMERICA will be the television stage tomorrow night when NBC tries out something new, in conjunction with the television networks of Canada and Mexico. From 7 to 8:30 p.m. "Wide Wide World" will be presented and will be carried in St. Louis by KSD-TV. The telecast will take the audience back and forth across the continent, with telecasts from various points in the United States, Canada and Mexico. It will, in the words of NBC officials, "enable millions of North Americans to experience the thrills of new places through live television." There will be pictured such scenes as skiing on Mount Hood, swimming in the Pacific surf, a jazz session in a New Orleans cabaret, a water extravaganza at Jones Beach, Long Island, N.Y. Cities visited will include Chicago, New York, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Denver and Des Moines. From Stratford, Ontario, will be shown portions of the premiere of the 1955 Shakespearean Festival. From Tijuana, Mexico, will come fiesta time activities and a telecast from the bull ring where Mexico's famed comic, Cantinflas, will fight a bull. More than a thousand people and 40 television cameras will be used in the three-nation production. Dave Garroway will be the announcer.

KATHRYN AND ARTHUR MURRAY . . . DANCE PARTY RETURNING ON KSD-TV.

A film on the life of Helen Keller, blind and deaf humanitarian, will be presented on KWK-TV and KTVI at 4 this afternoon in honor of her seventy-fifth birthday. Katharine Cornell will be the narrator.

Anniversary for Sullivan

Ed Sullivan will celebrate the seventh anniversary of his Toast of the Town on KWK-TV at 7 tonight. Guests will include light-heavyweight champion Archie Moore and national open golf champion Jack Fleck.

Steve Allen will be master of ceremonies for a 90-minute Allen in Movieland program on KSD-TV from 8 to 9:30 Saturday night. Among movie stars appearing with him will be Pat Crowley, Piper Laurie, Jeff Chandler, Tony Curtis and Audie Murphy.

FAY WRAY . . . CO-STARRED WITH PAUL HARTMAN IN "PRIDE OF THE FAMILY."

The Arthur Murray Party will return for a summer series on KSD-TV at 7:30 Tuesday night, with Kathryn Murray as hostess to guest celebrities. Guests on the opening program will be Teresa Brewer, Hildegarde and Bill and Cora Baird and their puppets.

Singer-pianist Matt Dennis will replace both Tony Martin and Eddie Fisher on KSD-TV this summer while the singers are on vacation. He'll start substituting for Martin tomorrow and for Fisher next week.

Pride of the Family, a family situation comedy starring Paul Hartman and Fry Wray, will start on KWK-TV at 1 p.m. today, replacing Lassie.

KETC's Intermezzo program at 10:15 Thursday night will be devoted to the St. Louis Little Symphony.

Place the Face Back

Place the Face, with Bill Cullen as master of ceremonies, will take the 7 to 7:30 spot Tuesday nights as a summer replacement.

Cliff Arquette, who played Charlie Weaver in the Dennis Day TV show, will be seen on a new Do-It-Yourself program on KSD-TV at 6:30 this evening.

From 5 to 6 this afternoon, KTVI will telecast the closing ceremonies of the United Nations tenth anniversary session in San Francisco.

Johnny Carson, young CBS comedian who in the past has substituted for others, is getting a show of his own, at 9 Thursday nights on KWK-TV.

This Is Your Music, a program featuring "the music all America loves best," will replace The Star and the Story on KSD-TV at 9:30 Saturday nights.

Scenes from a movie about the Lewis and Clark expedition will be shown on Variety Hours on KSD at 7 tonight. Guests of host Charlton Heston will include Fred McMurray and Donna Reed.

Waymon Parsons, Christian Church minister of Shaker Heights, O., speaking on "Religions: A Problem or a Passion?"

Soprano Margaret Roberts will sing Verdi's "Tacea La Notte," Coates's "Bird Songs at Eventide" and "Hageman's "I Know Where I'm Going" on Enchanted Hour on KWK at 7:30 tonight.

Bill Goodwin Celebrates 25 Years as Announcer

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP).

IT BEGINS to look as if broadcasting will turn out to be the career of Bill Goodwin. He has held a lot of different jobs in radio and television, and this week reached his twenty-fifth anniversary in the business without missing a season.

Goodwin currently is star and master of ceremonies of ABC's Wednesday night show, "Penny to a Million" (on KSD-TV at 3 p.m. Sundays), and he handles it with the same warmth and enthusiasm that he has given the Burns & Allen and Bob Hope shows for years.

Although Goodwin has been in television four years and has appeared in 37 movies, he says many people still identify him quicker from his voice than his face.

"I GOT INTO a taxi here in New York and gave the address I wanted, and the driver turned around, looked at me and asked, 'What's your name?'" Goodwin relates. "I said 'Bill Goodwin' and the driver said "I thought I recognized your voice.'"

Goodwin's new TV assignment makes him a coast-to-coast commuter. He and his wife and their four children live in Hollywood. He flies into New York every Monday to prepare for the Wednesday night show and returns to the west coast every Thursday. He teams with singer Peggy King on live commercials for a local show there on Saturdays.

Starting a week from tomorrow, Goodwin will take on a new daily program, It Pays to be Married, to be telecast by KSD-TV.

BILL GOODWIN . . . AFTER 25 YEARS, BROADCASTING SEEMS TO BE A CAREER.

He's intrigued by the formula of his "Penny to a Million," in which two panels compete for a possible top prize of $10,000. The first question answered correctly pays only a penny but the reward doubles with each succeeding one.

Some other public figure will be on the program.

V. K. Krishna Menon, India's official delegate to the U.N., will be the American Forum guest on KSD at 9:30 tonight.

Television Letter Box

SCIENCE FICTION THEATER on KSD-TV more than makes up for the loss of X Minus One on KSD. Vidal's satirical "Visitor to a Small Planet" (a science-fiction play which even John Crosby raved about for once) was utterly tremendous. Only hope we can have more of the same.

SCIENCE FICTION FAN.

My thanks and appreciation to KSD-TV for the Laurel and Hardy movies shown every Saturday afternoon. Never has a comedy team brought as many laughs as these two. Keep up the good work.

JOHN L. GAY.

Tell Clint Youle that all the drouth sufferers hate him when he chirps, "No rain this week end." He is thinking about golfers instead of gardens, crops, trees, ponds, wells, etc. Also tell him he can prevent his crayon from squeaking by letting it hang down under the hand. Clint is a nice "feller" except for his squeaky crayon and his cheerful chirping when the weather stays so awfully dry.

I watched Grand Ole Opry on Channel 5 and I thought it was very good. If we had more programs like this, I am sure television would be much better. I think there is no better music than hillbilly music. I think many people will agree with me that if you would have more of these shows you would have more viewers. Quit trying to please the society people and try to please the common people. On Saturday nights we turn off the television because you have such programs as George Gobel.

L. J. MORGAN.

My family and I really enjoyed the Grand Ole Opry Show. Hope you can keep it on TV.

Researcher Says TV Stimulates Reading

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, June 25.

A LIBRARIAN named Helen Evelyn Peerless of the Queens Borough (N.Y.) Public Library has compiled a massive bit of research on the effect of television on reading. Of course, she is not the first to do this but her thesis seems to me to be the most impartial and most thorough.

Also it happens to support my own prejudices in the matter, which is important. People—not just me, but everybody—like to sniff at surveys which come out for the opposite point of view. Slanted, they'll say. Too small a sample. Loaded questions. But if they happened to agree they'd ignore all those factors. (I once knew a comedian who spent years deriding the Hooperatings—until he got in the first ten, when he went around quoting his Hooperating to anyone who would listen.)

ANYHOW, Miss Peerless's conclusions, based on a staggering amount of research, are, in the main, reassuring. The effect of television on reading is only temporarily bad; in the long run, television may very well increase rather than lower the amount of reading you do. The most pregnant bit of a 134-page thesis (which, incidentally, she undertook simply to get promoted to Grade 4 librarian) is this:

"Where reading was an ingrained habit to begin with, it did not take long to re-establish itself. Statistics show that, although only 29 per cent of TV owners read books, only 35 per cent without sets do. The difference of 6 per cent is not particularly alarming."

In other words don't blame television. A lot of people just don't read books—and that's that. Now as to reading of all sorts— newspapers, magazines, and the rest of it: "Television complements rather than destroys other media. Its over-all effect is that of broadening, if not deepening, popular horizons." And in this connection, she quotes Andrew Heiskell, publisher of "Life."

"To the average person each new interest makes him that much more receptive to further information and knowledge. As each American, thanks to education and to these media, climbs the cultural scale he becomes both a more valuable citizen and a better customer for these media."

NOW THAT MAKES a lot of sense, too. In intellectual circles, there is a widely-believed sophism that mass media —like radio or television—are automatically dangerous, that they dilute culture. It is assumed that Jackie Gleason will lure people away from the study of Aristophanes. Actually, the people who are studying Aristophanes are going to pay no attention to Jackie Gleason, whereas the people who listen to Gleason may—if they listen long enough—hear of Aristophanes where they would not otherwise.

HELEN KELLER . . . HONORED ON KWK-TV AND KTVI ON HER 75TH BIRTHDAY.

A little culture is better than none. One of the questions Miss Peerless asked was whether people took a famous book out of the library after seeing it dramatized on television.

A surprising number do just that. Of course, as Miss Peerless admits, they are mostly young people — the proportion drops off sharply after the 20s —and mostly students, but that fact that any one is stirred to get a classic after seeing it on the Robert Montgomery show is encouraging indeed. Miss Peerless even makes the point that reading a TV columnist's review of, say, "Great Expectations" or "Macbeth" calls people's attention to classics they might not otherwise have heard of.

"The paradox of the Queens Borough Public Library's rising circulation and the borough-wide TV-penetration of 88 per cent (in 1953) indicates that reading and televiewing are highly compatible. The TV set is now an accepted part of the American home; in most cases it has been there long enough for the novelty to have worn off," she concludes.

People, I admit, still read fewer books than they ought to; but then they always did.

Concerts on Radio, TV

THE first 17 World Music Festivals programs to be broadcast this summer on the CBS radio network will come from the Royal Danish Festival in Copenhagen today. It will be heard on KMOX at 10:45 tonight. The concert by the Danish State Radio Orchestra will include Johann Peter Hartmann's Overture to "Corregio," a Flute Concerto by Carl Nielsen, and a Bach Motet by the Copenhagen Boys' Choir.

William Warfield

William Warfield, American baritone just back from a European concert tour, will be the guest on the Donald Voorhees program on KSD at 8 tomorrow night. His songs will include Verdi's "Credo," Mendelssohn's "On Wings of Song," and the spiritual, "Little David, Play on Your Harp."

Mimi Benzell and Robert Rounseville will be guest soloists on the Howard Barlow program on KTVI and KXOK at 7:30 tomorrow night. Miss Benzell's solo will be Kern's "Can't Help Singing," and Rounseville will sing "Diane," by Erno Rapee and Lew Pollack. Together they will sing "People Will Say We're in Love," by Rodgers, and "Nuit d'hymenee" from Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet."

TOMORROW NIGHT'S Band of America program on KSD at 8:30 will include a salute to Canada Day. Paul Lavalle will conduct the 48-piece band in "Land of the Maple," by Lorendau," and "Vive la Canadienne," a traditional tune. Another highlight will be the premiere performance of Kent Cooper's "Mardi Gras Parade."

Another in the series of concerts by the Canadian Broadcasting Company's Symphony Orchestra will be heard on KWK at 8:30 tonight.

Another in the series of recorded concerts by Washington University's Little Symphony will be heard on KSD at 9:30 tomorrow night. Pianist Leo Sirota, head of the piano department of the St. Louis Institute of Music, will be soloist. With the orchestra he will play Von Weber's "Konzertstuck." The orchestra is conducted by Jascha Horenstein.

'The Vagabond King' Next at Municipal Opera

PRINCIPALS OF FRIML'S "THE VAGABOND KING," WHICH WILL BE REVIVED BY MUNY OPERA TOMORROW NIGHT: FROM LEFT, OLIVER CLIFF AS KING LOUIS XI, GAIL MANNERS AND CLIFFORD HARVOUT AS KATHERINE AND FRANCOIS VILLON, EDDIE BRUCE AS GUY TABARIE, AND GLORIA LANE AS HUGUETTE.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

THE SEVEN YEAR ITCH—George Axelrod's smash stage comedy about a summer bachelor with big day-dreams who gets scared when tempted by the girl upstairs is immensely funny on the CinemaScope screen, with Tom Ewell adroit as the star. Director Billy Wilder has cunningly souped it up with sex with Marilyn Monroe as a sort of super-Petty Girl who is ravishingly provocative and highly improbable. ST. LOUIS.

DAVY CROCKETT, KING OF THE WILD FRONTIER—Walt Disney's three hour-long TV shows, which started a new craze among small boys, have been compressed into a 90-minute movie, in wide screen and Technicolor. It is rousing adventure, slanted to juvenile taste, and Fess Parker is perfect as Davy. As a production, however, it does not compare to other Disney adventure movies like "Rob Roy." ORPHEUM.

THE SEA CHASE—John Wayne is hardly the type as a Prussian career officer, kicked out of the German Navy for opposing Hitlerism, who leads the British Navy a merry chase to keep them from capturing his lowly freighter. The torpid dramatic values of the chase aren't compensated for by assigning Lana Turner as a supercargo, even when she does her best acting in a tight gown. FOX.

THE COBWEB—A lucid, literate and absorbing look into an expensive midwest psychiatric clinic and its turmoils, where the staff and those concerned with them seem to be only slightly less maladjusted than the patients. Like the William Gibson novel from which it was made, suffers from lack of dramatic punch in the windup. A good cast, headed by Richard Widmark, Lauren Bacall, Gloria Grahame and Charles Boyer. LOEW'S STATE.

DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE—Eighth and last week for the merry, whacky and funny British comedy which makes light of five years in a medical school. With Kenneth More, Dirk Bogarde and an adroit cast. SHADY OAK.

TO PARIS WITH LOVE—Alec Guinness, as a British aristocrat, attempts to recapture romance in Paris, but, although there is some gentle, delicate humor, it is so dryly done it is touched with anemia where it could have used some racy farce. PAGEANT and RICHMOND.

CINERAMA HOLIDAY—Sights and sounds of the United States, Paris and Switzerland in the startling depth process. AMBASSADOR.

TOM EWELL, AS A SUMMER BACHELOR, AND MARILYN MONROE AS THE GIRL FROM UPSTAIRS, GET GAY OVER A BOTTLE OF CHAMPAGNE IN "THE SEVEN YEAR ITCH," THE CINEMASCOPE VERSION OF THE HIT STAGE COMEDY, NOW AT THE ST. LOUIS.

LANCE FULLER AND VIRGINIA MAYO IN SOME MOONLIGHT AND RIPPLING LAGOON STUFF FROM "PEARL OF THE SOUTH PACIFIC," SUPERSCOPE ROMANCE TO HAVE ITS WORLD PREMIERE AT THE FOX TUESDAY, WITH MISS MAYO APPEARING IN PERSON.

RUDOLF FRIML'S operetta, "The Vagabond King," one of the big hits of the 1920s, will be given for the sixth time by Municipal Opera for the week beginning tomorrow night. All performances start at 8:30 o'clock.

Gail Manners, the beautiful blond soprano who has appeared many times at the Forest Park theater, will be the heroine, Lady Katherine de Vaucelles. Clifford Harvuot, Metropolitan Opera baritone, will be Francois Villon. Gloria Lane, a mezzo-soprano, will play Huguette, the tavern wench. Oliver Cliff will be the cunning King Louis XI. Eddie Bruce will have the comedy role of Guy Tabarie.

Other principals will be Joan Kibrig as Lady Mary, Norman MacKaye as Tristan L'Hermite, Susan Steell as Margot, Robert Eckles as Oliver Le Dain, Eugene Dorian as Thibaut D'Aussigny, Michael Pollock as Casin Cholet, Joe Cusanelli as René de Montigny, William MacCully as captain of Scottish archers, and Lewis Bolyard as Noel Le Jolys. Patricia Bowman and Edward Stinnett will be premier dancers in a classic ballet.

The operetta, based on Justin McCarthy's play, "If I Were King," tells of the poet-thief, Villon, his love for a great lady, and how he became ruler of France for a day. The book and lyrics are by Brian Hooker (author of the best-known translation of "Cyrano de Bergerac"), W. H. Post and Russell Janney. The most famous songs are the stirring "Song of the Vagabonds," and the lyric duet, "Only a Rose." Others are "Love Me Tonight," "Some Day," "Huguette Waltz" and "In the Spell of Night."

The operetta previously was produced at Forest Park in 1928-29-35-44-49.

Harvuot won the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air in his final year at the Juilliard School of Music, and after a military career in World War II, joined the Met. Miss Manners is returning for her fourth summer in the past five at Muny Opera. Miss Lane sang in Gian Carlo-Menotti's "The Consul," and just recently was featured in his "The Saint of Bleeker Street." Bruce has had roles or bits in 78 motion pictures, and played 1600 performances in the original and touring versions of "Finian's Rainbow." Stinnett was recently in the Broadway show, "The Girl in Pink Tights."

The massive sets of fifteenth century Paris will be the first by Paul C. McGuire, who has succeeded Eldon Elder as art director.

Patricia Brinton Little Symphony Soprano Soloist

PATRICIA BRINTON, California soprano, will be soloist with the Little Symphony in its fourth concert of the season at 8:45 p.m. Friday in the Washington University Quadrangle. Jascha Horenstein will continue as conductor.

The soloist will sing arias from Mozart's "Don Giovanni" and "The Magic Flute." She made her European debut in Paris, and recently appeared as soloist with Municipal Orchestra of Cannes with Horenstein conducting. She has just completed a concert tour of Germany and will take part in the Salzburg Festivals soon.

The orchestra will play Mendelssohn's Italian Symphony, and J. S. Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 5.

'My Little Chickadee'

"My Little Chickadee," the 1940 comedy starring W. C. Fields and Mae West, will be shown at the Cinema Guild, 455 North Boyle avenue, at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. Saturday and next Sunday.

Marilyn Spencer

Marilyn Carol Spencer, pupil of Leo C. Miller, will give a pianoforte recital at the Miller studios, Euclid Building, Euclid and McPherson avenues, at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday. She will play the Haydn D. Major Sonata, the Mendelssohn G Minor Concerto, and works by Bach, Liszt, Respighi, and Chopin.

Art and Artists

Europe Calls as Season Ends

By Howard Derrickson

AT THE CLOSE of St. Louis's busiest art season since World War II, the city's artists are headed for change of scene and re-creation of spirit in art capitals, colonies and retreats from Paris, Rome and Berlin to Cape Cod and the fastnesses of Maine.

A suggestion of St. Louis artists' financial success, despite the crowded exhibition schedule, is the fact extended European travel has supplanted the quick trip to Mexico as the favored vacation plan.

Already abroad for the summer are Werner Drewes and Robert S. Robison, Washington University School of Fine Arts teachers, who will travel from country to country with their wives, and Alexandra Korsakoff-Galston, Maryville College art supervisor, now visiting relatives in Berlin.

In Europe for the next academic year as well as the summer are William Fett, studying in Italy, and Walter Barker, whose travels will take him to Germany, France and Italy.

FRED CONWAY, who spent a week away from his art school classes last month at the Allison Wells art colony at Way, Miss., and lectured at the Memphis School of Art on the way back, will repair again to Rockport, Mass. He and Mrs. Conway will leave here tomorrow.

In a season of water color sketching there last year, Conway turned out a wealth of outstanding work that provided one of the St. Louis season's most successful one-man shows. With both New York and St. Louis exhibits in prospect, he will work this summer in oils. In New York, his gallery is Grand Central Moderns; it is the Martin Schweig Gallery of Modern Art here.

Edward E. Boccia and Warren Spaulding, Conway's colleagues who won top prizes this season, will also spend the summer in this country. The Spauldings are to stay in a cabin near Camden, Me., and the Boccias will travel to the northern Midwest after summer school closes here.

H. Richard Duhme, who teaches sculpture at the university, is spending two weeks with his family at the Vassar College summer institute before beginning his third six-week period of sculpture instruction at the Syracuse University summer school on Lake Chautauqua, N.Y.

OTHERS FROM THE St. Louis art colony who are vacationing in Europe this year include Jeana Dale Bearce, married yesterday in New York and leaving July 6 for a 10-week European honeymoon; Eva Heifetz, who dropped this column a card recently from Italy; Miss Jaquelin Ambler, assistant supervisor of education at City Art Museum, who left last week for a two-month tour of France, Italy and Spain, and her museum colleague, Mrs. Edwin Grossman, whose European jaunt is to begin in August.

Painting in their studios will occupy Dean Kenneth Hudson, Charles Quest and Tanasko Milovich, all of the art school faculty, and Aimee Schweig, Mary Institute art teacher. In late summer the Quests and Miloviches plan automobile trips in Missouri and Illinois.

Sculptor Carl Mose is postponing travel pending completion of six commissions, including a Jewish Tercentenary memorial flagpole base for Forest Park, a Gen. John J. Pershing memorial for the state capitol in Jefferson City and a portrait of the late Mayor Joseph M. Darst for the Darst Housing Project.

THE ART SEASON which, according to the calendar, ought to be over now, has exhibited unusual activity and continues to do so. Quality, of course, is something else again. Prize contests in the Artists' Guild's rapid-fire schedule attracted excellent work and record entry lists, but there were other guild shows whose omission would have improved the general bill of fare.

Religious art shows increased in number (four in all, instead of the usual one), but not in quality, if one art history teacher's protest was valid. The flight to the suburbs has found expression in artists' doings, particularly the full program of the St. Louis County Art Association and the improved offering of shows at the Monday Club, Webster Groves. Artists whose exhibitions have been held there this season include Quest, Alexandra Galston, Mildred Bailey Carpenter and Rodney Marshall Winfield.

At City Art Museum, the Goya exhibition has eight more days to run, the Society of Independent Artists will open a one-month display Friday and on the same day there will begin a two-month showing of the Strietmann color lithograph collection. Included will be the work of Bonnard, Braque, Cezanne, Chagall, Dehn, Kirchner, Renoir, Vuillard, Toulouse-Lautrec and others.

About 75 paintings, prints, drawings and sculptures by 23 St. Louis area artists are included in a "New Talent" show extending through July 15 at Greenwich Gift Gallery, 4304 Olive street. Hours are 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Deborah Kerr to Do Film 'Tea and Sympathy'

HOLLYWOOD, June 25—Deborah Kerr will play in the film version of "Tea and Sympathy," the role she created and played on stage for two years.

Starting date for the M-G-M film is still indefinite, because the studio has been unable to get a production code clearance for the screen play. The play deals with homosexuality and adultery, subjects forbidden for filming by the censor group.

Since studio head Dore Schary has twice attempted and failed to get approval for the film, Miss Kerr said Robert Anderson, the author, has found "a lot of substitute ingredients" for the censorable ones.

Schary will repeat his attempt to get code approval for Anderson's new screen play.

Jimmy Stewart Sees Lindbergh Role as Challenge

LONDON, June 25 (INS).

JIMMY STEWART soon will tackle one of the toughest acting assignments of his movie career—the dramatic story of Lindbergh's trail-blazing trans-Atlantic flight.

One man, alone with his thoughts in the cramped cockpit of a tiny airplane, is the acting challenge Stewart will face in August when he steps into the role of the youthful Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh.

In London, where he is finishing up "The Man Who Knew Too Much," for Paramount, Jimmy said that the picture will be centered around the famed flight itself.

It will begin the night before Lindbergh's take-off from Roosevelt Field, Long Island, and end with his landing at Le Bourget airport in Paris.

"There's only one way it can be done," Jimmy said gloomily. "Flashbacks—and I hate flashbacks."

There will be flashback glimpses, he explained, of Lindbergh's early barnstorming days and of the events which led up to the first non-stop solo flight across the Atlantic from the new world to the old.

But the real story, Jimmy feels, is in the tiny cockpit of the "Spirit of St. Louis" and right now he's searching for a way to keep it there despite the flashbacks.

"You know how it's usually done," he said unhappily. "The screen goes kind of blurry and dreamy, or you see pages blowing off a calendar. I want the audience to stay in that airplane."

The problem hasn't been solved yet, but Jimmy seems to think well-handled music might supply the answer.

Lindbergh's flight went almost entirely according to plan, and this poses an additional problem for the movie-makers. There were no engine fires, no near-crashes, few startling emergencies.

"He did run into that thunderhead," Jimmy said, "and the plane started icing up badly. Then, of course, there was his desperate battle to keep from falling asleep."

NATURE AND CIRCUMSTANCES have shaped Jimmy Stewart perfectly for the role of Lindbergh. He shares not only the famous flier's gangling build and unassuming nature, but also his encompassing love for planes.

He told of landing a damaged Liberator during the war and added, "It's the only time I ever hurt an airplane." When a man uses the word "hurt," as if his airplane were a living thing, he loves flying.

Jimmy approached the making of "Strategic Air Command" with a determination that the air sequences would be believable and he is approaching the Lindbergh picture in the same way.

He has talked over the film with Lindbergh in a general way but Jimmy doesn't want to turn himself into a mere caricature of the famed flyer and he doesn't plan many future conferences.

"I will want to talk to him about his mannerisms in an airplane; how he handles the throttle and the controls, how he fastens his safety belt and so on.

"But there are thousands of feet of newsreel film on the flight. When I get back to the States I'm just going to shut myself in a projection room and run it all through."

Planning a Move

Father Thinks Girl, 11, Could Run a Home

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

I AM a married woman with three children, a girl, 11, a boy, 10, and a baby girl 13 months old. I have been thinking of going back to work to help with our income and we are planning to move back to Denver, Colo. My husband wants me to go to Denver and get a job and start to work and he would come later. I tell him it would be too much of a hardship to try to work, keep house and take care of the three children without his help. He says I am making babies out of the older children and that the girl is big enough to take over the house. He says I am not a good mother because I haven't got the children doing everything in the house. They make their own beds, keep their rooms in order, put away their toys and the girl helps care for the baby. He gets angry and starts calling me names and he yells at the children. I try to be kind and good to my children and if that is being a bad mother then I am just that. I am so tired of always quarreling over the children. We try so hard to please him. I am just about to give up.

TIRED AND WEARY.

A child should be taught responsibility and orderliness, but it's pretty ridiculous to expect a little girl of 11 to run a house and care for a baby. There aren't many men who really understand how much work there is to caring for a family and if a few of them had to stay home, wash the clothes, cook the meals, clean the house, chase the children and still put on a smiling face at 5 o'clock, they'd come to their senses and realize what they're asking of their wives. Whether you go back to work must be decided between the two of you, of course, and how much you need the money. But if it isn't essential for you to augment the family income, I think your family would be far better off with you in the home, continuing to teach your children to take responsibility and giving them the affection all children need. It's bad enough for their father to be yelling at them. Don't let yourself become so nervous and worn down that you start screaming, too. Maybe if you stopped catering to him all the time and instead stood up and made it clear that you are doing the best you can and will welcome no more carping criticism from him, he'll be so surprised that he'll clam up for awhile. Professional help can guide you in a decision about your family's future.

Dear Martha:

● I ALWAYS THOUGHT the man of the household had the right to say where the family would live and where he would work but my wife thinks I'm wrong. You see, Martha, she has a very fine job and earns more money than I do and now her company wants to transfer her to New York at an even higher salary and more responsibility. Well, I'll admit my job isn't so much but I like it and I like St. Louis. She's determined to take this other work even if she has to go alone. We have no children. I don't want our marriage to break up but I think she ought to pay some attention to me. PLAIN MAD.

So do I, but by the same token you ought to listen to her. I don't think we should have a hard and fast rule that the woman always has to sacrifice her career if it conflicts with her husband's work. There are some occasions when the husband might well make the sacrifice. Of course, I'll admit your wife is taking her marriage pretty lightly when she's so determined to get a better title and a bigger pay check that she'll go off alone, if necessary. But apparently she means what she says, so giving up your job and finding another in New York may be the only way you can save your marriage. And perhaps you might enjoy the change.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 14 YEARS OLD and have a serious problem. It seems that whatever I do is wrong and my mother doesn't like the way I do it. She tells me I'm good for nothing and calls me names. I really try but it's never good enough. I have an older sister in college and it seems like they let her do and get everything. I understand that she needs more things than I do but I practically go around in rags. I'd run away if I had the nerve but I don't. I'm so unhappy. I have nothing to live for. DESPERATE.

It would surprise you to know how many girls have felt just the way you do, but they didn't walk in the river and they didn't run away and somehow things seemed to turn out all right. But they had to make up their minds first of all that they would do their part. You say you try, and I'm sure you do, but let me ask you this: have you ever made a real effort just to be pleasant around the house and offered to do something especially nice for your mother? Maybe she's tired, too—although I don't say that's an excuse for calling you names—and she needs your help. Don't assume that everything you do will be wrong. Pitch in and help her and show you want to do what's right. I don't blame you for feeling blue, but that won't help solve the problem.

Dear Martha:

● I LIVE in the same house with my in-laws. They own the house yet we pay our rent like anyone else does. But we are scared to do anything. Everything we do is wrong. I try to help my mother-in-law with the washing and other work, yet my in-laws are always trying to cause trouble between my husband and me. I am so tired of living here but my husband won't move. What would you do, leave with the children and try to make out on my own, or stay and just keep my mouth shut like I have all these years? My husband says he won't move away from Mama and Papa until they die. DISGUSTED WITH LIFE.

You made a mistake when you married a Mama's boy and agreed to move in with Mama. But now you have only two choices: to leave your husband or try to make the best of an unhappy situation. You don't have to let yourself be kicked around in order to stay out of quarrels. You can simply refuse to argue and instead do your best to make everyone—your husband as well as his parents—happier and more comfortable. I don't say your husband is right. You should have your own home, but don't break up your marriage because this seems impossible for the time being.

Martha Carr is glad to answer your questions. If you wish a personal reply, please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. She cannot answer problems of a medical or legal nature.

BRUSHED STROKES FORM A STRIKING PATTERN FOR THIS SKIRT MADE OF LILION THAT IS WORN WITH A V-NECKED PIQUE BLOUSE. SKIRT IS CUT CIRCULAR AND HAS SUFFICIENT STIFFENING TO NEED NO CRINOLINE PETTICOAT.

FOR TRAVEL AND MANY SUMMER OCCASIONS, THIS SUIT OF ORLON AND COTTON IS A POPULAR CHOICE. IT CONSISTS OF TUNIC JACKET, DRESS AND AN EXTRA SLIM-LINE SKIRT.

By Sylvia Stiles

VACATION wardrobes that are in the planning at this season of the year are becoming more dependent upon "separates." By choosing a collection of skirts, jackets, blouses and other related items that are interchangeable, and that may be worn for a variety of occasions, a summer vacationist can give the impression of having an extensive wardrobe without a great outlay of money.

There is still an excellent selection available, and by combining pieces obtained in several different departments, the shopper's own individuality of taste is happily expressed. There is an abundance, too, of popular-priced fashions in dark shades to contribute to the ensembling of complete costumes.

Recognizing the popularity of "separates," many of the designers of summer clothes are featuring complete outfits that serve for numerous events, and actually provide a "packaged wardrobe" at a minimum cost.

Typical of this trend is the appearance this season of cotton and synthetic blend fabric suits consisting of one-piece dress with matching jacket and also a separate skirt. This ensemble is ideal for traveling and for vacation needs. The skirt and matching jacket will be excellent for train, automobile or plane while the dress and jacket will go satisfactorily to luncheon or dinner. Without the jacket the dress with its scooped neckline and brief sleeves not only is comfortable for hot days but may be accented with one's prettiest jewelry for an important dinner engagement. Some of these all-in-one wardrobes even have their own matching hats.

Another practical costume for vacation as well as for business wear in the city has a boxy jacket with matching skirt and separate blouse. Available, too, is a hat made of the same fabric, a dark cotton blended with synthetic to increase its crease resistency. Skirt and blouse give the appearance of a one-piece dress. Since the blouse is sleeveless, it is cool and comfortable. By adding another blouse of a white fabric, the suit will give additional service.

Noted among the separate skirts that seem especially appropriate for vacationists are those circular models made of the new non-woven fabric called Lilion.

Among the interesting developments in fabrics during the past six months is the introduction of a material made of the same substances as the Pellon linings but attractively patterned and colored. Dark and subtle color alliances are featured, among these being the combination of black, brown and beige. Although the skirts are very wide at the hemline, they may be folded into a small suitcase and come out looking well-pressed. Also, because of the use of several different shades in the design, two or three different blouses may be selected to complete the ensemble. Black, beige and white are effective with these three-toned skirts.

Slim skirts made of cottons and linens that have their matching blouses will be included in many vacation wardrobes. By choosing shorts or pedal pushers of the same fabric or shade, the costume theme is emphasized and that wardrobe "stretching" continues. Many women will find that the Bermuda length of shorts is most becoming and more satisfactory than the briefer ones for vacation wear. There also is the fashionable emphasis to the longer shorts this season.

Combinations of printed and solid colored materials also are effective in the creating of interesting costumes. The woman who is tired of the usual themes will find corduroy a satisfactory choice for all or part of a vacation ensemble. Very fine wale corduroy is being used by some of the designers for entire outfits as well as for alliance with printed cottons and silks.

EXPERT HAIRCUTTING . . $1.00
EVERY KIND OF STYLE FROM THE FEATHER CUT TO THE BRUSH CUT
THE SHINGLE TO THE NEW DEEP WAVE CUT
To get the best haircut in town spend only 10-15 minutes at Ragsdale's . . . If your hair-do doesn't stay in or doesn't comb out right it isn't always the fault of the hair styling technique. In many cases improper hair shaping is the cause. The purpose of professional hair shaping is to keep your hair at the length that is best for you. Shaping will give you maximum satisfaction with your particular hair style. A finished hair dress no matter how skillfully styled; can be no better than its foundation and the foundation, of course, is correct hair shaping and expert permanent waving. Let Ragsdale's highly experienced operators shape and style your hair to your individual personality.
We have pleased thousands—we will please you.

You can depend on Ragsdale's Hair Tinting for perfect results.
We treasure your confidence. The reason Ragsdale's have gained such a widespread reputation for excellent beauty shops is that our main concern is seeing that you are perfectly pleased with every detail of our service. This means that you are always sure of complete satisfaction on each visit and every service.
No Tipping or Sales Talk Permitted
Free Manicure Self-Service to All Customers

Your hair is carefully cut, tapered and shaped to conform to your head—a soft, smart definitely becoming effect not too short—not too long, but just right, and so easy to manage. Try it, you'll find your hair a joy to look at—a joy to look after with a Ragsdale cold wave permanent.

PROPER HAIR CARE:
Almost every lady has had difficult problems . . . Ragsdale's has these suggestions for normal hair care:
Brushing . . . your hair should be brushed thoroughly at least once daily, preferably twice. Use long, firm strokes with a stiff brush.
Shampooing . . . One GOOD shampoo a week with all of the soap completely rinsed out of the hair is normal. If your hair is oily or inclined to have dandruff, a good shampoo every five days is better.
Dandruff . . . Most cases of dandruff is simple scalp shedding of dry, dead skin. A good shampoo will remove this type of dandruff and more frequent shampoos often cure it.
The two important things to watch in all shampoos . . . first, be certain that only top quality soaps are used, and second, have all soap rinsed out of the hair. Ragsdale guarantees to use the best shampoo soaps obtainable.
Permanent Waves . . . The best permanent wave will grow out in three to six months, depending upon how fast your hair grows. For best results your permanent should be shampooed and styled every week. If it is impossible for you to get a professional shampoo and style weekly and you do your own hair, then we suggest the following:
You will get better service from your permanent if you pin up your hair after each shampoo. Normally you will need one or two light hair shapings between each permanent. This will keep your hair at the proper length.
A Snap Curl Cold Wave is the best for all types of hair because there is no heat to dry your hair. The curls are one to one and one-half inches closer to scalp than many types of permanents and the final result can hardly be told from naturally curly hair. Your hair, like your skin, requires proper care and treatment if you wish it to look its glistening best. If you want your hair to look right, and be easily managed, it should receive proper hair shaping. If your hair is tinted or bleached it takes only a little extra care to keep it looking natural.
It takes 3 to 10 years of practical beauty work to become an expert hair dresser. Our average operator has between 8 and 9 years' experience. For the last 15 years we have given many, many thousands of permanents each year, so it is just natural that we would have more knowledge of permanent waving than someone who gives one or two permanents a week—Got a hair problem? Go to Ragsdale Beauty Shop.
P.S.: For the best hair results get Professional treatment as often as you can, and give yourself the best possible home care. . . . A professional permanent wave or hair style will improve your appearance and morale more than any other one thing can possibly do . . . When you do get a professional permanent wave (and you will) go to a Ragsdale Beauty Shop.

All the softened flattery and graceful lines of the latest hair fashions. You will love that "extra-something" in this fashionable hair-do. A hair style that can have a "brushed look" for casual hours or the dressed-up look for party-going. Our SNAP CURL Creme Oil Cold Wave is the secret of its success. And remember, all of our permanents are guaranteed.

ONE OF OUR LARGE MODERN SHOPS — No appointment necessary

Yes, it's true—we sell as we advertise
Always courteous and efficient operators to serve you . . . Why bother at home—take no chances—get your next wave at Ragsdale. Yes, we have over 90% repeat business—there must be a reason.
60 of St. Louis' leading hair stylists to serve you.
You get a lot of pride and pleasure, of course, out of any good permanent any time, but see how Ragsdale's permanents keep you happier longer—and right now is an especially good time to get your Ragsdale permanent.

Wool Lace for Fall

Wool lace is allied with wool jersey in some of the new fashions for fall created by St. Louis designers. The dress which has a lace overblouse and a skirt of jersey in the same shade is typical of the trend. Pleated skirts are effective in carrying out this fashionable idea.

Answers to Problems of Homemakers

By Dorothy Brainerd

APPLIANCES and food, furniture and clothing — this week's mail certainly ran the gamut of homemaking problems.

Our first question, from Mrs. J.D.R., raises a point which too often is overlooked.

"Recently I bought a new refrigerator which does not have a porcelain finish on the outside," she writes, "Can you tell me how to keep it looking nice and prevent the finish from wearing?"

And right here is where many homemakers make a mistake. They are so accustomed to taking their dish rag and wiping off the range that they unthinkingly go over the refrigerator, too. This is a big mistake, since it will eventually discolor the finish.

It is better not to wash the outside of the appliance with soap and water. Most appliance manufacturers make a special wax or cleaner for this purpose. I would suggest that you look in the classified section of the telephone book for the name of the dealer for your particular brand, and inquire if he carries such a product. If not, some of the well-known wax companies make a cleaner especially for use on appliances.

A LETTER from Mrs. A.B.C. of Bonne Terre reads: "I am new at preparing foods for my freezer and every time I make a fruit pie, bake it and freeze it, then reheat to serve, the bottom crust is soggy. Can you tell me how to prevent this?"

There are several possible causes of your difficulty which come to mind, so let's consider them and perhaps you can find the source of your trouble. First of all, have you used the same recipe for pie crust in an unfrozen pie with good results? If not, you might test it in this way; could be the recipe is at fault.

And how long do you let the pie stand between baking and freezing? It should be cooled quickly, and frozen just as soon as it is cool.

I also am wondering whether you use a solid top crust, and if so whether you provide ample vents. You might try a lattice top crust, which lets out more steam in baking.

One more question—do you permit the pie to thaw before you re-heat it? It should be removed from the freezer and put immediately into a pre-heated oven of about 325 degrees.

Hope that you find the clue somewhere in these questions.

"IF YOU KNOW of anything to take the stain off of windows from aluminum screens I wish you would put it in the paper, as I have used ammonia, vinegar and household bleach but none of them have helped," reads an unsigned card.

I am a bit baffled by this, as aluminum screens would not cause rust. However, if this is a coated screening and the stains really are rust, try some oxalic acid.

"COULD YOU please tell me how I could get rid of the streaks in my new mahogany bedroom furniture?" asks Mrs. L.E. "I have tried various brands of furniture wax and polishes, but to no avail. These streaks appear both on the top and sides of the furniture, but are worse on the sides. It looks as though I had put soap and the furniture and let it dry. I am just heartsick about this, and do hope you can suggest something that might help."

I can well imagine just how badly you must feel, Mrs. E. It won't help now, but in the future remember that it is better not to use wax and furniture polish interchangeably. Stick to one or the other.

It also is possible that you have not been applying the polishes evenly, rubbing harder in some places than in others. Whenever applying wax or polish, form a ball with the cloth and rub as evenly as possible.

Try washing the furniture, using mild soapsuds and lukewarm water, rinsing with clear lukewarm water, then using a chamois.

Work on only a small area at a time, so that moisture does not remain on the wood too long, but be sure to overlap each section. After the furniture is thoroughly dry, repolish with paste wax, applying in a thin, even coat. And best of luck.

MRS. J. T. of Lawrenceville, Ill., scorched a white orlon sweater. What to do?

If the scorch is slight, ordinary washing should remove it. If it fails to respond, dampen a white cloth with hydrogen peroxide and lay on the stain. Cover with a clean dry cloth. Press with a warm iron. The top cloth should be kept dry. It may be necessary to replace it. These directions should be followed carefully, since rust stains will result if the dampened peroxide is pressed directly.

Any homemaking problems bothering you? If so, write to Dorothy Brainerd in care of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. She will answer your questions or publish them and see if other readers have the answers for you.

Donna Reed Signed

HOLLYWOOD, June 25 — Donna Reed has been chosen by Universal-International to co-star with Steve Allen in the leading feminine role of "The Benny Goodman Story." She will play the role of the former Alice Hammond, of New York, who became Mrs. Goodman.

Black for Midsummer

The black dress which always appears for midsummer wear is beginning to be featured in the retail shops. Cotton and mixtures of silk with cotton are noted in polished effects and crepe weaves. The black silk crepe dress, rather sheer in weight, is being revived as an important type to wear throughout late summer and early fall. Full-skirted themes are plentiful although the sheath dress is a contender for popularity.

Jeweled Sweaters

Jeweled sweaters are a year-around fashion for wear over late day and evening dresses. Braid-trimmed models also are featured among the types suggested for wear with summer vacation clothes. White and pastel chalk beads are used to trim the more casual types while the colorful and glittering jewel-like accents are elaborately applied to those for more elaborate costumes.

Tony Martin in First Dramatic Role

HOLLYWOOD, June 25 — Aubrey Schenck of Bel-Air Productions has reported the signing of Tony Martin, actor-singer, for his first straight dramatic role on the screen.

Martin will appear at the top of a cast in "Frontier Scout," which will be based on a novel by Will Cook, titled "Frontier Feud," screen rights to which have just been obtained by Bel-air. Filming will begin in August for United Artists release.

In the story Martin will be an ex-captain in the United States Army who goes on a special scouting mission for the Government. The only singing he will do will be a number to be written for the production and to be heard as the main theme is screened.

Miss Yates Engaged to St. Louisan

Will Be Bride of Marvin Early Holderness Jr. July 30 in Kingsport, Tenn.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KINGSPORT, Tenn., June 25.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fain Looney of Kingsport of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Lawson Yates, to Marvin Early Holderness Jr., New York, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin E. Holderness of the St. Regis apartments, 4954 Lindell boulevard, St. Louis.

The wedding will take place July 30 at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Kingsport. The reception afterward will be held at Ridgefields Country Club.

Miss Yates, whose father is Lawson H. Yates of Nashville, Tenn., attended St. Anne's Preparatory School, Charlottesville, Va., and was graduated from the University of South Carolina where she became a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority. She made her debut in 1950 at the Assembly Ball in Columbia, S.C. At present living in New York, she is associated with the New York office of Kingsport Press, Inc., publishing company.

The bride-to-be is the granddaughter of Mrs. Alex J. Porter of Nashville and Mrs. James C. Yates of Fulton, Ky.

Mr. Holderness is an alumnus of Vanderbilt University and a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa, scholastic honorary, the Tennessee Society and the Vanderbilt Club. A lieutenant in the Army Medical Adminstrative Corps in World War II, he is now an account executive with Doremus and Co., New York.

Brother of Mrs. William Pillow Ridley Jr. (Eunice Holderness) of Columbia, Tenn., he is a grandson of the late Dr. and Mrs. A. S. Holderness of Fordyce, Ark., and of Mrs. Robert F. Jackson, Nashville, and the late Judge Jackson.

Miss Diane Carroll Jones Married To Norwood Norfleet in the East

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRING LAKE, N.J., June 25.

FIVE hundred guests from all over the country crowded into the tiny town of Spring Lake today to witness the wedding of Miss Diane Carroll Jones to Norwood Norfleet of Winston Salem, N.C., one of the largest of the season. The bride, a debutante of the season just ending, who has probably been presented to society more times than any girl in the country, is the daughter of Mrs. James Lowell Oakes Jr., of New York, Miami Beach, and Spring Lake. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. Richard McCulloch, St. Louis. Her father is Whipple Van Ness Jones of Aspen, Colo.

The ceremony, at St. Andrew's Methodist Church, was performed by the Rev. Kenneth P. Perinchief, pastor, and the Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Sockman of Christ Church, New York. Mr. Oakes escorted the bride to the altar and gave her in marriage.

It was a green and white wedding. The church exterior is painted in those shades and the Oakes summer home here is called Green Gables. In line with the color scheme the floral arrangements both at the church and at the house where the reception was held, were all green and white.

The bride wore an elaborate gown made of 68 yards of accordion pleated white tulle over taffeta and a hoop, with a tightly molded bodice and abbreviated sleeves of fine rose point lace which belonged to her grandmother, and a four-yard tulle train. Her long full veil was attached to a rose point cap. The bride carried a cascade of white butterfly orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Mary Bett McCulloch of New York, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor in a white embroidered organdy gown made over green taffeta and worn with a green taffeta cummerbund and streamers to the hemline. The eight bridesmaids were similarly dressed, except that their underskirts were white. All had green hairbraid picture hats and carried eucharis lilies. The girls were Miss

Gala Ball Given By Bachelor Club

FOR the seventeenth time the St. Louis bachelors and season's debutantes (this year there were 52 of them) enjoyed a mutual thank-you session at the St. Louis Country Club Friday night. The occasion was the annual Bachelor Club ball, given traditionally by men indebted to the debutantes and their families for the many parties the bachelors have attended. Edward Simmons Hock is club president.

The ball was planned to take place on the lantern-lighted terrace, where Russ David's orchestra played as 450 guests danced. Wide silver bracelets marked with their initials were given to the girls and at 1 o'clock a floor show called "The Daze of a Deb," was staged by the hosts.

Borrowing tunes from current hits, the bachelors wrote their own lyrics. In one, a

Miss Helen Laird Becomes Bride Of R. A. Hetlage

MISS HELEN FINNEY LAIRD, daughter of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. William Henry Laird, was married Friday night to Richard Alan Hetlage. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father at St. Peter's Episcopal Church where he is rector.

Summery blossoms, white larkspur, daisies and stock, filled the altar vases and contrasting greenery and candelabra were arranged in the chancel. Lighted tapers, shielded by hurricane globes, marked the center aisle.

The bride, given in marriage by an uncle, Richard Randolph Kennon of Powhatan county, Va., was attended by her sister, Miss Marion Murdoch Laird, maid of honor, and Miss Nancy Goodbar, Mrs. Edward E. Murphy and Miss Elizabeth Pickett Kennon of Powhatan county, a cousin, bridesmaids. Carrying bouquets of white daisies, the young women wore white embroidered organdy gowns over blue taffeta.

Miss Rubicam Is Married to Douglas R. Lilly

MISS ANN WHITLEY RUBICAM, daughter of Mrs. Charles E. Rubicam Jr., and the late Mr. Rubicam, was married Friday night to Douglas Reily Lilly. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the two families by the Rev. Dr. J. Layton Mauze Jr., in the chapel of Central Presbyterian Church. Urns of white stock provided simple decorations.

The bride was married in the gown worn by her sister, Mrs. Briggs A. Hoffmann Jr. (Sally Everett Rubicam), at her wedding a year ago. Fashioned of white organdy over chalk white taffeta, the gown features a fitted bodice with a wide, round neckline and tiny sleeves trimmed with rows of valenciennes lace ruffles. The bouffant skirt, which extended into a short train, was formed of graduated flounces edged with lace. Her veil was gathered to an organdy headpiece banded with pearl-embroidered lace. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and stephanotis.

Mrs. Hoffmann was the bride's only attendant. Her white organdy gown was embroidered in an allover pattern with red coin dots and tied with a red velvet sash. The scoop neckline was trimmed with ruching and red velvet and the extremely full skirt was ballerina length. A band of the velvet and a tiny veil formed her headpiece. She carried a bouquet of red carnations.

Mr. Lilly, son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Lilly, 360 West Point court, University City, his brother, John K. Lilly of Chicago, as best man. Two cousins of the bride, C.D.P. Hamilton III and Everett Hamilton showed guests to their seats.

The reception was given on the thirteenth floor of the University Club where again white summer flowers created a background. Here for the wedding from their home in Royal Oak, Mich., were the bride's maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard D. Whitley.

Mr. Lilly and his bride will go to Nassau on their wedding trip. They will return here to live in an apartment in Clayton.

Miss Brown Engaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace H. Brown of Powell, Tenn., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Emma Elizabeth Brown, to Richard Charles Thom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Thom, 1929 Forest avenue. The bride-to-be, a former student of Maryville (Tenn.) College, is now employed in Knoxville, Tenn. Mr. Thom was graduated from Maryville College and has recently completed service with the Army.

Wendy Thorsen, R. C. Gifford Are Married

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NANTUCKET, Mass., June 25. A GROUP of resorters who summer on this island off the Atlantic coast attended the wedding today of Miss Wendy Evans Thorsen and Richard Cammann Gifford of New York, whose families both have houses here. Included in the guest list were several St. Louisans.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Evans Dame of Boston, the former Miss Mary Louise Evans of St. Louis, and Wallace Thorsen of Norwalk, Conn. She is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gwynne Evans, St. Louis, who gave the reception at their attractive summer home, Duneover, on the shore. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Conyngham Gifford, New York.

Mr. Evans gave his granddaughter in marriage at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Nantucket Village, where the ceremony was performed at 4:30 o'clock by the Rev. Bradford Johnson. Miss Ruth Ryland Sizer of New York was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Sue Sabine, Miss Judy Babcock, Miss Deborah Carlson and Miss Judy Hart all of Boston; Mrs. Rayne Herzog Jr., Greenwich, Conn., the former Miss Eugenie Hess, St. Louis, cousin of the bride; Mrs. Gwynne Thorsen, Glastonbury, Conn., her sister-in-law; Mrs. Charles C. Gifford Jr., Greenwich, Conn., and Mrs. Garret A. Gifford, Darein, Conn., sisters-in-law of the bridegroom.

The young women wore white organdy ballerina dresses embroidered in a pink diamond pattern, trimmed in back with a large pink satin bow. The maid of honor carried white carnations and stephanotis; the bridesmaids held pink roses and ivy.

The pink note was repeated in the bride's gown in which

Miss Engel Fiancee Of David H. Wichman

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made by Mr. and Mrs. Werner E. Engel of Jonesburg, Mo., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Suzanne Elise Engel, to David H. Wichman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Wichman, 426 South Gore avenue, Webster Groves.

Miss Engel, an alumna of William Woods College, Fulton, Mo., where she became a member of Phi Theta Kappa scholastic honorary, recently received her bachelor of science degree from Washington University School of Nursing. The bride-to-be is now on the psychiatric staff of McMillan Hospital. She and her fiance are planning a September wedding.

Mr. Wichman was graduated from Westminster College, Fulton, where his fraternity was Phi Gamma Delta, and has recently returned from a tour of duty with the Army in Europe. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Joseph Wichman, 605 South Elm avenue, Webster Groves.

Sandra Gooding, Thomas C. Kelly To Be Married

MR. AND MRS. RUSSELL H. GOODING of Spoede road, Creve Coeur, will give a garden cocktail supper tonight in honor of their daughter, Miss Sandra Marjorie Gooding, and her fiance, Thomas Colford Kelly. News of the engagement has been told informally by the couple.

Here for the event will be the prospective bridegroom and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Joseph Kelly of Green Bay, Wis.; John M. Mudge, Lake Forest, Ill.; James Bartlett, Baltimore; Bernard T. Rogers, Chicago, and Robert Patterson and Vance Van Laanen, Green Bay.

The color scheme for the party, as for all Miss Gooding's parties, will be yellow and white. Daisies in the two colors will provide decoration; a yellow canopy will cover part of the garden and some of the supper tables will be placed under yellow umbrellas.

Miss Gooding and Mr. Kelly, who will be married in September, will live in Green Bay. A graduate of Mary Institute, she attended Mills College and Washington University. She was presented to society in September, 1953, at a dinner dance at Algonquin Golf Club. She is the sister of Miss Chadyeane Marie Gooding and of Warren Michael Gooding and the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Lee Gooding and of the late Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Hagerling.

Mr. Kelly, brother of Paul and Leslie J. Kelly Jr. of Green Bay and of Robert Kelly of Minneapolis, was graduated from Lake Forest (Ill.) Academy and attended St. Norbert College, De Pere, Wis.

Valentia Wagner Is Engaged to Robert A. Webb

ANNOUNCEMENT was made last night by Mr. and Mrs. Melchior August Wagner of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Valentia Ann Wagner, to Robert Archer Webb. The news was told at a garden cocktail supper at the Wagner home, 9 Ladue lane. Guests were invited ostensibly to see the Wagners' other daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. John Franklin Kinnaman II, who are here from their home in Columbus, Ind.

Miss Wagner, who is planning an Aug. 20 wedding, was graduated from John Burroughs School and received her degree in January, 1955, from Washington University where she became a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. She is now teaching pre-kindergarten in two Ladue schools, Ladue and Conway. In the autumn she will teach kindergarten at Conway.

The bride-elect was presented to society in June 1952 at two parties, an afternoon reception and a cocktail supper dance later, both at home.

Sister of Melchior A. Wagner Jr., the prospective bride is a granddaughter of Mrs. Harry Arthur Woerman and the late Mr. Woerman and of the late Mr. and Mrs. August Wagner.

Mr. Webb, who lives here at 809 Westwood drive, Clayton, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Archer W. Webb who recently moved to Toms River, N.J., from Plainfield, N.J. He is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Latzer, 625 South Skinker boulevard.

The prospective bridegroom was graduated from Brown University where he became a member of Alpha Delta Phi fraternity and of the Sphinx Club. Having served in the Navy in World War II, he was recalled for service in the Korean theater and in 1952 was discharged with the rank of lieutenant, U.S.N.R. Mr. Webb is a member of the St. Louis Bachelor Club.

Garden Club Meeting.

The second meeting of the newly organized Rock Hill Garden Club will take place at 8 o'clock Wednesday night at the home of Mrs. William Kovacik, 9500 Plainfield drive.

Ann Grant Married to Frank Davidoff In Afternoon Ceremony at Home

THE marriage of Miss Ann Grant to Frank Davidoff of New Canaan, Conn., took place late Friday afternoon at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Grant, 430 Dielman road, Olivette. The bridegroom's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Leo Davidoff of New Canaan and 1008 Fifth avenue, New York, were here for the ceremony.

The Rev. Dr. John F. Caskey, retired pastor of University Methodist Church, officiated at the service. Attendants were Miss Mary Libbe Davidoff, sister of the bridegroom, maid of honor, and Donald Hoelzel-Wallach, Cambridge, Mass., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, best man.

The former Miss Grant wore for her wedding a ballerina length white silk organdy gown with lace inserts, trimmed in back with a large organdy bow. Her tulle veil was gathered to a crown of orange blossoms and she held a colonial bouquet of white carnations. Miss Davidoff was in pale pink shadow batiste and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of deeper pink carnations.

Only members of the immediate families attended the ceremony and the dinner afterward at tht Grant home. Among the out-of-town guests was Mrs. Hoelzel-Wallach.

Mr. and Mrs. Davidoff will tour the Gaspe Peninsula in Canada on their wedding trip. They will live in Fort Lee, N.J., while the bridegroom, a graduate of Harvard College, attends Columbia University School of Medicine. His bride, who has attended Radcliffe College for the past three years, will complete her studies in New York.

The bride's father is interpretive news editor of the Post-Dispatch. Dr. Davidoff is head of the neurosurgical service at Mount Sinai Hospital in New York and a member of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine.

Garden Dinner Dance.

Four St. Joseph Academy students, Miss Barbara Moore, Miss Mary Jane Karst, Miss Jean Lavine and Miss Joanne Cento, were hostesses Friday night at a garden dinner dance given at the home of Miss Moore's parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Moore, 6 Clayton terrace, St. Louis county.

Jefferson City Wedding for Julia Dalton

THE marriage of Miss Julia Hall Dalton, daughter of Missouri's Attorney General and Mrs. John Montgomery Dalton, to Dr. John Walton Hyland took place last night at the Presbyterian Church in Jefferson City. The Rev. Robert Morrison Young performed the candlelight ceremony in a setting of white summer blossoms and fern.

The bride wore an ivory peau de soie gown fashioned with an off-shoulder neckline, short sleeves and a fitted bodice from which the skirt flared widely. Motifs of alencon lace, flecked with pearls, were appliqued below the neckline and over the front of the skirt. A smocked juliet cap held her tulle veil and she carried a small bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Her attendants were Miss Janet Gallo, Herkimer, N.Y., a former classmate at Smith College, and Miss Rose Scicchitano, Ashland, Pa., who attended Penn Hall, Chambersburg, Pa., with her. They were in green crystallette gowns with waltz - length bouffant skirts and carried nosegays of pink aristocrat roses. The flower girl, dressed similarly, was Helen Walton Andrae, cousin of the bridegroom.

Dr. Hyland, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hyland, Fayetteville, Ark., had James E. Stice of Fayetteville as best man. Ushers were John Hall Dalton, Kennett, brother of the bride; Henry Andrae and Allen Fischer, Jefferson City; William Dalton Bradford, Rochester, N.Y., cousin of the bride; Alfred Hathcock, Fayetteville, and Dr. William H. Danforth, Dr. Samuel Goldfine, Dr. William S. Costen and Dr. Sidney Salstein, St. Louis.

The reception was given at the Dalton home in Jefferson City. Dr. Hyland and his bride departed for a wedding trip to Colorado. He will report for active duty with the Navy Aug. 1, having served his internship at Barnes Hospital.

Mary Helen Trout Becomes Bride

OUR LADY OF LOURDES CHURCH was the setting yesterday morning for the marriage of Miss Mary Helen Trout, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hayden Trout, 7018 Lindell boulevard, University City, to William Albert Meyer. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. I. William Meyer, 3656 Utah place.

A gown of peau de soie paneled with chantilly lace was worn by the bride, whose veil was held in place by a Juliet cap marked with pearls. On her prayer book she held orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Richard Roberts was matron of honor; bridesmaids were the bride's sisters, Miss Virginia Sue and Miss Lily Anne Trout, twins, and Miss Elizabeth Platte of St. Charles. The young women were dressed in silk embroidered white organdy worn over yellow slips. They carried white daisies, except for Mrs. Roberts who had yellow daisies.

Best man was Edward O'Connell Buddy of Oklahoma City. Dr. Michael F. Pernoud, Thomas A. Hennigan, Alan Parker, James Lambert and Louis Charles Trout, brothers of the bride; Herbert Sach and Roman Lewis Ballwig were ushers.

After a reception at the Missouri Athletic Club, Mr. and Mrs. Meyer departed on a wedding trip to Fort Lauderdale, Fla. The bride attended Maryville College after her graduation from the Academy of the Sacred Heart in St. Charles. Her husband, a former student of St. Mary's University in San Antonio, Tex., is a Washington University graduate.

Margery Burger, Peter S. Winter Are Married

A BRIDE of June 18 is Miss Margery Sewell Burger who was married to Peter Sutton Winter at Emmanuel Episcopal Church in Webster Groves. The evening ceremony was performed by the Rev. Alfred B. Seccombe, rector, assisted by the Rev. Robert Franz Burger of Medford, Ore., brother of the bride. Afterward a reception was given in the Parish Hall by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Eagleton Burger, 404 Yorkshire place, Webster Groves.

Mrs. Russell Thomas Simmons was her sister's matron of honor, and bridesmaids were Miss Marian Rosebrough, Miss Joan Teichmann, Miss Marilyn Montgomery, Miss Camilla Wright of Winnetka, Ill., and the bride's younger sister, Miss Carol Franz Burger. They were dressed in blue Swiss eyelet embroidery, ballerina length, and carried white shower bouquets.

White satin and chantilly lace were combined for the bride's gown which featured a portrait neckline accented with tiny seed pearls. Her veil was attached to a pearl-trimmed bonnet and she carried a cluster of white spray orchids and stephanotis on her prayerbook.

The bridegroom, son of Mrs. Robert J. Sheets, 1450 Andrew drive, Warson Woods, had Donald Williams of Cambridge, O., as best man. Ushers were Donald Hart, Loyal Bemiller, both of Mansfield, O., Harry Schnabel of Dayton; Russell Thomas Simmons, and the bride's brothers, Charles Sherman Burger and John Frederick Burger.

Mr. and Mrs. Winter have gone to New Orleans and St. Petersburg, Fla., on their wedding trip.

Sally Lee Weber Becomes Bride

THE marriage of Miss Sally Lee Weber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney A. Weber, to William Douglas Wurdack took place last night at University Methodist Church. The bride's grandfather, the Rev. Dr. John F. Caskey, retired minister of the church, performed the ceremony. Vases of white stock were arranged against a background of woodwardia fern and lighted tapers in hurricane globes marked the center aisle.

The bride wore an embroidered organdy gown, the fitted bodice featuring a square neckline and tiny cap sleeves and the full skirt composed of tiers. A wreath of orange blossoms in her hair secured her veil and blue delphinium and stephanotis were combined in her bouquet.

Miss Barbee Lease of Seattle was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were three cousins, Miss Sue Sullivan, Mrs. John Tuttle, Tulsa, Okla., and Mrs. Barrett H. Weber (Elise Broun), and Miss Chadyeane Gooding, Miss Betty Stone, Miss Constance Hinman, Binghampton, N.Y., and Miss Ann Pearce of New York. Their blue polished cotton gowns were embroidered in white vertical stripes. Below the short-sleeved molded bodices, the skirts flared full over many petticoats. They carried daisies and wore more of the blossoms as wreaths in their hair.

Mr. Wurdack, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wurdack, 15 Cedar Crest, Ladue, had Robert Probst as best man. Ushers were a cousin, Hugo Harper; James Dearing, Joseph Frein, Galen Cook, Richard G. Irwin, Edward Spencer, Chicago, and Kenneth Chambers, Dallas, Tex.

The reception was given at the Weber home on Ballas road, St. Louis county. Mrs. Weber chose for her daughter's wedding a pale yellow lace gown with which she wore a tiny hat of green satin leaves. Mrs. Wurdack was in ashes of roses lace with matching accessories. Both wore orchid corsages.

Here for the wedding were Miss Mary Walker Tison, Stamford, Conn., and Miss Giovanna Mancusi-Ungaro, Newark, N.J., cousins of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Roland Record, Kansas City, Mo., and Mr. Tuttle.

Mr. Wurdack and his bride will fly Thursday from New York to Athens, Greece. They will be met there by a car in which they will tour the continent, returning to St. Louis the middle of September. They will live in a house on the grounds of the Weber home.

Late June Parties For Debutante Set

DEER CREEK CLUB will be the scene this evening of a buffet supper in honor of Miss Judy Butler, debutante daughter of Mrs. Ferguson Butler, 3 Upper Ladue road, and Henry Jocelyn Butler. The party is to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Philip Platt Smith.

Twenty debutantes and their escorts will be entertained today at a luncheon given for Miss Marion Bischoff by Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Franklin Trigg at their home, 7227 Greenway drive, University Hills. Luncheon is to be served on the patio from a long buffet table adorned with summer flowers. Guests are invited to swim in the Triggs' new pool.

Miss Bischoff and Miss Lillian Sheldon shared honors last night at a cocktail supper given at the Bogey Club by Mrs. Elizabeth Jamison Folk, and her father, Paul B. Jamison. Red and white flowers decorated the buffet table in the dining room and centered smaller tables on the porch.

Here for the party were Miss Bischoff's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Ketcham of Coronado, Calif., and their daughter, Miss Margot Ketcham. Miss Bischoff's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Bischoff. Miss Sheldon is the daughter of the Frank Rice Sheldons.

Wedding in June For Miss Bridge, Jack M. Hobusch

AMONG the late June weddings was that Friday night of Miss Susan Bridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence D. Bridge Jr., 1115 Woodgate drive, Kirkwood, and Jack Marco Hobusch. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Donald J. MacNair at Bible Presbyterian Church in a setting created with white majestic daisies and gladiolas, greenery and candlelight.

The former Miss Bridge wore a gown with a chantilly lace bodice, trimmed with a tulle ruffle embroidered in sequins and pearls, and a tiered tulle skirt over satin. A scalloped headpiece held her tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of stephanotis, white roses and orchids.

Miss Georgia Lee Hertel served as maid of honor and Miss Helen Bride, Dallas, Tex., an aunt, and two cousins, Miss Kathleen Beatty, Tulsa, Okla., and Miss Doris Lu Spradling, were bridesmaids. Their gowns, in pale shades of blue, yellow, pink and green, respectively, were fashioned of net over taffeta. The wide necklines were outlined with shirring and the bouffant skirts were worn over crinoline and hoops. They carried colonial bouquets of majestic daisies and wore matching blossoms in their hair.

Mr. Hobusch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alford Montgomery Hobusch, 518 West Woodbine avenue, Kirkwood, had Kenneth Mauk as best man. Ushers were Floyd Semp, George Langhans and Harold Arnold.

The reception was given at the church recreation room. Mr. Hobusch and his bride will spend their honeymoon at St. Augustine, Fla. They will live in Kirkwood.

Miss Rosengreen Married in Church

GRACE METHODIST CHURCH was the scene last evening of the marriage of Miss Sharon Lynne Rosengreen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. James Rosengreen, 2842 Clearview drive, Bel-Nor, to James Brice McClenahan. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Wesley H. Hager in a setting of white summer flowers and palms.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Dennis Duewel of Alexandria, Va.; bridesmaids included the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Richard E. Skochdopole, Midland, Mich.; Miss Nancy Hunger, Scarsdale, N.Y., and Mrs. Richard L. O'Connor, Western Springs, Ill. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar A. McClenahan of Davenport, Ia., had Charles Martin, also of Davenport, as best man. Serving as ushers were Gary Rosengreen, brother of the bride; Mr. Skochdopole, Thomas Wright, Western Springs, Lewis Thomas, Philadelphia, and Robert Newell, Fullerton, Calif.

Shantung taffeta fashioned the bride's gown. Seed pearl embroidery and sequins outlined the scalloped neckline and sleeves, and unpressed pleats at back and front lent fullness to the gathered skirt. The bride, who carried a colonial bouquet of white daisies accented with blue ribbon, wore a veil secured by a pearl and sequin coronet. Her attendants were dressed in periwinkle blue crystallette with small white sequined crowns in their hair. They held nosegays of white daisies.

Mr. and Mrs. Rosengreen gave a reception in Fellowship Hall of the church. The bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Anton Rosengreen of Boone, Ia., and the bridegroom's grandmother, Mrs. Brice Johnson of Fontana, Calif., were present for the event.

After a honeymoon in Saugatauck, Mich., the newly-married couple will return to St. Louis where Mr. McClenahan will continue his studies at Washington University Medical school. Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of DePauw University, where she was affiliated with Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority and he with Delta Tau Delta fraternity. Mr. McClenahan is also a member of Nu Sigma Nu medical fraternity.

Attending Convention.

St. Louisans attending the Altrua International convention July 3 through 7 in Toronto, Ont., will be Miss Gretchen Vanderschmidt, international president, and Miss Mary Lichliter, Miss Helen Manley, Miss Alma Jolley, Miss Irene Dulin, Miss Mary Jane Sullivan and Miss Viola Gaensslen. Miss Vanderschmidt departed yesterday and will officiate at the annual board meeting which will be held Wednesday through July 2.

silk organdy and imported chantilly lace were combined over blush pink taffeta. The fitted bodice was made with short sleeves, and lace and seed pearls banding the off-shoulder neckline. The full skirt worn over hoops, ended in a train. The bridal bouquet was eucharis lilies and stephanotis.

Charles C. Gifford Jr. was his brother's best man. The long list of ushers included Garret A. Gifford, David S. Ellis, Chicago; Hugh Young, Baltimore; Vincent C. Banker, Greenwich; Ralph L. Tompkins Jr., New York; Richard Polich, Rochester, N. Y.; Robert H. Baldwin, Boston; Tighlman B. Evans, Greenville, Del.; Gwynne Thorsen, Glastonbury; W. Laird Stabler Jr., Montchanin, Del.; Tucker H. Warner, Farmington, Conn., and Samuel McClay Yonce, Lake Forest, Ill.

Mrs. Dame wore lime green taffeta with a matching hat and matching orchids; the bridegroom's mother was in gray chiffon with a yellow hat and yellow orchids.

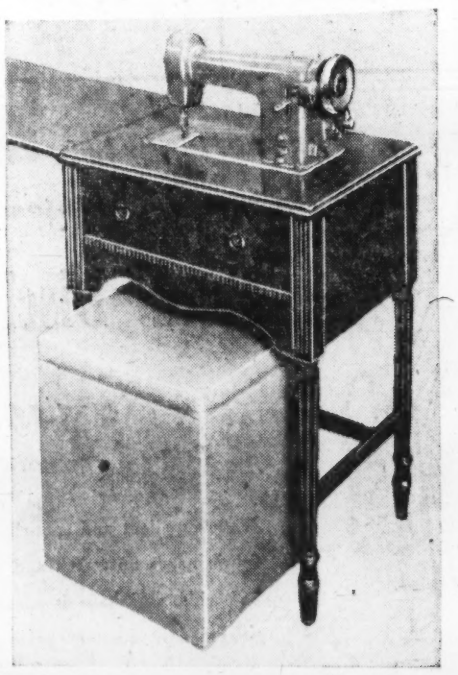

Mr. Gifford and his bride will spend their honeymoon in Nassau and will live in New York.

Miss Koch Bride Of L. S. Swallow

THE wedding of Miss Verna Jeanne Koch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor E. Koch, 7310 Forsyth boulevard, University City, to Louis John Swallow took place last night at St. Mark's Episcopal Church, which was lighted by candles on the altar and in the aisle and was decorated with white chrysanthemums and gladioluses. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William Murray Kenney.

Mr. Koch gave his daughter in marriage. She wore white silk organza appliqued with alencon lace, sprinkled with sequins and pearls, around the crescent neckline and down the skirt which flared over hoops to a circular train. An alencon lace half-hat secured her fingertip veil. She carried white orchids on a Bible which had been in the bridegroom's family for generations and was carried by both of his sisters-in-law.

The bride's sister, Miss Virginia Louise Koch, was maid of honor and Miss Kathryn Sears Jones and Miss Harriet Ashbrook Proetz, Gamma Phi Beta sisters of the bride; Miss Sylvia Temperli Ober and Miss Marjorie Lillian Lotz were bridesmaids.

George Robert Swallow was best man for his brother. They are sons of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Swallow, 4715 Clifton avenue. Ushers were three fellow members of Theta Xi, Robert Arthur Feger, Carl Edward Pfeifer Jr. and Dale Meyer, and Edwin Louis Swallow, another brother of the bridegroom.

The bride's attendants wore princess dresses of blue peau de soie lined in organdy and worn over hoops, and velvet juliet caps to match. They carried cascade bouquets of orchids.

Mrs. Koch's dress was French blue silk with which she wore a latticed velvet hat and orchids fastened to her purse. Mrs. Swallow wore frost blue with a matching half-hat and orchids.

Mr. Swallow and his bride will motor north and spend part of their honeymoon on Mackinac Island, Mich., before continuing to Quebec. They will live here.

Country Club Wedding For Barbara Spitzer, David B. Rosenberg

A BRIDE of last Sunday was Miss Barbara Jane Spitzer, whose marriage to David Berl Rosenberg took place at Westwood Country Club. Rabbi Abraham E. Halpern performed the ceremony by candlelight beneath a canopy of pink flowers and greenery.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Spitzer, 7529 Wellington Way, Clayton, the bride had her sister, Mrs. Gene S. Friedman, Austin, Tex., as matron of honor and Mrs. Harry Swartout, Albany, N.Y.; Mrs. Bruce Sands, Hyattsville, Md., and Miss Lynn Oxenhandler as bridesmaids. Their pink and white organdy gowns were tied with pink sashes and they carried baskets of woven pink carnations.

The bride wore a tucked white Swiss organdy gown appliqued at the neckline with embroidered medallions. More of the embroidery adorned the full skirt. A crown of organdy held her veil; her flowers, an orchid and lilies of the valley, were arranged on a Bible.

Mr. Rosenberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Rosenberg of Vineland, N.Y., had his father and Philip Greenberg of Brooklyn as best men. Lt. Friedman, Mr. Swartout, Ronald B. Miller, Los Angeles; Barry Joseph, Vineland; William Stuart, Washington, Pa., and Sanford Weiss were ushers.

After a reception on the terrace of the country club, the bride and bridegroom departed for Bermuda to spend their honeymoon. They will live in New York.

Visitors to Mexico.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar C. Crider, 7034 Lena avenue, were recent guests at the Hotel Monte Cassino in Mexico City. Before returning, they visited Acapulco and Taxco.

Miss Dennis Bride Of Richard C. Beitel

THE wedding of Miss June Dennis, only daughter of Mrs. Lester John Dennis, 522 Dougherty Ferry road, Kirkwood, to Lt. Richard Charles Beitel, stationed at Shaw Air Force Base, Sumter, S.C., will take place at 5 o'clock this afternoon at Concordia Lutheran Church, Kirkwood. The Rev. Walter F. Fisher will officiate.

The bride, whose father is not living, received her bachelor's degree from the University of Missouri, where she served as secretary and social chairman for her sorority, Alpha Chi Omega. Since graduation, she has taught at Concordia Lutheran School in Kirkwood and Bethany Lutheran School in Chicago.

Lt. Beitel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Beitel, 216 Park avenue, Kirkwood, attended Washington University.

Miss Erwin Is Bride Of Ens. T. F. Maher In Spokane, Wash.

MISS CHARLENE ERWIN and Navy Ens. Thomas Francis Maher were married Saturday morning, June 11, at at St. Aloysius Church in Spokane, Wash., with the Rev. Francis Gubbins, S.J., officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Paine Erwin of Spokane; the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Philip V. Maher, 410 California avenue, Webster Groves.

The former Miss Erwin was gowned in candlelight faille taffeta, the V neckline bordered in re-embroidered alencon lace. Her tulle veil was attached to a lace Juliet cap; she carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

The bride's two sisters, Mrs. Jay W. Giesa and Miss Patricia Erwin, were matron and maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Dorothy Maher, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Beatrice Huber of Louisville, Ky., Miss Ann McGovern of Hayden Lake, Idaho, and Mrs. Bruce Russell of Spokane. Barbara Carlton Nevers of Seattle, Wash., was flower girl.

Philip V. Maher Jr. was his brother's best man. Ushers included Daniel Becker of St. Louis, Richard Vinyard of Hollywood, Calif., Michael Lawler of Corona Del Mar, Calif., Mr. Giesa, Mr. Russell and James Crockett, all of Spokane. Charles Erwin, the bride's brother was junior usher.

A reception was given in the Spokane Hotel ballroom after the marriage service. Ens. and Mrs. Maher will live in Bremerton, Wash., where he has been newly assigned.

Luncheon at St. Albans.

Mrs. James Mandeville Nelson, 6987 Cornell avenue, University City, and Mrs. Robert Moman of Chesterfield, Mo., were co-hostesses recently at a luncheon and miscellaneous shower given at Old Barn Inn, St. Albans, Mo. The party was in honor of Miss Mary Catherine Geissal and Mrs. James Wesley Geissal, who until her marriage June 15 was Miss Sandra Linn. Present at the luncheon was Mrs. Richard Lee Geissal of Butler, Mo.

Bachelor Club Ball For Debutante Set

parody on "We Open in Venice," from "Kiss Me Kate," they insisted "another party, another ball, this year will be the best of all." Conversation Piece from "Wonderful Town," concerned four types of bachelors—freshmen, old timers, talkers and those who go home when the bar closes. In a father and daughter skit the father was sent to the poorhouse by a selfish daughter who wanted white ties and tails, and a ball to end all balls. The daughter, part not played by a debutante, sang "You've Got to Get the Best for Me."

In a chorus finale the bachelors saluted the debutantes by singing "entertaining heavy drinkers, making nice guys out of stinkers, seems to be your cup of tea."

In response a 13-girl cast divided into groups for three brief numbers. They sang a take-off on special boys. Six of them, Miss Marian Green, Miss Lillian Sheldon, Miss Betty Niedringhaus, Miss Judy Johansen, Miss Shelley Bush and Miss Caroline Meyer, dressed in Bermuda shorts, danced. In the finale, they were joined by Miss Barbara Whittemore, Miss Elizabeth Oehler, Miss Mary John Wilson, Miss Sally Woolwine, Miss Elizabeth Ann McDonald, Miss Ann Grant Smith and Miss Claire Pieper, in a song of appreciation to the bachelors to the music of 'I Get a Kick Out of You."

The party ended with an early breakfast.

Before the ball Miss Sheldon was guest of honor at a dinner given at the club by her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bixby.

Diane Jones Married To Norwood Norfleet

Mr. Norfleet, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Norfleet, Winston Salem, had his father as best man. Ushers were James K. Norfleet III, Claude B. Strickland Jr., R. Phillip Hanes, L. Hartsell Cash, Paul N. Montague Jr., Zachary T. Smith, all of Winston Salem; Richard McCulloch Jones, Alexandria, Va.; John D. F. Oakes, Miami Beach; Eugene L. Oakes, Port Chester, N.Y.; Robert H. Spilman, Brendon P. Kelly, Howard M. Marton, James H. McEwen Jr. and James B. Boyce III, New York, and Robert Paxton McCulloch Jr., Los Angeles.

After the reception-dance, Mr. Norfleet and his bride departed for Bermuda to spend their honeymoon. They will live in New York where he is associated with an investment banking firm.

A graduate of Westover School, Middlebury, Conn., and Briarcliff Junior College, the bride is a provisional member of the New York Junior League. She made her debut in St. Louis last June at a dance given by Mrs. McCulloch at the St. Louis Country Club, and at several balls both in New York and Miami Beach.

Miss Laird Married In Church Ceremony

The snug bodices featured wide round necklines and short sleeves; the full gathered skirts were floor length.

A white Swiss embroidered organdy gown over taffeta was worn by the bride. The fitted bodice, with a square neckline and short sleeves, was trimmed with scalloped embroidery and wide panels of the embroidery were inserted at back and front of the skirt which was worn over hoops. A scalloped cap held her full tulle veil. She carried a shower of lilies of the valley.

Lt. Robert Owen Hetlage of Fort Benning, Ga., was his brother's best man. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. George Charles Hetlage, 474 Edgewood drive, Clayton. Ushers were William A. Sippy, John R. Barsanti Jr., Mr. Murphy, Benjamin F. Bush Jr., Thomas E. Killeen III and William Henry Laird IV, the bride's brother.

The reception was given at the Laird home, 1 Woodcliffe road, Ladue, which was decorated with summer flowers. Mrs. Laird greeted her guests wearing an aqua blue organza gown trimmed with lace and pearls. With it she wore a small satin leaf hat in the same shade to which a tiny eye veil was attached. The bridegroom's mother was in cocoa lace underlaid with white net.

Out-of-town guests for the wedding included the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Randolph Kennon; Mrs. Richard R. # 2 PLEAS TO GIVE SURPLUS FOOD TO HUNGRY PEOPLE

Unemployed Coal Miners Would Like Flour—Cities Want Food Stamp Plan Revived.

The Chicago Daily News Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch. Copyright, 1955.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—In these prosperous United States today:

The Government stores food to keep prices up—some people don't get enough to eat.

Representative Martha W. Griffiths (Dem.), Michigan, estimates 16,000,000 Americans need more food than they get. Representative Leonor K. Sullivan (Dem.), Missouri, thinks there's no need for hunger in the United States.

Two congressional appeals highlight hungry people in the midst of plenty.

One appeal is to add flour to surplus foods the Department of Agriculture gives welfare agencies.

This comes from coal counties where many miners haven't worked in a long time.

Tired of Cheese and Beans.

"People are getting mighty tired of cheese and beans," said a West Virginia Representative. "The women would like to bake some bread. Seems a shame for Uncle Sam to hold on to all that wheat with people so hungry for bread."

The other appeal is to revive the food stamp plan of the 1930s.

This comes from big cities where welfare wards and pensioners find their few dollars inadequate.

The Agriculture Department opposes both ideas. Assistant Secretary Earl L. Butz told the House Agriculture Committee they would load welfare costs on the farm support program.

He said giving away flour would not increase flour consumption.

States Could Start Stamp Plan.

Butz said the present system of distributing surplus perishable foods is all right and any state could start its own stamp plan if it wanted to.

The Agricultural Department already distributes surplus food that is perishable.

It expects to give away 106,000,000 pounds of butter this year, 85,000,000 pounds of cheese, 80,000,000 pounds of dry milk, 70,000,000 pounds of shortening and 19,000,000 pounds of rice.

These foods will reach 11,000,000 children through the school lunch program, 1,000,000 inmates of institutions and 2,000,000 others through welfare.

In addition, the department favors giving free food to persons in prisons and jails.

Detroit Situation.

Detroit Welfare Superintendent Daniel J. Ryan says this isn't good enough. Detroit is the first—and so far only—big city to go along with the federay system of surplus food distribution.

Ryan distributes free food in Detroit from 134 depots, at which selected beneficiaries line up for packaged handouts on specified days.

This is expensive and cumbersome.

Ryan says it would make better sense to issue food stamps good at the groceries, which Uncle Sam would redeem by sending food to grocery warehouses.

In five months Detroit welfare workers have found 51,593 persons who need more food than they are getting.

go along with the federal sys-

They include mothers receiving aid for dependent children, old folks living on old age assistance, families on general relief and persons receiving social security and other retirement allowances.

They are people whose incomes just don't buy them enough to eat, Ryan said.

EVANGELICAL CHILDREN'S HOME PICNIC TO BE TODAY

The annual picnic of the Evangelical Children's Home, 8240 St. Charles Rock road, will be held today from 2 p.m. to 10 p.m.

The day's program will include a service of worship, a hot dinner beginning at 4:30 p.m., a concert by the St. Louis Letter Carriers' Band at 5:30 p.m., and a square dance exhibition at 8 p.m. Booths for children's amusements will open at 2 p.m.

The picnic is the seventy-ninth annual affair given by the home. It was founded in 1858 as the "German Protestant Orphans' Home."

GOLDEN WEDDING MASS

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert A. Hoeflinger, 3979 Gratiot street, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary today with a special mass at St. Bernard's Catholic Church, Hawk avenue and Gratiot.

From 1933 to 1951 Hoeflinger served as alderman from the Seventeenth ward. Now retired, he had served 49 years with the Standard Clothing and Tailoring Co. The pair, both 72 years old, have nine children and 18 grandchildren.

MARKING GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Bielfeldt will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary today with an open house at their home, 5015 South Grand boulevard. Their children journeyed here for the celebration. They are Mrs. Theadore Bielfeldt, of New York, N. Y.

Bielfelt, 75 years old, is a retired railroad worker. His wife is 70. In addition to a daughter and two sons, they have seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

PILOTS IN 'POWDER PUFF DERBY' WILL STOP IN ST. LOUIS

St. Louis will be one of the official stopping points in the ninth annual "Powder Puff Derby" next week and a St. Louisan will be one of the approximately 50 women pilots entered in the transcontinental air race.

The women flyers will start descending on Weiss Airport, south of Kirkwood in St. Louis county, some time next Sunday. The 2800-mile race begins Saturday at Long Beach, Calif., and will end July 6 at Springfield, Mass.

Mrs. Mildred Clark, 4 Champlain court, Florissant, will fly her light plane in the race. Mrs. Clark was partner in the recent Washington-Havana women's air race with Mrs. Loretta Slavick of Kirkwood, who is not an entrant in the cross-country race.

TOY FOX TERRIER SHOW SCHEDULED FOR TODAY

The first United Kennel Club licensed toy fox terrier show of the Missouri Toy Fox Terrier Association will be held at 1 p.m. today at the American Legion Post 143 hall, 7800 Olive boulevard, University City. Entries will be accepted from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Championship points and trophies will be awarded winners in the various classes. The judge for the show will be Charles L. Dosher, McLeansboro, Ill.

A.A.'S CONVENTION OPENS HERE FRIDAY

'Recovery, Unity, Service' Theme of Program for Combatting Drunkenness.

Current medical, industrial and institutional approaches to alcoholism will be discussed in programs of the twentieth anniversary convention of Alcoholics Anonymous, to be held at Kiel Auditorium from Friday through next Sunday.

The theme of the convention will be, "Recovery, unity, service." Discussions on the theme will be led by a New York City man, who is surviving co-founder of the group for recovered alcoholics.

Convention speakers include Henry A. Mielcarek, personnel department, Allis-Chalmers, Milwaukee; Dr. Harry M. Tiebout, Greenwich, Conn., vice chairman of the Connecticut Commission on Alcoholism, and Dr. O. Arnold Kilpatrick, director, Hudson River State Hospital, Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

In addition to the programs for the entire membership, approximately a dozen workshop groups will meet simultaneously to review the society's growth and present status.

Holds Same Job 74 Years.

LA SPEZIA, Italy, June 25 (AP) — Celestino Orlandi, 92 years old, claims a world record in postal service. He served 74 years as postmaster in nearby Padivarma until his recent retirement.

SHRINE CIRCUS OPENS WEDNESDAY EVENING

Will Continue Through July 4—Parade to Be Held Tomorrow Night.

The annual Moolah Temple Shrine Circus will open Wednesday evening at Public Schools Stadium. Nightly performances will begin at 8:15 p.m. through July 4.

Circus week will open tomorrow with a parade through the downtown area, starting at Thirteenth street and Washington avenue at 8:30 p.m. About 2000 marchers will participate, with floats and giant balloons.

The circus will have 65 acts and 200 performers, who will move from ring to ring in the stadium to give all sections of the audience close-up views. Fireworks displays will be staged each night.

Animal acts will include trained pigs as well as the familiar troupes of lions, tigers, elephants, bears and dogs. A chimpanzee billed as "Cheeta" of the Tarzan movies will be featured in a monkey show.

Aerialists will change poles in mid-air and ride unicycles across high wires 90 feet above the ground, and, as a climax, the Zacchini sisters will be shot out of a repeating cannon.

Proceeds of the circus go to the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children and to 24 other children's welfare agencies. General admission tickets for adults cost $1.50, and for children, 75 cents. They are on sale at the Arcade Building and at Moolah Temple, 3821 Lindell boulevard.

FATHER KENNY'S 55TH ANNIVERSARY IN THE PRIESTHOOD

Father Laurence Kenny S.J., professor emeritus at St. Louis University, will celebrate his fifty-fifth anniversary in the priesthood tomorrow. Father Kenny, 91 years old, is the oldest active Jesuit in the United States. He came to the university in 1899, and was ordained a year later. He is a member of the Board of Trustees of the Missouri State Historical Society, and his writings have appeared in many historical reviews.

Among his students were the late Joseph M. Darst, Representative Melvin Price of East St. Louis, Bishop August F. Wildermuth S.J., of Patna, India, Bishop Adolph A. Noser of the Gold Coast of Africa, Dr. Ralph Kinsella, professor of internal medicine and director emeritus of the university, and Mayor Raymond R. Tucker.

Father Kenny taught classes until 10 years ago, and is still active in historical research. He will celebrate a votive mass at 7:15 a.m. tomorrow at Our Lady's altar in the St. Francis Xavier (College) Church.

35,000-VOLUME LIBRARY GIVEN TO WASHINGTON U.

A collection of 35,000 volumes from the patent searching library of the late Roy Eilers, prominent St. Louis patent attorney, was presented to the Washington University library by his widow, Mrs. Florence Eilers, of Lake Montowese, Mo., it was announced yesterday.

The collection, believed to be the largest technical library assembled by one person, was housed in a special addition to the Eiler residence at 1313 North Kingshighway. The library included a complete clipping file, electrical and engineering journals published in several languages and many early technical publications.

Mr. Eilers, who died in March 1949, was graduated from the university in 1900 and received a law degree two years later. He began assembling the library in the 1920s as a reference for patent searching work. The volumes arrived at the university packed in 2300 boxes.

THREE GERMAN GRAIN FIRM PRESIDENTS TO VISIT HERE

Presidents of three German grain and feed companies on a tour of American grain processing and storage operations will be in St. Louis tomorrow and Tuesday, visiting local industries. Arrangements for their visit here were made through the Merchants' Exchange of St. Louis and the Chicago Board of Trade.

The three Germans are Ernst Herrmann Koeln of Hamburg-Elmshorn, Peter Koelln Co.; Otto Davids, Louis Davids Co., near Bad Kreuznach, and Martin Fuchs of Oberlahnstein on the Rhein, M. Fuchs Co.

They will visit Ralston Purina Co. tomorrow and Tuesday morning will tour the new 2,500,000-bushel Elam Grain Co. elevator and make a trip through the Merchants' Exchange. The group will spend Tuesday afternoon at Russell-Miller Milling Co., Alton.

THREE BRANCH LIBRARIES TO CLOSE FOR REPAIR WORK

Soulard branch library, 704 Lafayette avenue, will be closed tomorrow through Friday for painting of walls and shelves, Louis M. Nourse, city librarian, announced.

Nourse said the Stix branch at Stix school, 226 South Euclid avenue, will be closed Thursday and Friday while floors are being refinished. Gravois branch library in Long school, 5028 Morganford road, also will be closed Friday when a coat of varnish will be applied to floors, he said.

Central Public Library and all branches in the city will close at 5:30 p.m. Saturday and all day next Sunday and July 4 in observance of the Independence day holiday.

800 MORE TO LEAVE FOR BOY SCOUT CAMPS

Schedules of Various St. Louis Units — Other Scouting Activities.

More than 800 Boy Scouts, Explorers and leaders from six districts of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council will leave today to attend long term summer camps.

About 260 Scouts and Explorers of Keystone and Frontier Districts were to arrive at Lions' Den Scout Reservation this afternoon for the season which ends Aug. 14. Lions' Den, a 250-acre reservation, is near Seckman, Mo., in Jefferson county.

Approximately 400 boys and leaders from Oazrk Trails District will camp at Irondale Scout Reservation, in Washington county, this week. Troop 327, of Pioneer District, also will be at Irondale.

Midland District Scouts and Explorers will attend Camp May at Beaumont Scout Reservation, near Valley Park, also this week. Units from Keystone which will be at Lions' Den include Troops 145, 146, 210, 221, 250, 289, 539, 557 and 575.

Units from Frontier attending Lions' Den are Troops 23, 124, 164, 194, 196, 201, 202, 211 and 242.

Five of the nine troop campsites at Lions' Den have been completely rebuilt and equipped with new all-weather shelters, fireplaces, tables and latrines, a Scout official said. Cost of improvements, including the camp's kitchen, dining hall and recreational areas, was $6000.

A special program of weekend camping featuring conservation projects will be offered to all Scout and Explorer units at Beaumont Reservation throughout the summer.

P. Stan Bowen, 1202 Iona avenue, Wellston, a member of the council camping committee, will be in charge of the program which was organized with cooperation of local conservation agents.

Immanuel Congregational Church, 3460 Jamieson avenue, is organizing a new Cub Pack and Scout Troop 159. Another Pack, 613, also is being organized by the Men's Club of Sacred Heart Catholic Parish, at Florissant.

James L. Glover, former Scoutmaster of Troop 358, Wentzville, Mo., has been appointed to the staff of the council. He will be district executive of South District.

Six members of Troop 360, sponsored by the North Glendale Parent-Teachers Association, were awarded Eagle rank, Scouting's highest advancement honor, at a picnic and court of honor last night at Babler State Park. They are Spencer Wrasmann, George Krieger, Robert Wike, Tony Gauvin, Richard Jack Bell and Edward Allan Tomey.

Explorer John Rick, Troop 4, St. Gabriel Parochial School, 4711 Tamm avenue, will receive Eagle rank at a ceremony Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the school. An Eagle badge was awarded to Robert Franke, of Velda Village, Troop 50, last week. The troop is sponsored by the Fathers Club of McKinley School.

Girl Scout News

Four Senior Girl Scouts, of Kirkwood Troop 287, have obtained positions as nurse's aids at St. Luke Hospital, it was reported yesterday. They will continue working at the hospital until late August when the girls are to attend camps in Michigan.

They are Tammy McGill, 17 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. McGill, 117 Parkland place, Glendale; Eva Schneider, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Schneider, 434 West Essex avenue, Kirkwood; Mary Showers, 17, daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Showers, 294 Parkland, Glendale, and Linda Winkle, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Winkle, 645 Pearl avenue, Kirkwood.

Eva, was graduated recently from Kirkwood High School; the others are students there.

Sacajawea, Senior Day Camp, is scheduled to open Tuesday at the totem pole in Forest Park. Camping sessions will be held for five weeks on Tuesdays and Thursday from 4 to 9 p.m. Advanced outdoor skills will be taught in addition to tennis, golf, archery and photography.

The Brownie and Intermediate Day Camp at Jefferson Barracks also is scheduled to open Tuesday. Some 165 girls have registered. Meramec Valley Day Camp will close formally at a ceremony Thursday afternoon.

Girl Scout adults have been invited to enroll in a standard first aid course which begins tomorrow at 9:30 a.m. at the St. Louis chapter, American Red Cross, 3414 Lindell boulevard. Subsequent classes will be held in nine two-hour sessions beginning at 9:30 a.m. Mondays and Wednesdays. Those interested in registering for the course were asked to call FRanklin 1-4980.

NEW ELECTRONIC DICTIONARY MAKES COMPUTER WORK SELF

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)—Remington-Rand, Inc., claims to have perfected a computer's computer—a device that will make it possible for almost anyone with a brain to operate the room-size electronic brain made by the company.

The device is an electronic dictionary, which, fed certain information, makes the computer instruct itself. With it, a problem can be prepared for the big computer in a matter of minutes instead of months.

Additionally, the device will widen the horizon for uses of the giant computers, it will be easier to find people to operate them.

COURTROOM USE OF NEWS CAMERA URGED BY EDITOR

Freedom of Information Crusader Says Modern Photo Equipment Is Undistracting.

PALO ALTO, Calif., June 25 (UP)—A leading crusader for freedom of information believes the public should be represented in court by news cameras.

To make this possible, he says, the press should demonstrate to the courts that "this is a new camera age" and that news photographers should be permitted to cover trails with modern, soundless, and undistracting equipment.

These views were voiced here last night by J. Russell Wiggins, managing editor of the Washington Post & Times-Herald. Wiggins, who also is chairman of the Freedom of Information Committee of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, He addressed the California Editors' Conference at Stanford on "Bar vs. Press."

"The camera," Wiggins said, "can bring to millions of Americans who never otherwise will see a court in session the benefit of a public trial." He added that all press photographers ought to "live in the new age as well as talk about it" by using quiet, modern cameras at all functions.

"As long as the only cameras judges ever see, at non-legal public functions they attend, are the large boxes with clicking shutters and crashing holders and exploding lights, they are going to be hard to persuade that this is a new camera age," he said.

Wiggins conceded that "the time is not ripe for a rule that would require the admission of cameras to all courtrooms."

But he said the press can give the legal profession "a continuing demonstration that the camera at least need not interfere with order in the courtroom."

Wiggins said the right of public trial is not only the right of the accused, "but it is also a right of the public."

A public trial, he said, "protects the accused against the undue severity of the court . . . (and) protects the public against undue leniency of the court."

Wiggins stated that the open court:

1. "Improves the quality of the evidence by making the witness aware that persons present may contradict him if he lies.
2. "Exerts a wholesome influence on the judge.
3. "Inspires confidence in the courts (if they deserve it.)
4. "Educates the people.
5. "Puts citizens, not known to be involved in proceedings, on notice of their concern and interest in them.
6. "Deters criminal impulse by demonstrating the certainty of apprehension and punishment.
7. "Enables the people to keep under scrutiny the conduct of a major arm of the Government."

Wiggins said "trial by newspaper does not seem to be the menace that many lawyers believe."

"Nor," he added, "when they have had the opportunity to pass on the issue, have the courts themselves regarded the menace as sufficiently grave to warrant restraints on the press.

"Publicity has its hazards," he said. "Secrecy, however, has more hazards."

50 Red-Linked Summer Camps Open Soon, Nation Survey Shows

30 of Them in New York State—Some of Resorts Run by Communists, Members of 'Front' Subversive Groups.

By JACK LOTTO

(Copyright, 1955, by International News Service.)

NEW YORK, June 25 (INS)—At least 50 Communist-tinged summer camps are opening their doors within a few days to tens of thousands of unsuspecting vacation-bound children and adults.

A nation-wide investigation disclosed at least 30 Communist-tainted resorts operating in New York, five in New Hampshire, three in California, one each in Pennsylvania, Michigan and New Mexico, four in New Jersey, two in Massachusetts, three in Vermont and several in Canada.

Fertile Field.

The resort operators, a small minority among the vast number of loyal American camping groups, have found camping a fertile field for possible indoctrination of boys and girls—and a big source of revenue.

They have nothing to fear even if they run openly—as some do. An I.N.S. study of several weeks showed there is not a law on the books of any state to prevent or identify the sources of ideological "summer session subversion."

Some of the resorts run by Communists, members and supporters of Communist "fronts," pro-Communist groups or subversive organizations have been granted tax exemptions by the Federal Government and others reportedly get Government surplus food free.

Twelve of the camps are owned, financed or managed by former officials and members of the International Workers Order. The I.W.O. is officially described as the biggest "financial arm" of the Communist Party in the United States.

In New York, the state holds a mortgage on one of the largest Red-influenced camps in the country. This year, the resort has taken a new name and is busy trying to woo the general public.

It was learned the House Un-American Activities Committee has been secretly investigating alleged un-American influences in summer camps for the last two months.

The first public subcommittee hearings are scheduled to open Monday in Los Angeles under the chairmanship of Representative Clyde Doyle (Dem.), California. Committee chairman Francis Walter (Dem.), Pennsylvania, will head a group conducting open hearings in San Diego, Calif., starting July 5.

The situation has apparently worsened in New York state since last year when the names of 23 camps and the records of their backgrounds were turned over by I.N.S. to the Governor's office—by request.

The state legislators, acting on urgent recommendations of then Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, authorized a legislative investigation and speedy hearings were pledged.

No Hearings.

Today, however, State Senator Edward Larkin (Rep.), Floral Park, chairman of the Joint Committee on Philanthropic and Charitable Affairs, said "public hearings would serve no useful purpose at this time."

These facts were discovered during the I.N.S. investigation:

Letters asking for contributions for the "World Fellowship," a summer camp at Albany, N. H., state the donations are deductible from income tax returns under a ruling by the Treasury Department. New Hampshire Attorney General Louis C. Wyman, in a 1955 report to the state legislature declared "there are substantial indications of Communist (subversive) influences at World Fellowship, Inc."

Dr. Willard Uphaus is the camp's executive director. According to the official report, Uphaus "has pro-Communist associations which have been substantial and long." Uphaus, who lives in New Haven, Conn., led an American delegation to a Communist "peace" conference behind the Iron Curtain and visited Moscow in 1950.

The House Un-American Activities Committee in 1952 named Camp Unity at Wingdale, N. Y., as one of the most notorious Red-sponsored camps. This year, it changed its name to Wingdale Lodge and went through a series of corporation name changes. The camp stopped advertising in the Daily Worker but still uses the National Guardian, a left-wing newspaper whose editors have pro-Communist associations.

The new manager of Wingdale Lodge is Kenneth Friedman, a member of the International Workers Order. Last year Friedman was director of Camp Wyandotte for children at Mount Tremper, N.Y. The Department of Commerce charged the camp was under alleged "Communist influence" and removed the resort from its directory of children's camps.

State Mortgage.

New York State holds a $35,000 mortgage on the 245-acre property of the Wingdale Lodge. The original camp was financed by an I.W.O. mortgage which the State Insurance Department inherited when it seized the assets of the I.W.O. under a court order.

The Highley Hill Summer Camp for Children at Wilmington, Vt., is run by Max and Grace Granich. Both were denounced in congressional hearings when they refused to state whether or not they were Communists. Both were identified as "functionaries" of the Communist party.

Representative Donald L. Jackson (Rep.), California, called Mrs. Granich a "constant and continuing menace to the security of the United States." In 1952, her husband refused to tell the House Un-American Activities Committee whether he provides Communist propaganda literature to the children at his camp.

Another I.W.O. - mortgaged group is Camp Lakeland, for adults, and Camp Kinderland, for children, on Sylvan Lake at Hopewell Junction, N.Y. These camp operators were forced to pay off a $46,000 mortgage held by the state when their backgrounds were disclosed by I.N.S. last year.

This year, the two camps have a new director. He is Dave Greene, who spoke before the tenth convention of the Communist party in 1938. Greene is former chief organizer and recording secretary of the I.W.O.

Here are some camps which advertise in official Communist publications like the Daily Worker:

Allaben Hotel, Lakewood, N.J.; Camp Midvale, Midvale, N.J.; Pine Lake Lodge, Kenoza Lake, N.Y.; Lakeview Hot Springs, Lakeview, Calif.; and Mayman's resort, at South Haven, Mich.

Also Briehl's at Walkill, N.Y.; Nature Friends, Midvale; Mount View Pleasure Farm, Parksville Station, N.Y.; and City Slicker Farm at Jeffersonville, N.Y.

Remains Silent.

Craig S. Vincent and his wife, Jenny, operate a 160-acre camp, the "San Cristobal Valley Ranch," near Taos, N.M., 90 miles from the Atomic Energy laboratories at Los Alamos. In 1953, they refused to say whether it was a "Communist indoctrination" establishment. Under their constitutional protection they would not deny or affirm party membership. Vincent remained silent when the Senate Internal Security subcommittee put this question to him in a closed session:

"Do you know that the Communist party in Denver at a meeting March 17, 1950, decided that the San Cristobal ranch would be operated for the benefit of the Communist party, and that proceeds . . . would be at the disposal of the Communist party?"

Elton T. Gustafson and Sarah Riedman of Brooklyn were fired from their jobs in 1952-53 as New York City school teachers when they invoked the fifth amendment on questions of Communist membership. Today they are married to each other and run a camp for children at Jewett, N.Y., called "Timberline." Four witnesses last year in official proceedings identified Gustafson as a member of the Communist party for a least 10 years.

The Ormsby Village Camp for Children near Los Angeles was founded by Hugh Hardyman. He was identified before Congress as a Communist and a member of a delegation to the Peiping "peace" conference in Communist China. The director of the camp for 100 teen-agers is Mrs. Jean Wilkerson. She was fired from her school position when she refused to tell a California state commission whether or not she was a Communist party member.

Crystal Lake Lodge, at Chestertown, N.Y., was cited by the House Un-American Activities Committee as a Communist-run camp. It advertises regularly in the National Guardian and regular newspapers. The Daily Worker last week carried a long feature article about the camp and its many leftist entertainers.

The House Committee reported the Jefferson School of Social Science, a Communist "university" in New York City, conducted a summer camp at Arrowhead lodge, in Ellenville, N.Y.

The camp Followers of the Trail at Buchanan, N.Y., was another camp listed by the congressional group as under alleged communist influence.

Boarding House.

Mrs. Josephine Timms advertises a summer boarding house at Wentworth, N.H., regularly in the Guardian. Last year she refused to affirm or deny Communist membership before the New Hampshire legislative body. She was identified as a party member and a member of many organizations on the subversive list.

Henry C. Iram ran on the Communist party ticket as far back as 1932. He admitted that at least 400 Communists have visited his camp in Washington, N.H., according to official proceedings.

Mrs. Irma C. Otto who runs a summer boarding house in Center Sandwich, N.H., was cited by New Hampshire legislators as having a long record of affiliations with Communist-front groups. She attended the second World Peace Congress in Warsaw in 1950.

The Massachusetts Commission on Communism began an investigation last summer of charges by the American Legion that Shadowwood Inn and Festival House, both in Lenox, "cater to the faithful followers of the Communist party."

Owners of both establishments denied the allegations. John Bresnahan, attorney for the commission, said today "the matter is still before us. There have been no official findings yet."

Camps which advertise regularly in the Guardian are:

Chaits at Accord, N.Y.; Camp Alpine, Philadelphia; Glen Lake House at Neversink, N.Y., and Gordon's at Trout Lake, Quebec.

Also the Hillberg farm, Halpern's farm and the Crane's, all at Kerhonkson, N.Y., and Lamb's Camp at Kenora, Ontario.

Arrow farms at Monroe, N.Y., was set up by members of the American Russian Fraternal Society, a branch of the I.W.O. for persons of Russian descent.

Allaben at Napanoch, N.Y., is run by the School of Jewish Studies, which is on the Attorney General's subversive list.

ADULT SUMMER PROGRAMS AT CITY ART MUSEUM

Summer programs for adults are being offered at 11 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays and at 2:30 p.m. Saturdays, through July 30, by the educational department of City Art Museum in Forest Park, Miss Mary Powell, superintendent, announced yesterday.

Talks on the programs each Tuesday are designed to indicate the relationship between art of the past and its transition to the present. The Thursday group of programs are devoted to "An Art Tour of Italy" and artists of Spain will be discussed Saturdays.

The sumer series also includes programs for children under 12 years old at 11 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays and at 2:30 p.m. Fridays, and museum adventures for youths 12 and over at 2:30 p.m. Wednesdays. Six old masters are to be discussed on the museum adventures series for youth.

COUPLE MARRIED 54 YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. George Schmelzer, 4917 Arlington avenue, will celebrate their fifty-fourth wedding anniversary today with a family gathering at their home. He is a retired machinist.

They have twin daughters and two grandchildren. Schmelzer is 83 years old and his wife 78.

CLASSES FOR SLOW-READING CHILDREN BEGIN TOMORROW

A five-week session for slow reading pupils from the fourth grade through the first year of high school will begin tomorrow at St. Francis Xavier Elementary School, 3741 West Pine boulevard. Classes, offered by the St. Louis University education department, will be held at 9, 10 and 11 a.m.

Registration will be held from 8 to 10 a.m. tomorrow for an earth science institute in Room 110 DuBourg Hall, 221 North Grand boulevard. The institute will be from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. tomorrow to July 15 in 103 Rueppel Hall, 3621 Olive street. Sessions of a Latin teachers' institute will be held at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow and Tuesday and 10 a.m. Tuesday.

St. Louis University also will offer a program of three educational conferences at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 5 and July 12 in DuBourg Hall. Each meeting will consist of a panel discussion by speakers who will present the topic for the day and answer questions.

EDEN PROPOSES PROFIT-SHARING TO BOOST OUTPUT

Economists Warn of Slump in Fall — Exports Falling Due to Domestic Buying.

By ERNIE HILL
The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

LONDON, June 25 — Prime Minister Eden is working overtime to try to cushion Britain's economic bust in the fall. The boom of the last year, economists have warned, has been on borrowed time.

On the face of it, England has never looked better. Employment is as near 100 per cent as you can get. Earnings and dividends are high. People are buying more things than ever before.

But prosperity is leading the country toward an economic crisis. This is the strange paradox that exists today. The gap between exports and imports has widened dangerously. Strikes have contributed to the situation.

Britain has to export to live. Exports have not kept up with imports. Britain must produce more and sell more abroad.

Full employment looks fine, but it means that factories are unable to hire more people to increase production. There is nobody left to hire.

People Buying More.

People are buying more than ever. This sounds good but it is helping produce the crisis. Many of the things the British are buying and using at home should be exported to bring more money to the country.

Chancellor of the Exchequer R. A. Butler has informed Parliament that the trend must be reversed.

Butler says that wages have increased 7 per cent in the last year while the cost of living has gone up only 3½ per cent.

This additional buying power is fine for the home market. But it prevents the country from increasing its shipments abroad.

Tories and Laborites alike agree on the solution: Increased production.

The same number of men and women now at work must produce more of everything and at a lower cost so Britain can compete on the world market.

British Buy German Ships.

German shipbuilders are bidding 15 to 25 per cent under the British for ship construction. It was a blow when one of England's oldest shipping lines placed an order for three cargo boats with a German shipyard. The Japanese are under-selling the British in the textile market.

The long-term plan that Britain must accept if it is to make a showing against foreign competition calls for more efficiency and more labor saving machinery—automation. This is a new word in England.

Members of Parliament and newspapers are talking about automation, horsepower, industrial relations and productivity.

Factory owners must accept the idea of lower profits and plow more money back in the form of modern equipment.

Labor leaders must accept the idea that machines will not put men out of work but will allow the country to produce more so it can live better.

The Daily Mail, which ran front page editorials on the industrial crisis three days in a row, presented figures to show how American and Soviet production is rising while British production is almost level.

Not Afraid of Horsepower.

"One reason," said the Daily Mail, "is that the American is not afraid of horsepower. He welcomes it. He can see that it not only eases his labor but raises output and provides more work, more pay benefits.

"When Henry Wallace, during the war, forecast that there would be as many as 60,000,000 jobs in America after it, some people thought he was crazy. Today there 62,000,000 jobs. Machines did that."

But this plan of modern machinery would take a long time. Eden is working on another angle. He is trying to force the big companies into a plan of profit-sharing with their employes. He believes that profit-sharing would encourage employes to work harder and forego strikes.

Eden and Butler are not going to have an easy time selling this idea to industrialists and business owners. It may take some kind of legislation.

Investors Look to Britain.

American investors, quick to see the chance for big dividends, are investing heavily in the British market.

A survey in the Daily Mail shows that some stock purchased one year ago is now worth 50 to 100 per cent more. Dividends are averaging 10 per cent or more in many companies.

This is why the labor unions are moving in for a general upward revision of pay scales. The unions can read the financial pages as well as anyone.

In a parliamentary debate, both Tories and Laborites expressed approval of Eden's profit-sharing plan but the Socialists want something substantial.

J. T. Oram, the Labor member from West Ham, declared that the International Chemical Co. made profits last year of $109,200,000 and has now offered to give employes $1,120,000 under a profit-sharing plan.

"You can hardly call this profit-sharing," said Oram. ■

70,000 Church, Synagogue Jobs Next 10 Years

NEW YORK—Some 70,000 churches and synagogues will be constructed or substantially altered in the United States in the next 10 years at a cost of nearly six billion dollars, in the opinion of George Cline Smith, economist of F. W. Dodge Corporation, writing in the June issue of Architectural Record.

In addition, he estimates, there will be about 12,500 parish houses, Sunday school buildings and related buildings costing about one and a quarter billion dollars. Parochial educational buildings are not included.

The combined totals are 82,500 projects costing about seven and a quarter billion dollars. Smith's prediction is based on three assumptions: That there will be no severe depression, no major war, and no major change in the value of the dollar.

At Highest Rate.

Smith said all of his figures and estimates are based on F. W. Dodge Corporation's Dodge Reports of contract awards for future construction in the 37 eastern states, with an adjustment to take care of the estimated volume in the other 11 states. The Dodge figures are the only ones available to indicate the total future volume of church construction.

"Current activity in church construction," Smith says, "is running at the highest rate in history. Contract awards for religious buildings in the 37 eastern states during the first three months of 1955 totalled $128,000,000. That's an increase of 60 per cent above the previous first-quarter record set in 1951, and 61 per cent above the first quarter of last year.

"The religious category in the first quarter of 1955 accounted for about 7 per cent of all nonresidential building awards. This represents an enormous growth, not only in dollars but in share of the market, during the postwar period.

Significance Is Obvious.

"In the corresponding quarter of 1946, the first postwar year, religious buildings totalled only $17,000,000, and represented just 2 per cent of non-residential building.

"The spiritual significance of this trend should be obvious," he says. "The current upsurge of interest in religion is actually part of a long-term trend which has been expressed in rising membership of churches, both absolutely and in proportion to the population, through several decades. The outlook for church building is bright."

Church Begins Construction of Main Building

FORMAL GROUND BREAKING—Formal ground breaking is to be observed at 10:45 a.m. today for construction of the main building of the Hope Evangelical and Reformed Church property at the northeast corner of Tamm and Eichelberger avenues. Sketch is from Ernest T. Friton, architect who has done the designing and planning of the structure.

Hope E. & R. Breaks Ground For Building

Hope Evangelical and Reformed Church will break ground formally at 10:45 a.m. today for construction of the main building of the congregation's church property at the northeast corner of Tamm and Eichelberger avenues. The property already has a chapel and a Sunday School building, completed in 1950.

The new building has been designed by Architect Ernest T. Friton and the Brockmeyer Construction Co. has been awarded the general contract. Cost of the job will be, on the basis of contract price, about $284,000. The Rev. Norman C. Zulauf is the pastor.

The new structure will have nave, chancel, narthex, choir wing and balcony, a mothers' and babies' room with public address system speakers, double-pane glass for soundproofing. Seating capacity will be about 580 in nave and balcony.

On the ground floor there is to be a fellowship room with stage and choir rooms, kitchen and food storage area, classrooms, wardrobes and dressing rooms, a large lobby, storage space and sanitary facilities.

The second floor will have the balcony and two additional classrooms.

Architectural styling is Romanesque, with a tower at the junction of the new main building and the existing Sunday

Insurance Company's Home

FORMALLY OPENED—New home of the Western Life Insurance Co. at northwest corner of the intersection of Clayton road and Hanley in the edge of Davis Place, Clayton, completed and opened formally last week. It has 20,000 square feet of floor space, half on main floor, half in basement reached from slightly dipping drive off Clayton road.

MAIN LOBBY—Looking toward public reception desk and (left) to part of general office in new Western Life Insurance company building. Plastered walls are neutral gray, ceiling accoustically tiled, fluorescent lighted, floor white and green asphalt tile. Behind wall on which clock hangs is stairway to basement, a central mechanical core of building.

Western Life In New Home On Clayton Rd.

The Western Life Insurance Company, which got its start in 1894 servicing lodges and fraternal societies which didn't have their own insuring services for members, moved into a new, 20,000 square-foot home office in Clayton last week and celebrated Thursday afternoon and evening with open house, followed by a dinner for officers and visiting dignitaries at the Gatesworth Hotel.

The building is a one-story red brick structure in Williamsburg colonial styling, designed and built for Western by J. G. and R. G. McKelvey. The building has a central mechanical core, including air-conditioning and a gas-oil fired heating system with perimenter distribution; and steel-beam roof supports designed to handle a second floor when expansion is required. There are 10,000 square feet of space on the main floor and the same in the basement, where there will be parking space for several cars (entrance from Clayton road), employes kitchen, lunch and lounge rooms and storage space. There's a small parking area at the rear of the building from which there is entrance directly to the board room.

The company has moved into the new building from a converted house at 1123 North Kingshighway, which had been occupied six or seven years after the offices were shifted out of the downtown area.

Western continues to service more than 500 lodges and fraternal societies, but also writes general business, has in force more than $20,000,000 of insurance.

Officers of the company include Horace G. Beedle, president, 2842 Gainsboro Court, Normandy; Carlton G. Haizlip, secretary - treasurer, Ballwin; Charles L. Kell, vice-president and director of agencies, 24 Plant avenue., Webster Groves; Dorothy H. Lovell, assistant secretary, 821 Newport avenue, Webster Groves, and Harding W .Maxwell, assistant treasurer, 1900 Bainbridge Drive, St. Louis County. At the dinner in the Gatesworth for officers, visiting general agents and company directors, were Walter A. Nies, Louis Seals and John A. Nolan, other members of the board.

ATTENDS EXECUTIVE SCHOOL

Mel Doernhoefer, field representative for the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis, is attending the National Institute for Trade Association Executives in Chicago, June 25 to July 1, at Northwestern University. The announcement was made by Laurence E. Neville, executive secretary of the Association.

Doernhoefer has attended the Institute the last two years.

STANDARD OIL LEASES GLICK BUILDING AREA

The Standard Oil Co. of Ohio has leased about 25,000 square feet of office space in the new Glick Building, under construction and nearing completion at the southeast corner of Jackson and Forsyth blvds., Clayton. It is one of few buildings in the area large enough to supply that much space on one floor. The space is to be used as the regional office of the Sohio Pipe Line Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, whose home offices are Cleveland, O.

J. D. Harnett and J. F. Wilson are in charge of the Sohio office here.

The lease was negotiated by the Glick Real Estate Co. with Tom Allen and Walter Terpenning of the Sohio Co.

Eugene Glick, president of the Glick Real Estate Co., which is erecting the building, said specifications call for the last word in office building facilities, with movable steel partitions, air-conditioning, aluminum acoustical ceiling, self service elevators and exclusive parking space for 65 automobiles.

Legal details were handled by Schifrin and Shifrin. Occupancy is scheduled for Jan. 1, 1956.

SLAIN DOCTOR'S FARM BOUGHT BY LABOR LEGALIST

Samuel J. Quinn, St. Louis legislative agent for the American Federation of Labor, has purchased the 620-acre farm near Warrenton of the late Dr. Cecil A. Z. Sharp of St. Louis, the Whiteside Real Estate Co. of Warrenton reports.

The farm, located on Charrette creek, is in a section of Warren county noted for its scenic beauty.

Dr. Sharp, who formerly was coroner of St. Louis county, and a widely-known St. Louis physician, was shot and killed by a neighbor in Ladue, following a dispute over their property lines about a year ago.

In recent years, Dr. Sharp had supervised health conditions of members of United Mine Workers in seven states, with approximately 300 local physicians serving under him.

The Whiteside agency acted for Mrs. Katherine Sharp, widow of the physician and Quinn in the transaction.

DRAFTSMAN BUYS HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Sorkin, he's a recently returned Air Force veteran now associated with Charles W. Lorenz, architect, have acquired a brick residence at 6349 Alamo avenue from the Lisette Investment Co., which is headed by Arthur F. Lubke. Frank A. Singer was agent in the deal.

Construction Started On New Unit of Oak Grove Mausoleum

Cincinnati Company's New Branch Warehouse

ON McREE AVENUE—New office, display room and warehouse of the Williamson Heater Co. of Cincinnati, O., 4609 McRee avenue, completed and opened formally last week. It has 20,000 square feet of space on one clear-span level, seven truck docks with weather protection, cyclone-fenced parking area at rear. Built and owned by James Frazier, president of the Export Packing Co., property will be used by Williamson under long-term lease.

Heater Company Opens Factory Warehouse Here

The Williamson Heater Company of Cincinnati, O., expanding its operations to include a companion line of waterless air-conditioning units, formally opened last week a big new office, display room and warehouse at 4609 McRee avenue. Williamson has had direct factory representation here for about a year, but on a much smaller scale, using only about 8000 square feet of floor space, compared to 20,000 in the new building. Prior to that time there had been agency representation of the line here.

The new building was designed largely by Williamson's own engineering personnel, was built and is owned by James Frazier, president of the Export Packing Co., to be occupied by Williamson under long-term lease. The structure is of concrete block, with slab floor, roof of plank on patented interlocking clear-span rafters in two long bays. There are seven weather protected truck docks at the rear of the structure for receiving and shipping, and a cyclone-fence inclosed parking area at the rear. There are 3000 square feet of air-conditioned office space, teletype installation for constant communication with the factory.

The building is estimated as a $250,000 property, permits Williamson to keep on hand here a $250,000 continuous inventory of heating and air-conditioning

Southern Colonial Style Home

NORTH OF BARNHART—Residence in southern colonial style, north of Barnhart, Mo., facing highways 61-67, sold by James Macnish to Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Ebmeyer through the Floyd Davis agency. House is on two and one-half-acre tract on which there also is a garage and caretaker's quarters.

LOOSELY JOINS SHOW GROUP

H. J. Loosley, president and managing director of the Home Show of St. Louis, Inc., which is produced annually in Kiel Auditorium, has been elected a charter member of the N.A.P.E.M. (National Association of Public Exposition Managers), according to an announcement made by the association.

Ralph P. Stoddard, managing director of the Greater Cleveland Home & Flower Show is chairman.

Oak Grove Adds Fifth Unit to Its Mausoleum

Ground has been broken for a $600,000 addition to the Oak Grove Memorial Mausoleum in Oak Grove Cemetery, 7800 St. Charles road, St. Louis county. The structure will add nearly 1300 more tombs to the existing building.

The addition is the fifth unit of the mausoleum. It will be constructed at the south end of the building and will be a reproduction of the present fourth unit on the north end, to balance the design of the structure. One new feature will be a lower floor, made possible by the sloping ground, to the south.

Construction is being done by George L. Couins Contracting Co.

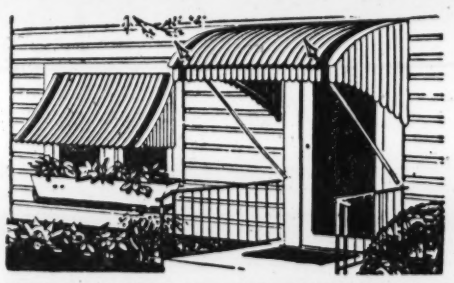

Designed by McDonald Lovell, mausoleum architect, the building's exterior will be of granite with carvings to harmonize with the present $3,000,000 structure. The granite is being set in monolithic concrete with stainless cement and, in addition, bronze anchors are to be used to permanently lock the huge granite blocks in place. Crypts and structural parts will be built of reinforced concrete.

The interior will be of white Carrara marble. Earl G. Stanza, president of Stanza and Company, Inc., which operates Oak Grove, and his son, Robert D. Stanza, are in Italy now to purchase the marble.

As in the fourth unit, there will be a foyer with a circular marble staircase and large memorial companion section rooms. These will be enclosed with wrought-bronze gates and will have ornamental biblical stained glass windows of seventeenth century design.

The new addition will have radiant heat for visitors' comfort. The corridors will be lighted by imported alabaster lamps. More than 100 tombs in the new unit already have been purchased, according to Earl G. Stanza Jr., of Stanza and Co., Inc.

Home Financing Picture in City Called Healthy

The home financing picture in the Greater St. Louis area is healthy and favorable to the would-be home buyer at the present time, according to the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis. Richard C. Higginbotham, president of the Bildors, yesterday reported that builder members of the Association are having no difficulty placing loans especially on conventional terms.

Higginbotham termed the amount of G.I. loans available to be adequate to the market, and said that the supply of FHA money was entirely satisfactory.

"I know of no reasonable deals which have gone begging for a lender," Higginbotham said.

Credit Curb Cleared.

He pointed out a natural reluctance of many lenders to go into no-down-payment deals, and did say that not many lenders are anxious to take 30-year loans.

Making reference to recent announcements that the Government was curbing credit in some cities because of overbuilding, Higginbotham said that the only city where FHA commitments were actually stopped temporarily was in Dallas, and that this is a situation long since cleared up.

Anyone who wishes to buy a new home, the Bildor president said, can find a proper financing program without difficulty, if he is buying with proper regard to his financial ability to earn.

Demand continues strongest in the lower price brackets, and often a householder finds it easier to close a deal for the home he wants if he is willing to pay a fraction of a per cent higher interest on a conventional loan. Conventional lenders are offering every inducement in the way of flexible financing to assist buyers.

Luxury Buyers Interested.

Higginbotham also reported an increased interest in homes in the luxury class, upwards of $50,000. Many of these sales are half or better cash, he said, and reflect the confidence of the business man in the future. "The people who buy big houses," Higginbotham said, "don't move in haste. And when they lay out that much money, it means they believe in a continuation of this prosperity."

The Bildor president predicted that local production of homes might top 9000 units in Greater St. Louis this year, despite a partial stoppage during the cement-drivers strike. He also predicted that these homes would all be sold before completed. With fair weather lasting late into the autumn, Higginbotham said, perhaps extended building might take total production for the year to 10,000 homes.

De Luxe Ranch Home On Large Tract of Ground

ON ALDEN LANE—Residence with three bedrooms, two baths, on large tract of ground numbered 11 Alden Lane, which was built by Karl Flach and sold to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Pope. Pope is with the Inland Steel Products Co. Negotiations of the deal were through the Burton-Murphy Real Estate Co.

Red Brick Ranch House On Hill Top Sold

ON LINDWORTH DRIVE—Residence at No. 20 Lindworth Drive, in the Ladue area, sold for Mrs. Helen M. Thee to Mr. and Mrs. Oden W. Prowell in transaction negotiated by the agencies of John W. Feldwisch and Mary Potter Love, Inc. On hill-top lot with more than an acre of ground, red-brick ranch-style home has a large living room with fireplace, dining room, modern kitchen, breakfast room, contemporary styled den with brick fireplace, three bedrooms, two baths, a paneled rathskeller with lavette.

Requires Competence.

The installation of a modern heating plant requires technical competence, says the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau in calling attention to the importance of good workmanship. Automatic heating systems are continually getting more complicated. This points to the necessity for having all hot-water and steam heating systems installed under the supervision of an experienced heating and piping contractor.

Requirements Stepped Up.

Automatic washing machines, electric dishwashers, and multiple bathrooms have stepped up the requirements for hot water in the home. Many older water heaters are inadequate to meet the increased demands for hot water in the modern home. Replacement of water heaters that are too small for their job is suggested by the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau.

ST. LOUIS OIL FIRM IS BUYING BELLEVILLE FIRM

Contract has been signed by the Milton Oil Co. of St. Louis, it was reported yesterday, to purchase the New Era Oil Co. of Belleville and the deal is expected to be concluded early this week.

Consideration involved was not reported, pending the closing of the deal, which involves a bulk plant and five retail outlets, including a so-called "budget store" at 400 East Main, Belleville, and a headquarters office at 420 South Illinois street. The Belleville company, 30 years in business, handles automotive service, including tires, and home heating service operations.

A spokesman quoting H. E. Milton, president of the Milton Oil Co., said the name, the products and the personnel of New Era would be continued, Charles Schaufler, with the concern since its beginning, will continue as general manager, and George Herman,, also with the firm from the start, will continue as general manager of the Firestone tire distributorship which the company holds.

The company handles DX gasoline and supplemental products of the same line.

New Warehouse

units, ductwork, parts and equipment. It also permits speedy overnight truck shipments from Cincinnati and Madison (Ind.) plants, said Joe Bauer, district sales manager.

Bauer said Williamson had pioneered with its air-conditioning units 20 years ago, laid them aside because they were too far ahead of the market, came back to them again about two years ago.

Establishment, and now expansion, of the factory branch here marks westward expansion of the company's operations. Bauer, his office manager Tom Carroll and staff (average total 25 persons) will handle sales and distribution in Missouri, Illinois, Kansas, Arkansas and part of Tennessee.

For the formal opening here, Harold Kahle, director of education, and Paul Jensen, vice president of Williamson came from Cincinnati to attend the formal opening.

CHANGE COLOR SCHEME

Downtown Office Building Being Reconditioned

NEW ELEVATOR LOBBY—Architect's sketch of elevator lobby in 705 Olive building as it will look when new elevators have been installed as part of $600,000 reconditioning being undertaken inside the structure.

Stake in Cities.

Families who live in the suburbs have a vital stake in preserving the central areas of the cities near which they live, the United States Savings and Loan League believes. When a city deteriorates and "goes bad," the league comments, it has an adverse effect on the suburbs surrounding it.

AIR DUCTS—High ceilings of old-time construction provide space for running air-conditioning ducts overhead.

FINISHED CORRIDOR—How corridors look after modernizing, with accoustical tile ceiling, asphalt tile flooring.

WALL OUT—All new partitions, above marble wainscot, strip building interior of old and outmoded appearance.

REFINISHED—New plaster, new flooring surface, new lighting take dinginess out of long hallway areas.

Modernizing Of 705 Olive Is Under Way

The interior of the 15-story 705 Building, store and offices landmark structure at the northwest corner of Olive and Seventh street in downtown St. Louis, is getting a complete overhauling and air-conditioning at an estimated east of about $600,000.

Spokesmen for the Southern Real Estate and Financial Co. and the Delmar Investment Co., which own the property, said the job reflects the owner's confidence in the economic soundness of downtown St. Louis for future years. Alfred J. Guth manages the building, which was erected in 1893 and is getting its first major overhaul since construction.

Some of the new air conditioning was put into operation on June 1. The system is being installed with dual ducts providing input and exhaust of 8000 cubic feet of air per minute to each room.

The main street-level lobby is being redesigned and a complete overhaul of the passenger elevator system is in progress in charge of the Haughton Elevator Co. New elevator cabs will have stainless steel doors, indirect fluorscent lighting, carpeted floors, contemporary color styling, and the system will get automatic leveling, automatic door controls and an automatic dispatching system.

Old marble flooring which is being retained is being resurfaced, new floor surfacing is being installed where required and new acoustical ceiling and fluorescent lighting are being installed throughout.

Front Facing Back.

Sound common sense is the chief criterion in modern building. That's why so many new homes have their "front" looking over the rear yard. Almost invariably the view is better.

KROGER OPENS NEW STORE ON THE NORTH SIDE

The Kroger Grocer & Baking Co. opened a new food market at Thirteenth and Montgomery streets on the near North Side last Thursday, bringing to a close-in city area the conveniences long available to shoppers in more outlying areas. The store is partly new construction, partly a reconditioning job on an existing structure; second unit to be opened in the company's "1955 Parade of Progress" in the St. Louis area.

Parking space has been arranged at the new store for 140 cars at a time. The store is air-conditioned, carries a full self-service line in cooled and frozen foods.

Lights are fluorescent, grocery shelving is the low "island floating" style. There are six conveyor checkout stands, automatic door openers.

Great Improvement.

In older houses, where the basement is not floored, a great deal of "homewrecking" moisture may come from the ground. Clay types of soil—even though they do not appear overly damp o nthe surface—often contribute large amounts of moisture to the air of a basement by evaporation. Under these conditions, where the floor is damp or of dirt construction, cementing the floors will help materially in reducing moisture from this source. As concrete itself is not necessarily a good moisture barrier, it is advisable to cover the ground with a coated roofing felt before the concrete is applied.

Warehouse Purchase Contracted

PARK AVENUE DEAL PENDING—Contracts have been signed, reports C. I. Silver, broker associated with M. A. Rust & Sons Realty Co., for sale of warehouse buildings numbered 4100 and 4128 Park avenue to a group of local investors headed by Charles Baskowitz. The buildings are owned by the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., which already has dispersed much of the property it has held in the Park avenue area. The Dickmann Real Estate Co. is the tobacco company's agent. Buildings have 425,000 square feet of space, Missouri Pacific and Frisco dockage for 22 cars. Consideration wasn't indicated.

Jennings Store Is Expanded

FLORISSANT AVENUE EXPANSION—Wittmann Department store at 7031 Florissant avenue, Jennings, as it looks with space more than doubled by new addition recently completed. Store is operated by Harry and Sidney Wittmann. Financing of the new construction was financed by Home Life Insurance Co. through Shaw, Brichler & Coleman, Inc., of Clayton.

Subdivision Developments Being Opened

New developments in the creation of homes in the Greater St. Louis area last week included preparation of some subdivision developments for formal opening today and establishment of a new company to do a specialized kind of factory-fabricating distribution.

Openings scheduled for today include the second section (second year's work) on the big Delwood Hills subdivision of the H. & K. Realty Co. Delwood is a development of three-bedroom ranch homes on Chambers road a block east of West Florissant avenue in the north-northwest area of the county. W. L. Kroeger & Son are the builders.

The Reliance Real Estate Co., Inc., is staging a formal opening today for a medium price range brick, ranch-house development of Builder Fred Sherrell called Shady Hill Acres. The homes are on Holmes avenue and Fortune Lane in southwestern St. Louis county.

The Hayward Realty Co., having been named an authorized dealer for National Homes (factory built houses from Indiana), has erected two for display purposes. One, a 1955 design with 900 square feet of floor space, has been erected at 1518 Kraft avenue, on an individual lot in the city; the other in a subdivision on Meyer road, Wentzville, three blocks north of Old Highway 40 and two blocks west of the new high school. It is an L-shaped somewhat contemporary design, one of the first so arranged by a prefrabricating organization. Formal openings have been arranged for today.

A new company, called Gelber-Hoemeke Homes, Inc., has been established by Marvin Gelber and Victor A. Hoemeke at 1117 Russell boulevard as a distributorship for Lumber Fabricators, Incorporated, a Fort Payne, Ala., organization. L.F.I. owns its own forests and mills, eliminates intermediate handling of lumber by selling in factory fabricated units to fit its own home plans or, mills and fabricates to fit plans submitted on custom basis. Orders are to be shipped to this area in tandem trailers on 10-day schedules. The new local distributorship is erecting the L.F.I. homes in a subdivision called Poplar Court, off Buckley road, Lemay, but plans to deliver anywhere in the metropolitan area.

BUILDING COST TREND HERE CONTINUES UPWARD CLIMB

A continued upward trend in building costs is seen by the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis. According to Richard C. Higginbotham, president of the association, construction costs rose nationally about three per cent between April 1954 and April this year.

Higginbotham said the index for all building materials has gone up 3.6% in the last year, with sharp increases in some lumber. For example, Douglas fir is up 13.3%, while softwood plywood has gone up 11.7%.

Other materials which have shared in the advances are hardware, plumbing equipment, cement and structural clay.

Higginbotham said it was impossible to do more than speculate on increased value of land, a big factor in home building costs. However, he pointed out that Federal Housing Administration figures on average market value of home building sites, reflect that building lot cost has doubled since 1946, and risen 20% even in the last year.

The builder president said no conclusion as to land costs in the greater St. Louis area could be drawn from the FHA figures, but that land continues to be a problem for builders.

Use Outdoor Enamel.

Don't be tempted to use regular house paint on garden or porch furniture. House paint is often formulated to chalk in such a manner that it cleans itself—an excellent quality when the paint is on a house. If such paint is used on garden furniture, however, it may rub off on your clothing.

Time to Renew Summer Mulch, But Materials Hard to Acquire

By ELEANOR B. McCLURE
Post-Dispatch Garden Writer.

Warm June days are a reminder to procrastinating gardeners (like this writer) that it is time to check and renew summer mulches. There's nothing like a good mulch layer for conserving moisture in hot, dry weather. In fact, the only real disadvantage I've ever found in mulch gardening is that it is getting increasingly harder to find suitable mulching materials.

One can start, of course, with waste materials from the garden—grass clippings, composted weeds, partly decomposed leaves. Even light brush (such as small twiggy branches) can be laid along the rows of the vegetable garden.

In this era of the power mower, however, waste piles are noticeably smaller. So often both grass clippings and leaves are chopped up fine and allowed to remain as a mulch for the lawn.

Materials Come High.

In the past we have hauled in quite a variety of mulching materials. Oak tow (fine, shredded shavings produced by a lengthwise cut of big oak logs) is now prohibitively expensive. Pecan shells are fine for mulching, since they are both fire-resistant and hostile to weeds, and they look so attractive. But try to get a supply this summer! We are told that there was a very short nut crop last fall, and the shells are also being ground up and used in the manufacture of ammunition.

Among waste materials that may be obtained in some areas are ordinary sawdust, ground corncobs, cottonseed hulls, spoiled hay, and straw. At the Arnold Arboretum spent hops have been used with success, although I have been told that the hops tend to blow about after they become very dry. Unlike the sawdust, at least, the hops are fire-resistant.

Although peat moss is widely used as a mulch, both the Canadian and German peats are too absorbent, for they tend to blot up moisture so quickly that they rob the plants. A very light layer of peat may be used to dress up the surface of beds that are mulched with some coarser, less attractive materials.

Buckwheat Hulls Good.

Michigan peat (which does not resemble peat at all, but looks like rich, sooty earth) is an attractive mulch, but it is quickly washed away by heavy rains or irrigation. Most satisfactory of all commercial mulches available in this area are buckwheat hulls. They are small and can be applied with greatest ease; they are light and airy and do not tend to pack together; and their light brown hue gives the beds a neat and dressy look. In most parts of the country the buckwheat hulls are sacked and sold under a trade name.

Although we prefer to use organic mulching materials, since they eventually decompose and build up the soil, we may also experiment with tiff mulches this year. This fine gravel (a bi-product from the Lead Belt area) makes a very permanent mulch, although it does tend to work into the soil and thus has to be renewed after a period of years.

All sorts of plants, from ferns, wild flowers and lilies to trees and shrubs, seem to thrive when their roots are kept moist and cool by a layer of tiff. The gravel wouldn't be at all suitable for the trim beds of a formal garden, of course, but it should do nicely in our woodland. The tiff also makes a fine "drip strip" beneath the wide eaves of a contemporary house. Properly applied, the bands of gravel can be most attractive. Redwood two-by-fours or strips of asbestos board may be used to retain the gravel. Low curbs of brick or cobblestone also make satisfactory "retaining walls."

Whatever mulching material is to be used, it is advisable to take a few precautions. First of all, it is most important to apply a balanced chemical fertilizer before the mulch is spread. An abundance of nitrogen is needed to provide food for the mulched plants, and also for those tiny soil microbes that decompose the organic mulches.

It is important, too, to cultivate the soil lightly, to be sure that the plant roots are well supplied with air. Aeration is improved (and bacterial disease discouraged) by putting a "collar" of perlite or fine gravel around fine, succulent stems of pansies, petunias or other small bedding plants. We are careful to keep the mulch away from the crowns of particular perennials like dephiniums and columbines.

Whether one mulches or not, it might be well at this season to give extra helpings of food and water to perennials, roses, shrubs and trees. All of these plants may need extra care this summer, since they still show damage from drouths and freezes. A balanced chemical fertilizer may be applied to the soil at this season. Many ornamentals also respond very well to occasional foliar feedings, in which both leaves and the soil surface are drenched with a liquid fertilizer soltuion.

Crab Grass Arrives.

Azaleas, rhododendrons and pieris will appreciate an acid fertilizer. If the leaves of these plants turn yellowish, they can be aided by drenching the plants with an iron solution—two teaspoonfuls of iron sulphate or epsom salts to a gallon of water.

Lawns have been fine and green this month, but the June showers have been a boon to the crab grass. We have been experimenting with a new chemical killer that is most effective on young plants. Older plants must have two applications, and since this new herbicide is poisonous, it must not be applied on areas where there might be danger to small children, or even pets.

Incidentally, many home owners actually hang out the welcome sign and invite infestations of crab grass. Recently, as I inspected one weedy lawn, I saw that the grass had been given the shortest possible cut. It was in marked contrast to some very fine turf in an adjoining yard, where luxuriant blue grass was cut with a rotary mower adjusted to a height of two and one-half inches. Anyone who literally scalps a lawn during the summer months is doing a big favor for that sun-loving tramp, crab grass.

In many lawns I have seen heavy infestations of crab grass brought on by over-watering. Lawns should never be "sprinkled" in the summer. Even in periods of prolonged drouth blue grass should be watered only about twice a month. Enough water should be applied, though, to penetrate to a depth of six to eight inches.

"Don't let chiggers annoy your family!"

Ever get an itching, red rash after working in lawn or garden? If you get such a welt at ankles, collar, beltline or shoe-tops, tiny chiggers that you can't see may be at work. They annoy everyone they attack, but especially the people allergic to their bites. You can get rid of chiggers easily by spreading powerful Black Leaf Dieldrin over your lawn and grounds.

Use BLACK LEAF® DIELDRIN

Spread granular Black Leaf Dieldrin over your lawn and along paths, fences, hedges and borders. It's dustless and can't blow away; it penetrates to the soil and works fast in killing chiggers, ticks and other harmful insects on the surface. Also kills grubs, wireworms and many harmful underground insects.

IT'S TIME TO USE... Vaughan's Crab grass killer (SODAR)

You have read in garden magazines about the new chemical SODAR (disodium monomethyl arsonate) which surpasses all others in quickly destroying crab grass and chickweed without harmful effect on fine lawn grasses.

Vaughan't Crab Grass Killer contains SODAR and does a better job on either young seedlings or mature plants than any of the other materials that have been used against these pests.

When it touches their leaves they turn brown, while grasses are undamaged. Having done its work, it loses strength and four days after the spraying, seeds of permanent grasses can be sown to replace the dying weeds.

Nine Cents Worth Treats 100 Square Feet!

Vaughan's Crab Grass Killer is exceptionally low in first cost. One pound will spray 4,000 square feet, going much further than other crab grass killers. When the cost of repeat spraying required with less effective chemicals is considered, further savings are made.

SODAR can be applied early or late in the season, on young plants or big fellows about to seed. A sprinkling can works well on small lawns, and pressure sprayers on larger areas. One treatment kills young plants, some mature plants requiring two.

We are so sure Vaughan's Crab Grass Killer doing its job that we offer it on a money-back guarantee. If after two weeks you do not agree that it is the best and most economical crab grass killer offered to date, return the container to us or the dealer from whom you purchased it and your money will be refunded.

Optional Safety Equipment

SEAT BELTS—The Chrysler Corporation reports it is making seat belts available as dealer-installed optional equipment for all five lines of its 1955-model cars. The Chrysler-designed seat belt package, which meets functional specifications the Civil Aeronautics Administration has established for seat belt installations in commercial airliners, is to be available for distribution through car dealers and engineers are investigating the possibility of adapting the seat belt package to Chrysler-built cars of previous model years, according to James C. Zeder, vice president, engineering. Zeder said further studies are needed to determine conclusively how much added protection seat belts can afford motorists. "However," he said, "the findings of reputable scientific and safety organizations, together with our own test data convince us that we now should make seat belts available to those who desire them."

NEW ASSEMBLY LINE TO SPEED RAMBLER OUTPUT

American Motors, which now runs Ramblers and the cars of the Nash and Hudson series all off the same assembly lines, is busy building new assembly lines designed for the handling of Ramblers alone in order to speed up production of that basic volume car, Roy Abernethy, vice president heading up the Nash Division, said here last week. The new facilities are expected to be ready in time to handle a considerably stepped-up output by the time 1956 models start going through the plants in the fall.

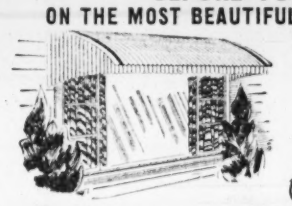

American Motors Rambler, developed by Nash before the Nash-Hudson merger and named after a very early (and once long forgotten) Nash model, now bears both Nash and Hudson labels in its current styling and has become so basic and well accepted vehicle that it is rapidly ridding the company of that old bugaboo "poor resale value." Rambler sales were 30,000 last year and are expected to reach 80,000 this year, currently constitute 50 per cent of Nash Division production.

Abernethy conferred here in a factory-level divisional meeting with key personnel and, in another meeting, with key dealerships of the St. Louis zone on merchandising for the last half of this year.

MISSOURI GRANITE

It Is a Rich Red Stone More Than 600,000,000 Years Old

By CHARLES MENEES of the PICTURES Staff

THIS GIANT EXCAVATION is Missouri's only granite quarry, the lone survivor of an industry that once flourished in the eastern Ozark highlands. Here is exposed the oldest crystalline rock in the Mississippi River basin, including the state's only granites. Their indefinite age is between 600,000,000 and 1,200,000,000 years.

Missouri's first granite quarry was opened in 1869. Years later the Iron and St. Francois mountains were dotted with small quarries or "motions," as they were called. A principal product of the region was granite paving blocks for St. Louis and other cities. Today Missouri ranks about fifteenth among granite-producing states. Its granite, used in constructing many of the nation's leading buildings as well as for monuments and tombstones, is known as "Missouri Red" because of its rich color. The warm red comes from its high content of the mineral feldspar.

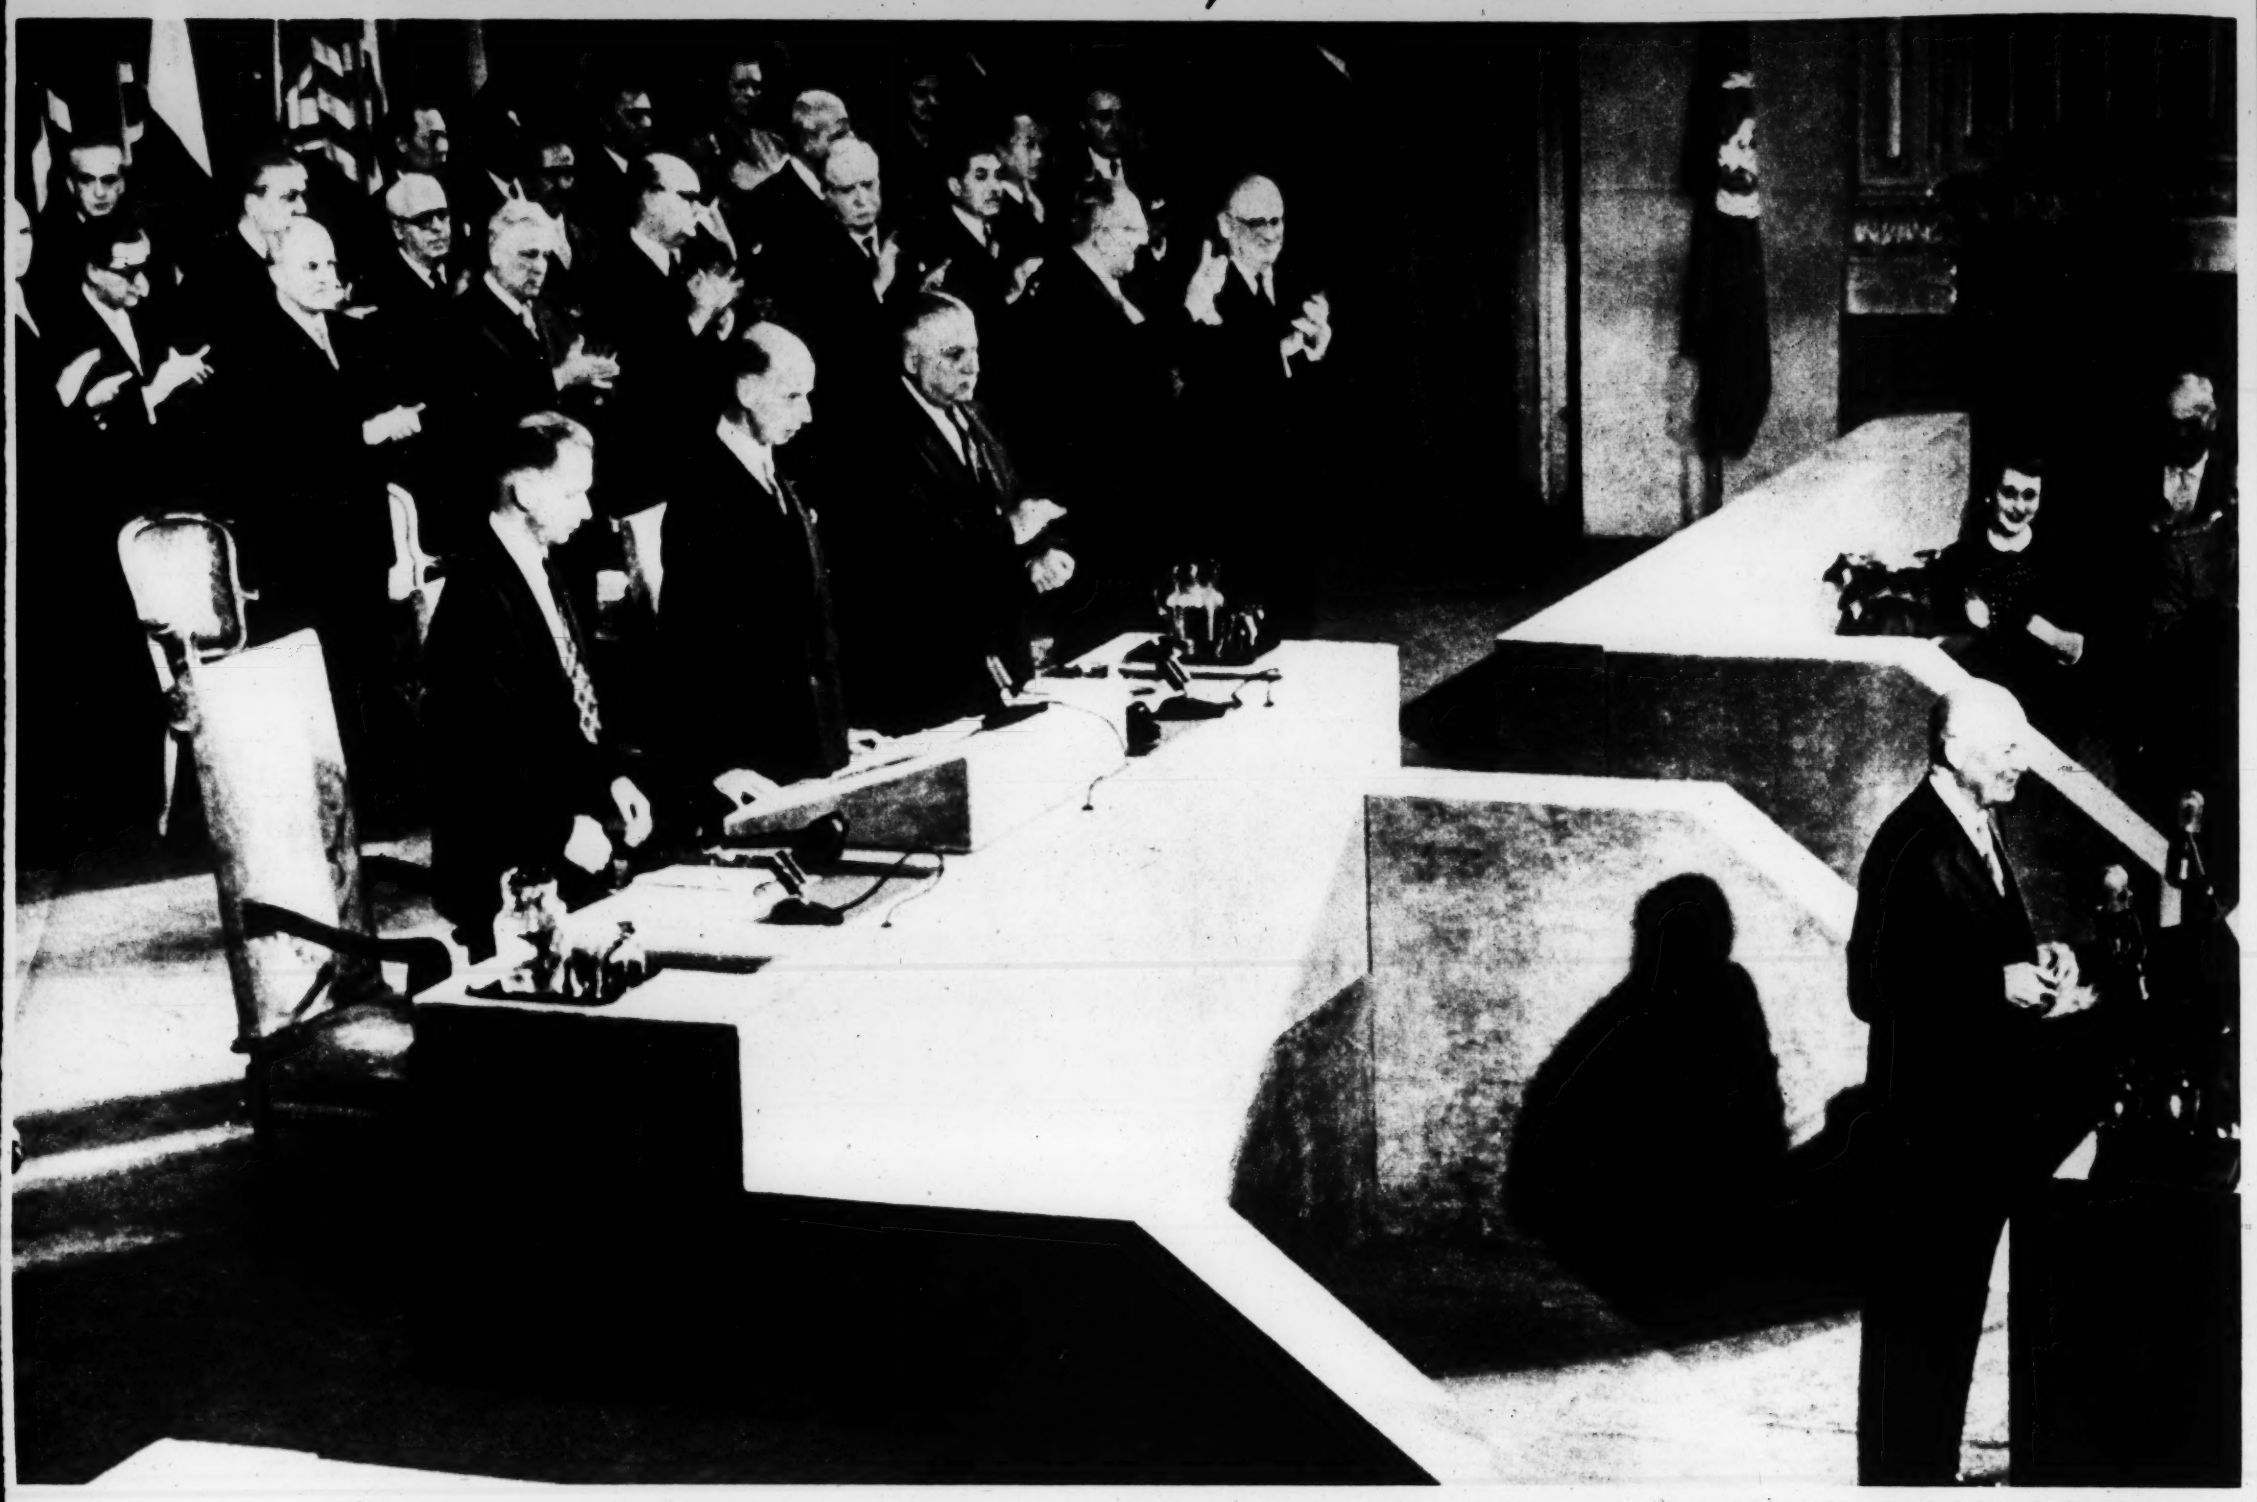

This view of Heyward quarry is across its 700-foot width, and down into its 200-foot depth. At right center workmen use pneumatic drills as the first step in loosening a big slab of granite. When finally broken away the big stone will be pulled out by crane (partly visible at left). Lying on quarry floor (just above pulley on crane cable) is one of the granite slabs the quarry has been supplying for the refacing of New York's City Hall. Last year the quarry mined nearly 3000 tons of the stone.

Heyward quarry is a quarter-mile west of the one-industry town of Graniteville, on Route 21, about 95 miles south of St. Louis. On the property are the famous Elephant Rocks, residual granite boulders freakishly arranged by nature on top of the ground.

Around the World, the Talk Is of Peace

World diplomacy last week was concentrated largely on a single, but crucially important issue—how to ease the East-West tensions that threaten the world's peace. The issue was being furthered in the major world capitals. It was dramatically symbolized in the tenth anniversary meeting of the United Nations in San Francisco. In the above photo President Eisenhower, formally launching the U.N. session, pledges that the United States will "work with all others . . . so that peaceful and reasonable negotiations may replace the clash of the battlefield." Immediately behind the President are, from left, Dag Hammarskjold, U.N. Secretary General; Eelco van Kleffens, president of the commemorative session, and Andrew Cordier, U.N. Executive Secretary. Mr. Eisenhower was cautious in referring to the proposed Big Four Geneva conference next month, but expressed hope that through such meetings and in the U.N. "the vast armaments that . . . terrify the world with their devastating potentiality and tax unbearably the creative energies of men" can in time be made unnecessary.

At the U.N. Anniversary, the West Is Hopeful, Cautious

Declaring that "recently there has been a lifting of the cloud" in the tensions between East and West, British Foreign Secretary Harold Macmillan appeals to the members of the U.N. to rededicate themselves to the peaceful purposes and ideals of the organization. Like Mr. Eisenhower, Macmillan was cautious about the possible results of the Geneva conference. He was the first of the Big Four foreign ministers to address the gathering in the San Francisco Opera House.

Molotov Calls for Deeds

Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov tells the 60 United Nations that the U.N. "can and should play an outstanding part in the efforts to cement peace." He asserted that the great powers should pass from words to deeds, and said that "it depends largely on the Soviet Union and the United States to consolidate peace and security." Molotov also called for the seating of Red China in the United Nations, offered a list of prerequisites for a general reduction of armaments and the prohibition of atomic weapons. In off-stage diplomatic activities of the session, Molotov and other Big Four ministers met to discuss plans for the Geneva "summit" talks and to seek agreement on proposals by the participating powers.

Traveling Menon Is India's Peace Salesman

Huddle in a Prelude to Geneva

Asia's Increasingly Important Role

Appearing before a sports rally in Moscow at which they urged efforts toward peaceful co-existence, Premier Nikolai Bulganin (left) of the Soviet Union and India's Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru accept the cheers of the crowd. Nehru last Thursday completed a two-week state visit to Russia. In his talk at the sports rally, he said that "whatever forms socialism or democracy may assume, it must respect the rights of others." Bulganin told the crowd, reported as 100,000 persons, that Russia would go to the Geneva conference to strive for "the lessening of international tension and the consolidation of confidence between states."

Premier Chou En-lai of Communist China and Nehru at Bandung, Indonesia, last April, during history's first international Afro-Asian conference. Participants were 29 nations, including 16 U.N. members, which had long been overshadowed by the West. Out of the conference came a bid by Chou for negotiations between Red China and the United States over the Formosa Strait issue. One of the meeting's sponsors was Nehru, who has taken a neutral role in the East-West conflict. At the meeting Nehru appealed to the conferees for neutrality in the cold war and for co-existence. Bandung was considered as emphasizing the East's increasing diplomatic role in world politics.

Passengers were 40 volunteers and their families from the Civil Aeronautics Authority office in Washington, which cooperated. Here the passengers abandon airplane hull, kept afloat by oil drums, and board one of several types of inflatable life rafts which were used.*

One of the life rafts ties up to a Coast Guard rescue boat, while another awaits its turn to be "rescued." A newly designed inflatable chute was given its first water test in the experiment. Some volunteers got unscheduled ducklings as they clambered and slid from plane into rafts. The volunteers included a grandmother and a boy 14.

A woman is helped over the side of a rescue boat as it takes aboard "survivors." During the tests, conducted in 25 feet of water, a speeding PT boat deliberately churned up surrounding waters to give a realistic touch. Observers termed the tests worthwhile.

THE UNIQUE IN FABRICS

This svelte evening gown and chic cocktail dress might be considered the upper crust cousins of the lowly potato sack. Both are made of burlap, as is the matching evening coat draped over chair (right). They were displayed at the Pakistan Embassy in Washington; Pakistan produces 75 per cent of the world's supply of jute, from which burlap is made.
United Press Photos except as noted

A Paris couturier combined shiny black horsehair with black chantilly lace to produce this unusual evening coat. The horsehair provides body and also gives the garment an iridescent sheen. Coat is worn over a black tulle cocktail dress.

MARRIAGE MARKET

As part of Marriage day celebration in the village of Ecaussines, Belgium, single girls ride through a street in an open carriage to advertise they are marriage-minded. Custom of village holding open house for bachelors originated about 50 years ago when the potential spinsters of that day realized the single men were drifting off to larger towns and cities. Since then on the annual Marriage day festival, Ecaussines has invited eligible young men from all Europe to look over the village's eligible girls.

AIRPORT PRAYER

In a secluded corner of the Rhine-Main airport at Frankfurt, Germany, a devout Moslem kneels and bows towards the East in prayer. He has removed his shoes, as required by his faith. About to emplane for Tunisia, the Moslem performed his evening devotions away from the airport crowd, out of sight even of the diners just inside the restaurant in background.

END OF THE CHASE

Standing near the sprawled body of an armed robber, Motorcycle Patrolman Aurelio DeFilippi of New York emphasizes his story with gestures as he describes his gun battle with the robber, John J. Antonioli. His listeners are New York detectives. Antonioli, 26 years old, held up a Broadway letter service firm and made off with $4000. He wounded two men, one carrying a screw driver and one unarmed, who pursued him. Antonioli engaged DeFilippi in a running gun fight, was killed by the officer after dodging behind a parked car. A woman in a diner across the street was injured by a stray bullet from the holdup man's gun.

NOT IN THE SCRIPT

Horses flounder in a stream in an unscheduled bit of action during the filming of an outdoor sequence for a television adventure series. The actor-driver remains dry while awaiting rescue by members of the location crew.

RETRIEVER CLIP

Retriever clip of poodle named Jon Jacque features fluffy pantaloons on legs, top-knot and ear tassels. This style also is called a lamb or kennel cut.

PONJOLI CLIP

This poodle, named Pichelli, sports a ponjoli trim, consisting of top-knot, tear-drop ears, pompons on legs and tail, puff-balls on body.

SHOW CLIP

Show clip gives Mr. Mustache a lion mane, clean face, bracelet on front legs, barrette in hair.

DUTCH CLIP

POODLE BEAUTY PARLOR

Treatments Ranging From Color Touch-Ups to Pedicures Are Provided at New St. Louis Salon

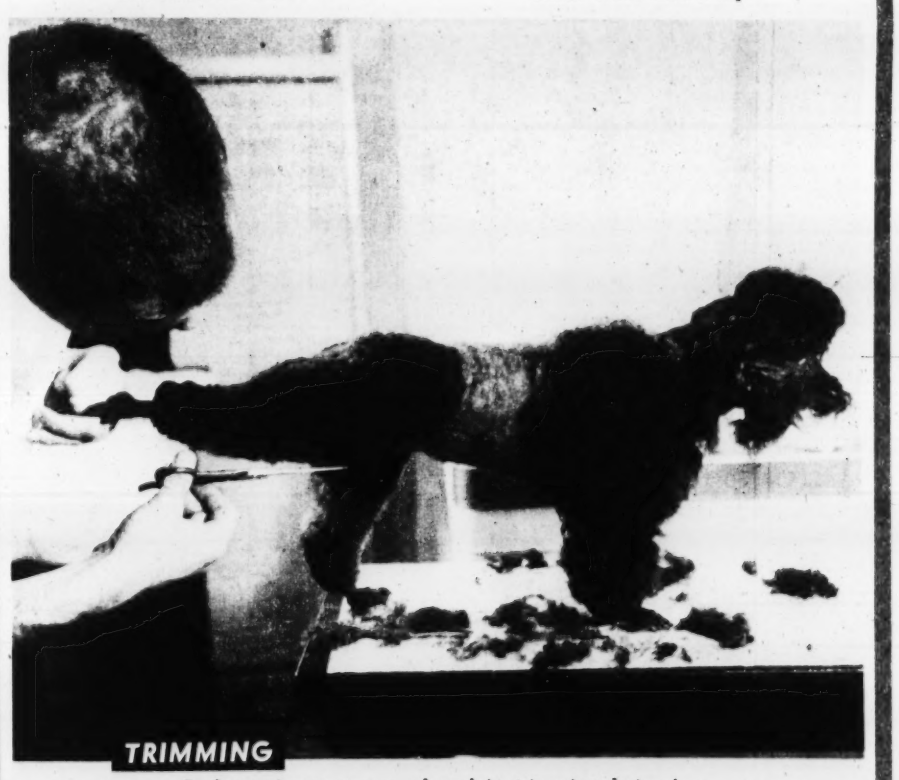

COMBING

With rear elevated, Boo-Boo is combed by Mr. Charles as first step in getting the works at The Poodle Palace.

SHEARING

Giving Boo-Boo a Dutch clip, Mr. Bill uses electric shears to trim hair from back, sides and belly.

TRIMMING

Barber scissors are employed in trimming hair of poodle's pantaloons to exact one-inch length. Hardy, intelligent dogs, poodles are not simply the house pets they sometimes are made to appear. They can be trained to become fine retrievers.

SHAMPOO

Looking half-drowned, Boo-Boo submits to a shampoo; elsewhere than in the doggy beauty salon the ablution might be called a bath.

DRYER

After bath poodle spends 15 minutes in drying cage. Dogs tolerate other parts of beauty treatment but hate dryer.

ORNAMENTS

Looking every inch the well-groomed poodle, Beau is decked out in rhinestone-studded collar and matching hair bow to accompany his owner to a party.

THE NEWEST and doggiest beauty salon in town opened recently in Hotel Chase. It is the first in St. Louis that caters exclusively to well-bred canines, particularly poodles. There fancy pooches with names to match can luxuriate in the ministrations of two canine cosmeticians, Bill Robbins and his brother Charles.

While a woman visits her own hair dresser, shops, plays bridge or swims, she can leave her pet at The Poodle Palace to be combed, coifed or cared for. Mr. Bill and Mr. Charles, as they are known professionally, provide baby-sitter service for only $1, but their rates for cosmetic treatments are higher.

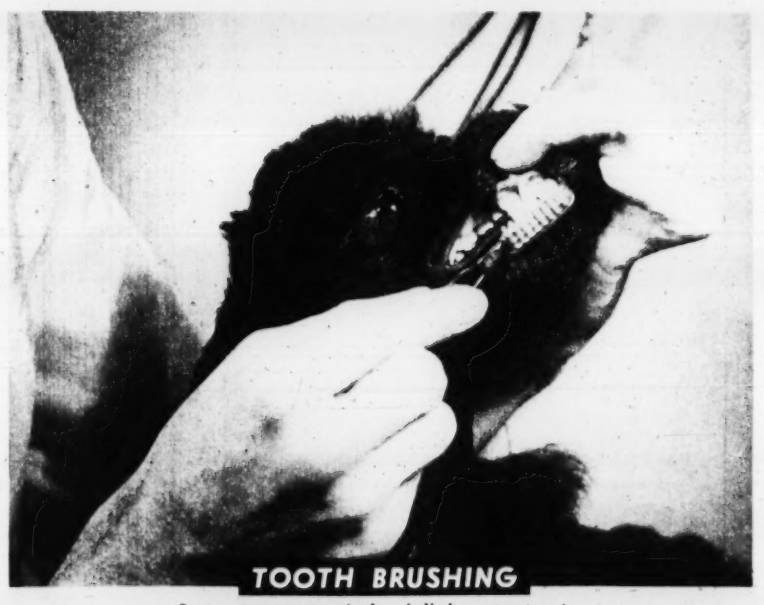

The full treatment — clip, shampoo, comb-out, pedicure and touch-up — requires three hours, and the tab varies according to the size of the poodle: $8.50 for a toy or miniature poodle, $9.50 for a moyen, $11.50 for a standard. An appointment is necessary.

Mr. Bill administers the three standard poodle clips, examples of which are shown at the top of this page, along with his own adaptation, the ponjoli. Manager of the swanky shop, he has been a tonsorial artist for dogs for eight years. As a practitioner among pampered poodles, he no longer is surprised at some of the instructions he receives. The other day he was called on to dye a dog blue to match the upholstery of its owner's sports car.

Photos by SAM CALDWELL of the PICTURES Staff

TOOTH BRUSHING

PERFUME

LACQUER

Silver lacquer is applied to Trudi's nails as finishing touch of pedicure ($1.50), which is essentially a filing job.

SILVER TINT

Pichelli's top-knot is tinted silver to heighten bizarre effect of his ponjoli trim, created by Mr. Bill.

TRAILER HOUSEBOAT

Briton's Vacation Home Slides Off Its Land-Going Chassis To Become a Water Craft Moved by Outboard Motor

Alan Eckford, boat designer of Broxbourne, England, maneuvers his automobile house trailer toward a river bank for demonstration of the trailer's other use—as a houseboat. He talks to a prospective passenger.

As the trailer-houseboat moves through the water, a passenger sun bathes on the versatile craft's reinforced roof. Sailboater at right pauses to study the trailer now transformed into blunt-nosed cabin cruiser. Eckford's boat is powered by an outboard motor, which is kicking up a wake behind the stern of the craft.

United Press Photos

The trailer is launched by sliding it off its carriage and into the water. Two men at right control wire cable fastened to the boat, which can be turned into a water craft in a matter of minutes. The amphibious trailer is made of laminated marine wood. Eckford built it at a cost of $1350, uses it for vacationing with his family.

Inside the trailer-boat a passenger relaxes on one of the seat-bunks, which have locker space underneath. The craft can sleep four persons comfortably. Its fittings include a built-in kitchen, toilet and a gas unit for cooking and lighting.

MAYFLY SCOURGE

Hordes of the Fragile, Short-Lived Insects Make Their Annual Descent on Alton

Hordes of dead Mayflies litter a downtown sidewalk in Alton last week during the annual appearance of the short-lived insects in the Mississippi River city. Attracted by street lights and electric signs, enormous numbers of the curious creatures fly a few blocks from their river breeding ground into the downtown area. There they end their brief adult lives swarming in the glow of the lights. After hatching from its egg, the nymph or immature Mayfly lives in the water for a period from a few weeks to several months, depending on the species, before maturing into an adult. On reaching adulthood, it immediately mates, then dies within a few days; in some species, adults live only a few hours. Although called Mayflies, the fragile, harmless insects usually appear in greatest numbers in June in the Alton area.

Mayflies in dense numbers rise from the Mississippi north of Alton. Settling on the first object they encounter, they weigh down shrubs, blanket trees, coat sides of buildings. Their brown bodies are about an inch long; hair-like tail filaments are two to three inches long.

Side of moving van parked near river is plastered with live Mayflies. This side of the vehicle was nearest the river; opposite side was free of the insects. Most mouth parts of the adult Mayfly are undeveloped as the insect does not eat during its brief adult life. During severe Mayfly infestations in some areas, snowplows have been used to shovel heaps of dead insects from bridges and streets.

FESTIVAL TIME, EUROPE

On one of the more impressive floats of the "Grand Medieval Parade" at St. Denis, France, Julius Caesar rides triumphantly in a chariot drawn by a pair of roaring lions. Two centurions form the rear guard. The smiling conqueror, the lions and the Roman army captains were made of papier-mache. Girls riding at front of the float represent slave girls acquired by Caesar during an invasion of Gaul.

Spectators line the Via Livia of Grenzano, Italy, as workers put finishing touches on flower petal designs that blanket the cobblestone pavement. The occasion was Grenzano's "Infiorata," a flower festival held annually since 1774 in observance of the religious feast of Corpus Domini. Below, members of a boys' club arrange petals for one of the mosaic designs. Eight tons of petals were used to blanket the 400-yard-long path of color leading to the church at far end of street. During the ceremony, which is held under lights, members of the Corpus Domini procession and citizenry solemnly walk on the petal-blanketed street.

New EXTRASOFT rubber heel —look at the difference

Your feet stay comfortable even if you walk miles. It's just like walking on air.

THIS new Extrasoft B. F. Goodrich heel cushions your step, leaves you fresher at the end of a day. It's perfect for children who run and jump on hard sidewalks and playgrounds.

No other heel like it. Only B. F. Goodrich makes the Extrasoft heel. Ask for it by name. Your shoe repairman has it. Both the box and heel are plainly marked B. F. Goodrich Extrasoft.

As the picture shows, the Extrasoft heels act just like shock absorbers. It's hard to believe till you try them, but they feel much different, feel twice as comfortable—and you'll notice it the first steps you take!

Get heels often. While this new heel wears longer than any other kind of rubber heel (twice as long as some) you get full advantage of the softness only when the heel is full thickness. So don't wait for the heels to show a lot of wear. You've already had bonus wear even if the heel is worn down only a 16th of an inch. You can afford to keep your heels at full thickness and get the advantage of full comfort. See your repairman often!

Price at most repair shops is $1.25 attached, for men's, and 85 cents for women's and children's shoes.

Look for the new Extrasoft heel when you buy new shoes. And why not look today to see how many shoes in the family need new heels? Chances are most of them do. Put them out so they'll remind you to see your shoe repairman tomorrow. Start now to get the extra comfort this new heel can bring you. Extrasoft, T. M., The B. F. Goodrich Co.

Raid hunts them down like radar! Sweeps bugs from the air. Attacks bugs as they crawl . . . and kills them dead!

Saves you buying several single-purpose insecticides!

Why buy one kind of insecticide to use inside your house—others to use outside in your garden? Why waste your time and money trying many different kinds? Raid's revolutionary new formula protects both house and garden!

And Raid will not harm plants. Any other household spray will kill plants. But Raid's new combination formula kills only the pests!

Raid's remarkable formula is so effective that a little goes a long way—so use it sparingly. Once you've used Raid in your house and garden, you'll never buy anything else. For you've never had such complete protection from a single insecticide before. Get Raid today!

Hindu Dal, or Split Peas, With Shrimp

1. Dr. Ghosh measures the yellow split peas before sauteing them briskly for five minutes in melted butter flavored with turmeric. Hot water is added and peas cooked slowly.

2. Salt and turmeric are sprinkled over shrimp. The onion is sauteed in butter, and mixed with shrimp and cooked in a pan until free of moisture.

3. Shrimp are pushed to one side of pan and curry powder stirred into the butter, which is then mixed with the shrimp. After five more minutes of cooking the dal and shrimp are combined and simmered.

By MERNA LAZIER

MANY HINDU DISHES ARE, by Western standards, well seasoned. And to many people they are not too well known, and therefore quite a culinary treat. Dal, made with yellow split peas, and shrimp are a delicious, rich dish from India prepared by Dr. Hemprova Ghosh of Calcutta, India, for guests of the Vedanta Society of St. Louis. Dr. Ghosh is a student of surgical pathology at the Washington University Medical School.

Dal is the Hindu name for a legume stew. Dr. Ghosh begins by measuring peas, coating them with melted butter flavored with turmeric. Hot water is added and peas are cooked slowly, with frequent stirring, for two hours.

Meanwhile, cleaned and veined shrimp are salted and flavored with turmeric, then added to onion which, chopped fine, has been sauteed in butter for about five minutes. Mixture is cooked until moisture is gone. Curry powder is stirred into the remaining butter and the blend is mixed with the shrimp. Shrimp are again cooked for five minutes, dal is added, a small amount at first, and cooking is continued until peas become mushy and soft. Other spices are heated in butter to brown and are tossed through the dal and shrimp just before serving over hot rice cooked until dry. Butter added to the water in which rice is cooked helps keep grains separated.

Ingredients: For dal—one-half pound yellow split peas, two to three tablespoons butter, one-eighth teaspoon turmeric, six to eight cups boiling water. For shrimp—one pound fresh shrimp, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon turmeric, four tablespoons butter, two medium onions, one and one-half teaspoons curry (more if desired). For spice mixture—two tablespoons butter, 10 to 15 peppercorns, six large bay leaves, one-eighth teaspoon comino seeds, one-fourth teaspoon ground black pepper. Amounts serve four to six persons.

4. Spices, except pepper, are browned in butter while the dal and shrimp are simmering. They are added to the dish just before serving, when the ground pepper is added.

5. The dal and shrimp are served on cooked rice, with tea as the usual beverage. Fruit may be offered as a side dish.

TIME TO ENJOY A lemonade lift!

"ONLY WAY I CAN GET SOME LEMONADE FOR MYSELF!"

Lemonade is getting popular, but even fathers can mix their own in seconds with Frozen Lemonade from sunny California. Just open a can . . . add water and ice . . . and drink with pleasure. Tart, tangy lemonade quenches thirst better than any other beverage . . . yet costs only 3¢ a glass made with Frozen Lemonade from sunny California.

"LOVE THAT LEMONADE LIFT"

For lemonade picks you up . . . and never lets you down! Its rich Vitamin C helps you look better and feel better . . . accents natural glow. Enjoy a lemonade lift every day. Keep a pitcherful in your refrigerator and let your youngsters help themselves. The finest lemons that grow are used in Frozen Lemonade packed in sunny California. So always choose a brand with CALIFORNIA on the can. You can taste the difference!

"NOTHING HITS THE SPOT LIKE LEMONADE!"

Hot? Thirsty? Cool off with a tall tinkling glass of lemonade. Guests prefer lemonade because it says their hostess cares enough for them to do a little extra. Yet Frozen Lemonade is so easy to mix, it's no work at all. For variety, try making it with sparkling water or ginger ale. Frozen Lemonade is the world's best mixer, too. Use it in all your punches and mixed drinks.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAROLD R FOSTER

Our Story: PRINCE VALIANT'S TWO SHIPS ROW AWAY FROM KIEV AND, FOR SEVERAL DAYS, IT IS LIKE A HOLIDAY. SIR GAWAIN AND HIS TROOPS RIDE EASILY ALONG THE SHORE AND THE OTHER WARRIORS SIT IN THE SHADE OF THE GREAT SAILS WHILE THEIR PRISONERS TOIL AT THE OARS.

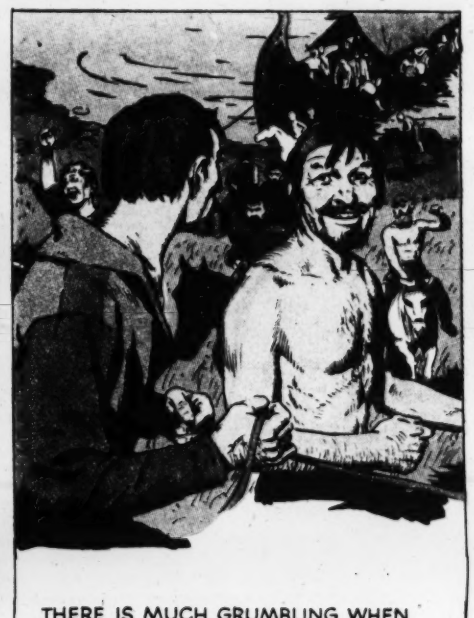

BUT THE PATZINAKS ARE HORSEMEN, UNACCUSTOMED TO THIS KIND OF LABOR, AND MANY BREAK DOWN UNDER THE STRAIN.

"OUR PROGRESS IS TOO SLOW AND WE ARE RUNNING OUT OF FOOD," WARNS THORKEL THE CAPTAIN. "ABOVE KIEV THERE ARE BUT FEW SETTLEMENTS WHERE SUPPLIES CAN BE OBTAINED."

THEN GAWAIN RUNS INTO TROUBLE. ENDLESS MARSHES AND TANGLED FORESTS MAKE FURTHER PROGRESS ALMOST IMPOSSIBLE.

THERE IS MUCH GRUMBLING WHEN VAL SETS THE CAPTIVES ASHORE AND GIVES THEM THE HORSES TO FIND THEIR WAY BACK TO THEIR HOMELAND.

UNHORSED AND BEATEN to the ground, the Sac chieftain faces the loss of his followers. So, to prove his bravery and daring, he spits upon his antagonist!

Lance flushes with anger and buckles the Indian with a ramrod blow to the paunch, sends him reeling with a crashing right to the face!

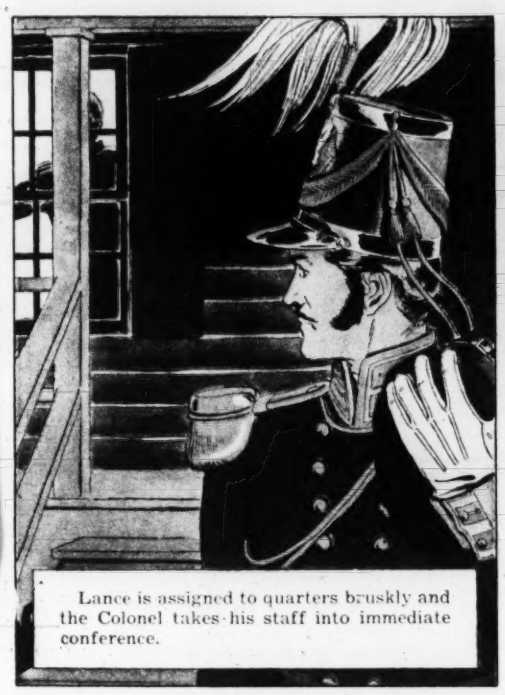

This is too much! The Indians jump to retrieve their muskets and Lance whips out his sabre again.

Colonel Dodge seizes the situation. "THAT'S ENOUGH!" he roars. "GET ON YOUR HORSES AND CLEAR OUT OF HERE!" The words are plain enough. The bluff works.

Colonel Dodge does not doubt that the renegades will retaliate for the shame of this day.

When at last a rescue column arrives from the fort, too late to be of any use, Dodge rants and raves and all but musters the outfit out of service. He rides the trip back in deep, brooding silence.

Lance is assigned to quarters bruskly and the Colonel takes his staff into immediate conference.

Late that night an orderly finds Lance still awake and instructs him to report to the C.O. in field dress.

6-26-55

He enters a room tense with silence. When at length the Colonel speaks, his voice is strained and uneven.

"Lieutenant St. Lorne, your hasty and unauthorized action of this afternoon has placed this territory in danger of Indian uprising! . . ."

The breath chokes in Lance's throat.

We Like to See for Ourselves

by SAL. A. COSTANZO

NORTH BALDWIN, N. Y.

My wife Louise and I have long felt that the best way of learning about anything is by personal observation and investigation. With that in mind, we started out four years ago, with our children, on the first of what we now call our "family field trips."

Our initial excursion was an early-morning visit to New York's teeming Fulton Fish Market. It proved to be such a fascinating experience for all of us that we then and there decided to make such trips a regular practice.

Since then we have undertaken more than 20 such expeditions. Almost invariably, they have provided as much fun and interest for my wife and me as for our three youngsters—Louis, now 10; Madeline, 9, and Michael, 6.

We have toured the giant liners United States and Queen Mary at their North River piers, and admired the wonders of assembly-line operations at an automobile plant in Edgewater, N. J., and a commercial bakery in Brooklyn. We have watched parades of chocolate bars being wrapped in Hershey, Pa., and soft drinks being bottled at Jericho, N. Y. We've seen huge diesel locomotives disassembled, miles of spaghetti chopped into packageable lengths, thousands of chickens automatically processed for soups, a myriad of tin cans being shaped and stamped—and even electrifying atomic-age exhibits.

The trips have been, in the main, amazingly inexpensive. Most of them have necessitated no more than the writing of a letter of inquiry. The only help has been the fact that I work for the Government as an Internal Revenue agent and thus have been able to use part of my annual vacation leave on weekdays, when industrial plants are in operation.

Volumes of Mementos

To help our children remember our happy experiences together, we have kept a complete set of scrapbooks containing mementos of the places we've visited—post cards, samples and brochures—along with the dates and other personal notations. Needless to say, there isn't a member of the family who doesn't enjoy leafing through them periodically.

We currently have invitations to inspect business-machine and glass plants in upper New York state. We hope to be able to take them in on a vacation trip we are planning for this summer. Future targets run the gamut from a steel-rolling mill in Gary, Ind., to a Texas ranch. Such visits, we all agree, should keep our family together, happy and stimulated, for years. ■

PREVENTING NEEDLESS DEATH

● In Chicago's up-to-date Wesley Memorial Hospital, nurses (r.) "broadcast" to new mothers and medical students the proper ways to care for a newborn child. This is only one of many services offered by good hospital pediatric departments. Unfortunately, some U. S. hospitals still haven't caught on to such services. One result: unnecessary deaths among infants less than a week old. To learn what doctors are doing about this, turn to page 8.

TV Mass for Shut-ins

Boston brings the church to the bedridden for the first time

RECITING rosary, John Thomas and grandson "attend" shut-ins' Mass.

BOSTON, MASS.

Unable to leave their homes because of illness, thousands of Catholics here now "attend" Mass merely by flicking a television dial. Each Sunday at 9:15, the first Mass in history specifically for shut-ins is broadcast over a Boston TV station.

A longtime dream of Archbishop Richard J. Cushing, the shut-ins' Mass originates from a special television chapel in the archdiocese's $100,000 Television Center. A small congregation—usually guests of the Archbishop—is sometimes on hand, but often the nine-man crew is the only "studio audience."

A feature of the broadcast is a running explanation of the Mass by the Rev. Walter L. Flaherty, archdiocesan director of radio and television. Father Flaherty often interviews visiting church dignitaries after the service ends. (Recent visitors: the Bishops of Kerry, Ireland, the West Indies and Wales.) For this reason, many Catholics attend early Mass at church, then come home and watch the televised Mass.

The response to the shut-ins' Mass has been so overwhelming that Father Flaherty now plans to "go network" by filming the Mass, furnishing it to dioceses that have no TV facilities of their own. The Center already has made several experimental films with recently purchased equipment. Also planned are a series of one-minute spots—"commercials," Father Flaherty calls them—offering "A Thought for the Day." But the priest's great ambition is to broadcast a pontifical Mass in color. "That," he says, "should be a beautiful production." ■ ## to give you that new young, natural, glowing look that's so typical of today's lovely stars like ANN BLYTH

Sealed in Gold Foil A large part of your good looks and personality lies in your complexion, just as it does with Ann Blyth. She's enthusiastic about the way new Lux beauty soap care keeps her skin radiant—and new Lux can do as much for you. Miss Blyth writes: "I've been 'previewing' new Lux for months. And believe me, now that Lux is in gold foil, it's even more wonderful than before!" She probably uses more make-up in one movie than you do in a year, but Lux care keeps her complexion beautifully fresh and glowing.

Sealed in Gold Foil You'll see the dazzling whiteness of new Lux—never the slightest discoloration! You'll smell the difference—that famous Lux fragrance is now as carefully protected as French perfume. We guarantee you'll love the way your skin looks when you use Lux regularly—or get back what you paid for it. Lux is the only soap sealed in gold foil to bring you that same fresh "golden glow" complexion that's typical of today's most popular Hollywood stars.

Sealed in Gold Foil A fabulous improvement over soaps wrapped in ordinary paper—and you can get new Lux now in stores everywhere. Give your valuable complexion the beauty care used by 9 out of 10 Hollywood stars—and more beautiful women all over the world than any other.

Black and Blue

. . . and cool all over

Every summer, women ask, "How can I keep cool and look smart at the same time?" One answer is: Begin with color. Wear the kind of color that puts you and everyone looking at you in a cool frame of mind. Add a large straw hat.

Many American designers are using a great deal of black-and-blue in their summer collections just for this cool dark look. Blues range from chill sky tones and the purpled shades of larkspur and delphinium to the depths of sapphire. The shadowy blacks, of course, make every blue seem bluer. Together, these colors appear in many new prints —spatter dots, marbleized effects, stripes, tone-on-tone florals, crisp plaids. They are used most effectively on the thinnest of cottons. Most designers keep the dresses simple, letting color and texture be the news.

Pictured here is one of the year's most charming dresses in black-and-blue. Actually, this blue is turquoise, in a beautiful Galey & Lord plaid. The cotton is one of their finest—a chiffon weight. It is used in a great swirl of a skirt and a smoothly curved bodice. The look is covered-up, with softly puffed little-girl sleeves – touched off with black-velvet-ribbon belting and licorice-black buttons. By McArthur Ltd.; about $18.

It's that DIAL feeling – you never worry about odor!

More than a feeling, it's a fact: with Dial Soap you never worry about perspiration odor. You see, normal perspiration has no odor until skin bacteria go to work on it. And ordinary soaps just can't get rid of bacteria effectively. But Dial Soap does. It removes up to 95% of these odor-causers, because Dial is the one leading soap with AT-7 (Hexachlorophene). There's nothing else as good for keeping odor away. Dial's AT-7 clings to your skin, so it protects you all day – and several days if need be. That's why folks who use Dial every day say they just don't feel as clean with any other soap. Dial stops odor before it starts.

Aren't you glad you use Dial Soap? (don't you wish everybody did!)

THE BABIES WHO MIGHT HAVE DIED

SPECIAL EXAMINING ROOM at Chicago Wesley Memorial Hospital has many advantages. Doctors go into nursery only for emergencies. Note glass separating infants.

A PARADE MEDICAL REPORT / by ROBERT P. GOLDMAN and SID ROSS

A new, get-tough policy shows the U.S. that more infants can be saved in life's most critical week

THE BABY, A cherubic, 7-pound girl, was only two hours old when a nurse walked casually to her crib. Moments before, the infant had appeared to be the picture of health. But now the nurse saw a tiny body fighting a life-or-death struggle.

The baby was blue around the mouth; there was a slight retraction of her little chest; she was squirming as if in pain. The nurse knew instantly that this was one of the numberless crises of life soon after birth. The baby was choking. Unless the congestion in her throat were cleared out at once, she might die.

In seconds, nurse and doctor were working over the infant with an oxygen-suction apparatus. As soon as the mucus was removed from her throat, the child breathed normally once again. Fast medical teamwork had won out over death.

That is a typical occurrence, in a typical hospital anywhere in the U. S. In this case, a life was saved. But, as doctors themselves point out, the startling and shameful fact is that too often infants die almost before their lives begin because of neglect in inefficiently run hospital maternity sections. The U. S. death toll among infants less than a week old stands at more than 60,000—every year.

This whole subject long has been a medical hot potato. Recently it was made even hotter by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the Chicago Board of Health. Following an exhaustive study, Dr. Bundesen reported in The Journal of the American Medical Association that 60 per cent of first-week baby deaths in hospitals could be prevented by improved hospital care and coordinated medical teamwork.

Dr. Bundesen added: "This condition must be exposed to the cleansing light of universal knowledge because it maintains itself on public ignorance and indifference." In other words, needless newborn-baby deaths are not restricted to Chicago or any other community; they represent a challenge to you and your city's doctors and hospitals, no matter where you live.

Because of the explosive nature of the Bundesen report, PARADE has asked other doctors how they feel about it. Some label it "pure sensationalism." Others say it will prove "invaluable" to future patient care. Still others ran for cover and refused to comment.

Some Births Are 'Slowed Up'

One authority in the field not only backs Dr. Bundesen completely but does him one better. "Some hospitals are so short-staffed that no one watches a woman in labor for more than a few minutes," this doctor says. "And in the absence of a doctor, some hospital personnel still try, by one means or another, to 'slow up' births. If you don't think all that is dangerous, you're wrong."

Still another authority, Dr. Claude E. Heaton of New York City's widely respected French Hospital, declares, "I have no doubt that some hospitals fail to live up to accepted standards."

Obviously, then, Dr. Bundesen stirred up a hornet's nest. But the Chicago study produced the facts and figures to get him out unscathed. Not only does it point a finger at causes of preventable infant death; it also has given Chicago and the rest of the nation a "blueprint" for saving babies' lives. Thanks in part to a Bundesen innovation, the so-called "alerter system," the Chicago plan has sharply cut infant mortality in that city's hospitals in a period of only 18 months.

Self-critical hospital and medical groups throughout the U. S. add weight to the Chicago idea—that many deaths (excluding those caused by inherited defects) are unnecessary and can be prevented.

A Houston, Tex., hospital reports that an improved device to prevent suffocation accounted for a 41 per cent reduction of deaths of full-term babies within the first two days of life. The same device slashed the death rate among premature infants by 32.5 per cent.

The New York Academy of Medicine reports that its studies of infant mortality indicate that one-third of all deaths in the first month of life could be prevented.

Finally, while maternal deaths have decreased steadily and sharply over the years, baby deaths during the first week have not. In 1931, the rate was about 26 deaths per 1,000 births. Today it is about 17 per 1,000. This represents improvement, of course, but the Chicago findings make it obvious that there's room for a lot more improvement.

What Hospitals Do Wrong

Says Dr. Anthony J. J. Rourke, a past president of the American Hospital Association: "Let's face facts. I am sure we have the highest quality of hospital care on earth, but we also have a quality of care which I had thought went out with the leeches and the purges."

Dr. Bundesen and his staff found the latter quality in some of the many hospitals in their own city. These, they report, are the most frequent faulty practices which can endanger a newborn baby's life:

1) Allowing insufficiently trained, unsupervised interns and residents to deliver babies in complicated cases.

2) Giving excessive amounts of sedatives.

3) Excessive use of anesthetics in certain cases at the expense of the life of premature infants.

4) Unnecessarily performing Caesarean-section operations.

5) Failure to use proper resuscitation methods (to restore breathing) promptly in the delivery room.

6) Failure to provide adequate care for all infants in the nursery.

7) Failure to have facilities and personnel available at all times to perform blood transfusions.

8) Failure to have sick infants adequately examined when required.

9) Inadequate follow-up of sick infants.

10) Failure to put the newborn premature baby into a pre-warmed incubator and provide adequate care for him from that point on.

The Chicago report states flatly: "Essentially, faulty practices are all included in failure to provide what is currently accepted as the highest quality of obstetric and pediatric care . . . for all mothers and all infants at all times.

"Too often, there is a failure on the part of the chiefs of obstetric and pediatric staffs to study, review and evaluate the records immediately after the deaths occur. Such reviews are necessary . . . so that corrective measures may be instituted."

So, proceeding on the reasonable assumption that the causes of death must be known before doctors can get at those causes, the Chicago investigators started with a review of hospital records. They found that often such records were "incomplete, misleading, inaccurate and vague."

From there, Dr. Bundesen evolved a program for reducing death in the first week. This period—above all, the first day—is the most critical in the entire life span. For it is then that the infant takes his first breath, experiences a change in temperature and carries on many of the body functions formerly performed by his mother. And Dr. John L. Reichert, chief of the Pediatric Service at Wesley Memorial Hospital (one of the best maternity hospitals in Chicago, which has a long record of successful effort to improve its care of mothers and infants), points out that the dangers are compounded by birth itself, "a rugged experience" which holds many possibilities of injury and even death.

PORTABLE INCUBATORS are used at Wesley Memorial to take newborn premature babies to nursery.

Recognizing that the first week is often the "showdown" period vital to the infant's survival, the Chicago plan imposes tough but necessary standards for hospital maternity divisions. These include:

Immediate, constant care for premature babies; assurance that complicated deliveries will be carried out by qualified doctors; prompt response by attending physicians when summoned to the hospital; adequate nurse service, 24 hours a day; complete records, available at all times; trained anesthesiologist available at all times; trained personnel in the delivery room, skilled in proper resuscitation.

In addition, the plan urges "eliminating" from hospital staffs any physicians who persist in violating rules and regulations which in turn might lead to needless death.

The alerter system: diplomacy, tact and flashing lights to help save lives

Perhaps the most unusual aspect of the Chicago plan for saving newborn babies is the "alerter system," which Dr. Bundesen calls a "completely new concept in approaching the problem."

To the naked eye, the alerter is a network of flashing, many-colored lights, charts, graphs and panels at the Board of Health offices. Actually, there's more to it than meets the eye.

The complete system includes teams of specialists who investigate, evaluate and report on infant deaths that occur within a week of birth. Their findings are registered, graphically, on the various panels of the alerter.

From this information, the Board of Health can tell immediately, on a day-by-day basis, which hospitals had infant deaths with "preventable factors." Improvements in hospital services also show up on the alerter—as do any "relapses" into faulty practices.

In the case of the latter, the Board alerts the individual hospital administrator and the chiefs of staff. It becomes their duty to make sure that regulations are adhered to "so the hospital maternity division will continue to function." This is a gentle threat to the hospital. As Dr. Bundesen points out, it takes tact and diplomacy to assure cooperation of each hospital staff. (Incidentally, each hospital has its own individualized version of the alerter. Its charts and panels tell only the story of its own successes and failures.)

In the 18 months of alerter operation, many Chicago hospitals have hung up enviable records in reducing early infant deaths. The best was made by a hospital which once lost more babies in the first week—27.8 per 1,000 births—than any other licensed maternity hospital in the city. After the alerter system went into action, that hospital's rate dropped to 10.2 per 1,000, which is far below the national average.

Fewer Premature Deaths

In the same hospital, the first-week death rate among premature infants was cut 44 per cent. Meanwhile, a second hospital chalked up a 50 per cent drop in overall death rates, while a third recorded a whopping 63 per cent cut.

The alerter itself reflects Dr. Bundesen's flair for the dramatic. On the "master control" there are flashing red, blue and gold lights. A winking red light alongside a hospital's monthly "death-rate card" indicates that one or more infant deaths have taken place at the hospital—and that these deaths were related to known or suspected major preventable factors.

A flashing blue light next to a card indicates that the hospital, because of a bad record over a sustained period, has been named "hospital of the day." This means it has been singled out by the Board of Health for special conferences aimed at putting an end to faulty practices.

A flashing gold light means that a hospital, previously under surveillance, is doing an especially good job.

In addition to the lights, the alerter includes the "known needless death panel" and special panels relating to premature births. The "needless death" panel shows, among other things, which hospital staff physicians have developed "a habit pattern of faulty practices," and which hospitals have developed good programs on the preventive side.

OXYGEN-SUCTION unit is a new feature at Wesley Memorial Hospital. It clears baby's air passages when congestion threatens to cut off breathing.

On the surface the alerter looks a lot like a glorified gadget. But working in conjunction with the rest of the Chicago program, it gets results. And it points a practicable way to save infants in the most critical period of their lives.

Dr. Edward M. Dorr, member of Wesley Memorial Hospital's Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, sums up the Chicago plan like this:

"Dr. Bundesen's got proof for everything he says in his report. And it's pretty much the same all over the country. Let me tell you, unless you've got someone like Herman Bundesen to crack down on you, things might get slipshod. He may not crusade politely, but he does it very effectively."

If your city needs a Chicago plan, the time to get the ball rolling is now—before any more babies die needlessly. ■

Hollywood tongues wagged over the MacMurray-Haver elopement, but to no purpose. Look at . . .

FRED AND JUNE . . . a year later

by LLOYD SHEARER
PARADE WEST COAST CORRESPONDENT

HOLLYWOOD.

One year ago this Tuesday, June Haver and Fred MacMurray eloped. Fred was 45; June, 28. Their marriage, a civil, double-ring ceremony performed in Ojai, Calif., was one of the most publicized of the year. Both were well-known movie stars; and June, amid much fanfare, previously had renounced the life of a probationary Catholic nun in a Kansas convent to return to Hollywood.

Naturally the movieland gossips began asking the stock question: "How long will this one last?"

A year later, the answer seems to be: Indefinitely.

There are good reasons. June Haver has abandoned her movie career. And there is absolutely no trouble in the MacMurray household, not even the slight adjustment problems that go with most new marriages.

"I've never been happier," June told me recently. "My days of groping and searching are over. I'm a fulfilled married woman. This is what I've always wanted—a husband and some children and a house to take care of. [MacMurray has two adopted children: Susan, 15, and Robert, 11.] Compared to the kind of marriage Fred and I have, stardom doesn't hold a candle. Let some other girl become a big movie star. Frankly, I don't care if I never make another picture. I've had it."

Has she been offered any movie roles since becoming June Haver MacMurray?

"Quite a few," June says. "Right after the marriage I could have had a lead in Oklahoma! 'All it means,' I was told, 'is giving up your honeymoon. You can always get another honeymoon but you'll never get another Oklahoma!'

"Well, I just smiled at that one. Fred and I had our honeymoon at Jackson Hole, Wyoming, where he was on location for The Far Horizons.

"When we got back to Hollywood, I was offered one of the sister parts in My Sister Eileen. I said no. It was much more fun going on location with Fred. This time he did Woman's World.

"Every other week, it seems, we're being offered a 'Mr. and Mrs.' show on television. I won't hear of it, and neither will Fred. I've also received a lot of offers to play Las Vegas. Who's got time for that? I've got a husband and a household to take care of."

$135,000 Mansion

The household starts with a rambling, $135,000 mansion in Brentwood, originally constructed for singer Nelson Eddy. Although it boasts no swimming pool, it includes stables for six horses. Much of the latter space is filled with MacMurray's hunting and fishing equipment. Fred is slowly acquainting his petite blonde wife with the delights of nature.

The introduction began on their honeymoon when Fred had a day off from the cameras. "You pack a picnic lunch," he told June, "and we'll go up to Yellowstone for a little fishing."

At Yellowstone, Fred headed for a trout stream while June located a shady picnic site. There she set out her food, then rolled over on the grass for a short nap. Minutes later she felt a moist lip brushing her cheek.

"Ah, Fred," she murmured.

Another kiss, this time firmer and wetter. June opened her eyes—and found herself staring into a bear's.

"Fred!" she screamed. "A bear!" She sprinted down to the stream and into her husband's arms. The bear, having stuffed itself with chicken sandwiches, departed politely.

This experience, June avers, has not deterred her from becoming an outdoors-lover. Any time MacMurray wants her to accompany him, she stands ready.

Meanwhile, she manages to keep busy. "Just take a look at my schedule," she offers. "I get up at 6:00 or 6:30 and go to early Mass. I'm back in time to have breakfast with Fred. I pack his lunch—he likes to eat in his dressing room at the studio. Then I get Robert ready for school. (Sue is attending a ranch school in Arizona.)

"I plan the meals for the day, do the marketing, pick Robert up at school, maybe take him to a Boy Scout meeting. (He's so cute. He calls me 'Junie.') I send things off to Sue. I do some shopping and cleaning. Before I turn around, the day is gone, and Fred is home.

"These are things every housewife in America does. I know that. But to me they're new and strangely wonderful. They give me a feeling of belonging to one family. When I was single and acting in movies, I felt as if I belonged to the public, to no one special. Now, I want to belong only to Fred and his world."

The world of Fred MacMurray is a wealthy one. The tall, wavy-haired actor from Beaver Dam, Wis., has starred in more than 60 films since 1934. His current price: $100,000 a picture. In addition to a million dollars' worth of California and Mexico real estate, mostly hotels and apartment houses, he owns a 4,000-acre ranch near Healdsburg, Calif., with 350 Angus cattle which experts consider the finest pure-bred herd on the Pacific Coast.

Never one to throw his money around, MacMurray stays out of night clubs. Until 1953, when his first wife Lillian died, he was known in movie circles as "Mr. Homebody." Quiet and self-effacing—"Let's face it, I've been a very lucky guy"—he never has been touched by scandal. Until June snared him, he was considered by Hollywood's predatory females as "the best and biggest catch west of the Rockies."

"Fred is the kind of man," Barbara Stanwyck once told me, "who's a credit to the industry, the community and his wife." After a year as Mrs. MacMurray, June Haver obviously agrees with all of that. ■

Water-Skiing on Thin Air

A Florida daredevil becomes the first to do it—and live

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.

By hitching himself to a kite here, 25-year-old Johnny Cook recently did what nobody ever had done before: he went water-skiing on thin air and lived to tell about it. On this page you see his successful maiden "flight," supported by a kite 15′ tall and 7′ wide, made of airplane fabric stretched over an aluminum frame, Shouldering the kite, which was attached to a 200-foot towline, Johnny went skimming over the water behind a motorboat. At 35 mph, wind pressure lifted him out of the water. He soared to 125 feet and stayed at that giddy height for a full three minutes.

Then the boat slackened speed and Johnny came down to a perfect landing. Exhausted from the strain, he floundered helplessly in the water. He had just enough strength left to yell: "Get me out of here before I go under!" They did. ■

TAXIING: Johnny hangs on to kite and braces himself on skis as motorboat tow gets up speed.

TAKE-OFF: At about 35 mph, Johnny becomes air-borne as wind pressure starts kite upward.

FLIGHT: Here Johnny soars free at 125 feet. Stunt was first tried by a water-skier who lost his life when kite collapsed in midair.

LANDING: Johnny is shown just before being fished, exhausted, from water. Once, practicing, he hit so hard he broke three ribs.

HIS "ROYAL HIGHNESS" STEPS OUT A BIT!

STANDARDIZED "Draw Me Girl" looks like this in 1955 version. At right: student copies.

COULD YOU BE AN ARTIST?

Over a million Americans have drawn this one girl to find out

America's most popular art model is not—as you might think—a sleek, leggy flesh-and-blood beauty. She is the familiar, pert young lady above whose pretty face and the words "Draw Me" appearing in ads of an art correspondence school inspire 50,000 would-be artists a year to reach for pens, pencils or crayons.

Art Instruction, Inc., of Minneapolis, which has been using her as a practical talent test for 22 years, estimates that she has appeared in 100 different poses, in literally millions of newspaper, magazine and matchbook ads, and has been drawn by more than 1,000,000 individuals. Among the latter have been Catholic nuns, a member of the Boston Red Sox, the navigator of a transatlantic plane and a man who sent in her picture from a South Sea island.

The school's Director of Education, Walter Wilwerding, himself a leading painter of hunting scenes, winnows through the mailed-in drawings, decides which applicants seem to have talent, advises those who have none to save their money. "Over a period of years," he claims, "I can tell almost instantly which will make the grade."

At right are three versions of "Miss Draw Me" that have been received at the school—each typifying a broad segment of the nation's talent—along with Wilwerding's analysis of the would-be artist. PARADE readers who disagree with his judgment are free to try their own skill the same way. Those who can do better than the "Good" drawing (bottom) may have it within them to become as successful as the school's most famous alumnus—Ham Fisher, creator of "Joe Palooka." ■

POOR drawing by 16-year-old boy was rejected by school's talent judge Wilwerding. "The head is too square, the mouth too large and growing right up against the bottom of the nose," he says. "We told him he was more mechanical than artistic."

PASSING grade was given to drawing by 17-year-old girl. "The head has fairly good proportions," says Wilwerding, "but the nose and chin are just angles. It seems to have been sketched too quickly. With more training, she can succeed."

GOOD, despite poor proportions, was judgment on head by a teen-age girl. "This young lady sees one thing at a time," says Wilwerding. "The drawing shows timidity." The artist was accepted and developed into a student with a future.

Simple green or fancy chef salads—they all taste best with your fresh homemade dressing . . . so easy with Mazola® Oil.

"A Mazola homemade dressing beats 'em all for tempting fresh flavor...try it and see!"

says ARTHUR GODFREY

"No store-bought dressing can possibly have the fresh flavor, down-right goodness of homemade dressing . . . so easy with Mazola!"

ARTHUR GODFREY'S right! Nothing can match your own homemade salad dressing for flavor because it's truly fresh. You season it just the way you like it. Or, for a tossed green salad, maybe you'd like to do as Arthur does and make a little ceremony of dressing the salad at the table: just add Mazola oil and vinegar separately, a sprinkle of salt and pepper, and toss!

Yes, for the best-tasting salad dressings of all—make 'em with Mazola! This pure golden oil is made from corn . . . so it just naturally blends better with other salad ingredients, brings out fresh salad flavors. And you'll find dressings made with Mazola keep better, too . . . never get thick in your refrigerator . . . are always pourable.

Try our Easy-Mix French Dressing and see!

EASY-MIX FRENCH DRESSING—Takes less than 60 seconds. Perfect for all variations of green salads.

|---|---|
| 1 cup MAZOLA Salad Oil | 1½ teaspoons salt |
| ⅓ to ½ cup vinegar | ½ teaspoon paprika |
| 1 to 3 tablespoons sugar | ½ teaspoon dry mustard |
| 1 clove garlic (optional) | |

Measure all ingredients into a jar. Cover tightly and shake well. Chill several hours, then remove garlic. Shake thoroughly before serving. Makes 1¼ cups.

You can vary this dressing by adding blue cheese, catsup, Worcestershire sauce, as you wish.

Arthur says: "Foods fried in golden Mazola taste better. And when you fry right at the correct high temperature you'll keep calories down . . . all those 'extra' calories stay in the pan!"

Have you tried the new, easy Mazola No-Roll Pie Crust recipe? Rich, tender—no rolling. Make, shape, bake in the pan. Look for recipe on the Mazola label.

When will we have a policy on BRAINWASHING?

BRAINWASHED LOOK, product of Communist inquisition, marks Marine Col. Frank Schwable on his release from Korean prison.

by JACK ANDERSON and FRED BLUMENTHAL
PARADE WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENTS

LAST WEEK, PARADE described the harrowing effect of Communist brainwashing on Air Force Col. Andrew Evans, who broke under mental torture and signed a false confession of participation in germ warfare. Today, PARADE explores the urgent, still-unsolved problem of how to handle cases like that of Colonel Evans—now and in the future.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Out of the dark recesses of North Korea, two years ago, came a handful of haggard, vacant-eyed men—the Korean War's most awful victims. They had experienced more than physical capture; their minds, too, had been forced to surrender. They had been mentally and morally broken by a fiendish weapon: the new Communist torture technique called brainwashing.

Two years later those men still pose the greatest challenge to come out of the Korean War. Defense Undersec. Robert Anderson recognized this 14 months ago when he declared: "I know of no other problem which is more deserving of the highest order of study and consideration . . . [It affects] not only every uniformed man and woman, but every American family whose sons or daughters face military service."

Yet just last month, on Capitol Hill, Congressman Daniel Flood (D., Pa.) was demanding: "While it is all very commendable to teach troops new bayonet techniques and how to protect themselves from mosquitoes, we want to know one thing above all else: What is the military doing about this new brainwashing thing?"

The answer is snarled in indecision and red tape. Two years after the Korean armistice, our military chiefs are still torn apart. The debate over brainwashing goes on behind shut doors. How can we arm our men against it? How can we spare them from enemy abuse and protect our secrets at the same time? What should be our attitude toward those who break under torture? Each service has its own ideas.

The Army: After digesting the Korean horror stories, the Army simply put its old policy into new, sterner language. "A captured soldier," it proclaimed, "should give no more than his name, rank, serial number and date of birth"—regardless of torture.

Yet the Army seemed to follow a reverse policy in judging its most celebrated POW, Maj. Gen. William Dean. He had been savagely tormented until he signed 12 Communist documents, including an appeal to our forces to stop "the senseless bombing of innocent women and children." But the Reds didn't exploit his signed statements. Dean came home to a hero's welcome, and the Army gave him a promotion for his terrible suffering.

An Air Force general commented that the Army "seems to have a different policy for generals and privates. The higher ranks apparently are permitted to give their captors more than name, rank and serial number. If a general can be brainwashed into signing propaganda statements, why should a private be expected to resist?"

The Marine Corps: Our "toughest" service not only subscribes to the strict Army code but tried to make an example of its only brainwash victim, Col. Frank Schwable. For signing a germ-warfare confession, he was hauled before a hostile Court of Inquiry.

After hearing the evidence, however, the Court was sympathetic. "The Communists," it found, "have developed, and perfected, a diabolic method of torture which combines degradation, deprivation and mental harassment. . . . This method can be applied to an individual continuously over such a long period of time . . . that one of three events inevitably takes place: (a) the victim's will to resist is broken; (b) the victim becomes insane; (c) the victim dies."

This unexpected exoneration seemed to disappoint Gen. Lemuel Shepherd, Marine Corps Commandant, who grudgingly accepted the Court's finding but put a shadow over Schwable's career. He blocked Schwable's promotion to General and ruled that his future duties be limited to "a type making minimum demands . . . upon unblemished personal example and leadership."

TWO WHO 'HAD IT': Maj. Gen. William Dean (l.) and Air Force Col. Andrew Evans.

The Air Force: Observes an Air Force psychiatrist: "To succumb to brainwashing is no measure of a man's patriotism, only a test of his endurance." The air generals have taken the attitude any man could be broken by Red torture and have refused to court-martial pilots for signing false confessions. The Air Force, of course, punished ex-POW's who informed on their buddies or otherwise knuckled under to the Reds in return for better treatment or personal safety. But all cases were judged on individual merit, taking into account "the mental and physical suffering."

Declared an Army general: "The Air Force doesn't distinguish between those who resisted to the last breath and the false confessors. Under this policy, how can we expect young men, who must fight our wars, to measure up to what will be expected of them? Every serviceman must clearly understand that our Government disapproves of both collaborators and false confessors."

In any case, the importance of a defense against brainwashing is readily grasped. At Pyoktong prison camp in North Korea, a Chinese officer told the POWs: "We will keep you here 10, 20, 30 or even 40 years, if necessary, until you learn the truth. If you still won't learn it, we will bury you so deep you won't even stink."

How Communists teach the "truth" is revealed in numberless examples. One corporal was stood at attention, stripped to the waist and beaten with a baseball bat from 9 p.m. until 3 a.m. Prisoners were often bound with rope or wire for long periods. One spent eight months in handcuffs, which were tightened at frequent intervals. Another was forced to kneel on two small, jagged rocks and hold a heavy stone over his head for hours. Barefooted men stood on the frozen Yalu River while guards covered their feet with water. Some were left for hours with their feet frozen to the ice.

Mental Torment Is Worst

The concentrated mental torture and moral degradation was even worse than the physical abuse. One victim described it as a corrosive process that first saps your physical vigor, then slowly paralyzes the brain and eats into your very moral fiber.

How were our fighting men in Korea prepared for such ordeals? An Air Force board reported that "the briefing and indoctrination given our combat personnel as to conduct of prisoners of war was inadequate and confusing. Published policy and directives in this regard were given mixed interpretations at various command levels."

Today our men are no better equipped. A high-ranking Defense Department board is still searching for a unified policy.

The Army is teaching ground troops that the best way to avoid brainwashing is not to get captured. Should they be taken prisoner anyway, the Army's advice is to escape. Beyond that, the Army is relying on "the individual soldier's firm belief in the principles upon which the United States was founded." To further this end, it is giving soldiers a knowledge of Communism to "assist the individual's ability to detect and defend himself against its propaganda."

The Army also is depending on the Corps of Chaplains "to develop the moral fiber and religious motivation of the American soldier so as to fortify him with the weapons of faith and courage."

To these proposals, an Air Force officer retorts: "It's a fine idea not to get captured, but 3,322 Army men were unable to follow that advice in Korea. It's also desirable to escape, but not a single American POW made it back to our lines during the Korean War. Patriotic and religious indoctrination should also be encouraged. But the Reds have successfully brainwashed both patriots and priests."

The Air Force believes more practical steps must be taken. One suggestion is to authorize prisoners to sign false confessions freely to escape torture. If this were officially publicized, the propaganda value of the confessions might be nullified.

An Air Force general thinks prisoners should even be permitted to give military information to their captors, since the average POW knows no important secrets. Knowing rank brings worse treatment, he also believes officers should be furnished false identification papers showing them to be lieutenants, say, instead of colonels.

Of these suggestions, a Marine general says: "If prisoners are authorized to sign false confessions or disclose military information, it would lend official encouragement to the act of surrender. This would demoralize our troops, who are indoctrinated to resist to the last. In any case, good enemy intelligence officers can paint an accurate mosaic from scattered bits of seemingly unimportant information."

RED TORTURE is reenacted by Colonel Schwable. He had to sit like this almost continuously for two months.

One brainwash victim has his own solution: in event of another war, he intends to carry suicide pills into battle.

Out of the conflicting views on brainwashing, will our leaders be able to build a defense against it? This question was posed by Congressman Flood at a recent Army budget hearing. Calling our past record "one of the most shocking evidences of bad training in the history of the Army," he then asked: "What are you doing to meet the situation head-on?"

Speaking for the Army, Maj. Gen. Paul Adams replied: "We have a research project on that. They are studying the entire problem for us."

"For what war," demanded Flood, "will that be ready?" ■

Wedding Questions

Summer weddings are deservedly popular because they also occur in the vacation season. Summer, however, is the informal social season and truly formal weddings usually do not take place during this period.

Here are a few of your many questions on weddings:

Q. My daughter's wedding was not announced in our local newspapers. Would it be all right, after several months, to submit a brief announcement and a wedding picture?—Mrs. J.B.L., White Plains, N. Y.

A. Send the newspapers an announcement of the wedding with the date, but omit the wedding picture.

Q. My son is to be married soon. I am divorced from his father, who since my remarriage has done very little for our son. I would like my present husband to walk my son down to his wedding. Is this proper or would his own father have that honor?—Mrs. W.E.S., Jamaica, N. Y.

A. I assume that you are talking about a Jewish wedding ceremony in which the father (optionally) accompanies the groom to the canopy before the Ark of the Covenant. If that is the case, I suggest that you discuss the problem with your Rabbi.

If I misunderstood your letter and you are asking whether your former or your present husband should accompany the groom to a Christian wedding ceremony, neither should. This is the responsibility of the best man. Your present husband escorts you to the church and sits with you in the first right-hand pew. The boy's father and his present wife (if he has one) sit in the third right-hand pew.

Q. A widow with two girls, 7 and 9, and a widower with little girls, 2 and 5, plan to marry at a large church wedding with their children as attendants. Is this proper?—Mrs. G.E.L., St. Louis, Mo.

A. They should have neither a large church wedding nor the children as their attendants. When both parties to a marriage are marrying a second time, they may well be married in church—but under very informal circumstances, and with the witnesses as their only attendants. It is not good taste to have the children of a couple serve them in any way in their wedding.

Q. My son was secretly married in a civil ceremony. At our request he is going to have the marriage blessed in church. Can we formally announce the marriage?—Mrs. G.S., Chicago, Ill.

A. This is usually done privately and announcements are not sent. Friends and relatives are told of the marriage informally. ■

Cream Puffs

FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

These cream puffs are "easy as pie" to make—perhaps easier. Filled with a luscious chocolate-marshmallow fluff and frozen, they're perfect for "special" 4th of July meals.

CREAM PUFFS

½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup water
1 cup sifted flour
4 eggs

Melt butter or margarine in boiling water in saucepan; bring to boil; lower heat. Add flour all at once, stirring rapidly. Cook and stir until mixture leaves sides of pan, and gathers smoothly around spoon. Remove from heat. Add eggs one at a time; beat thoroughly after each. Keep beating until mixture looks satiny and breaks off when spoon is raised. Drop by spoonfuls on ungreased baking sheet, making 12 large or 18 medium puffs. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) 30 minutes or until puffed, dry and golden brown. Cool. Cut part way through, crosswise. Fill.

CHOCOLATE FILLING

1 package (1 cup) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
½ cup milk
¼ cup sugar
16 marshmallows (¼ pound)
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Place chocolate pieces, milk, sugar and marshmallows in top of double boiler. Cook over hot water, stirring occasionally, until mixture is smooth. Remove from heat; add vanilla; chill. Fold into whipped cream. Fill cream puffs. Place in freezing compartment of refrigerator; freeze until firm.

KITCHEN HINT:

The new Palance

Movies' most menacing man laughs at last

The old Palance

To any moviegoer who has seen actor Jack Palance in any of his typical movie roles (Darkness at Noon, Shane, etc.) the pictures above are almost incredible. Famed for a deadpan expression about as cheery as the muzzle of a .44, Palance is shown with actress Ida Lupino at a Hollywood pre-release viewing of his next film, United Artists' The Big Knife. And Palance is laughing.

Explanation: In The Big Knife he switches to the role of a good-natured movie idol, Charlie Castle, married to Miss Lupino. They're laughing at his laughs. ■

Barbecue the Wesson way...make jiffy sauce and 1-minute dressing

Easier, indoors or outdoors ...pour Wesson Oil for fresh-tasting sauces and salads

You make the lightest, freshest salad dressing in just 1 minute with pure, delicate Wesson Oil. It dresses fresh greens lightly to taste best with spicy barbecued meats. It suits your family best because you can season it to please them.

For fresh, savory barbecue sauce—you pour Wesson Oil and save the fuss of measuring and melting solid fat. You save money, too, when you make your own. And where could you ever buy a sauce or salad dressing to equal the flavor of yours—freshly made. Give your barbecues a real headstart to compliments with delicate Wesson Oil. There's no finer, fresher salad oil in all the world!

WESSON 1-MINUTE FRENCH DRESSING

1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon paprika
¼ cup vinegar
¾ cup Wesson Oil

Combine and shake well in covered jar. Shake again before serving. Makes 1 cup. Enjoy this light, tempting dressing over your favorite tossed greens or mixed vegetable salads—or try this enticing variation:

Blue Cheese French Dressing

To ½ cup Wesson French Dressing add 2 tablespoons crumbled Blue Cheese.

WESSON JIFFY BARBECUE SAUCE

½ cup Wesson Oil
¾ cup chopped onion
¾ cup tomato ketchup
¾ cup water
⅓ cup lemon juice
3 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper

Cook onion till soft in hot Wesson Oil. Add remaining ingredients. Simmer 15 minutes. Enough sauce to baste and serve with 2 chickens. Also good with hamburgers, hot dogs and other favorites.

For Barbecuing Chicken Outdoors: Brush sauce on halves of broiler chickens before and during broiling. Broil 30 to 45 minutes—12 to 14 inches from coals. Start with inside of chicken down facing coals and turn to finish with skin side down. Serve with remaining sauce.

For Barbecuing Chicken Indoors: Brush sauce on chicken as above and broil 30 to 45 minutes, 5 to 7 inches from heat. Start with skin side down on rack and turn to finish with skin side up.

He Collects Golf's Wacky Shots

SURROUNDED by scrapbooks, magazines and pictures, John Pipes surveys 28 years' work of collecting the zanier side of golf.

The prize of this Texan's collection is a woman who scored 166—for one hole

by GENE GREGSTON

BIG SPRING, TEX.

One day George Wiehl, a golfer in St. Joseph, Mo., stepped up to a tee and whacked a long drive down the fairway. He watched with satisfaction as it sailed through the air—until it came to an abrupt halt. A woodpecker, flying the other way, had impaled the ball on its beak.

To John Morris Pipes, owner of a string of jukeboxes here, the story of Wiehl and the woodpecker hazard was merely more proof that the old saw about footballs taking crazy bounces applies to golf balls, too. Since 1927, Pipes, an amateur golfer and ex-caddy, has collected more than 3,000 stories of freak shots, unusual holes-in-one and other golfing oddities. And a checkup shows that Wiehl's story is by no means in a class by itself. For instance:

In Beaumont, Tex., Kyle Wheelas drove a ball 90 miles. His tee shot landed in the open cockpit of a plane as it was taking off for Houston.

In Uganda, Africa, a local ground rule allows a golfer to put a new ball in play without penalty if his shot lands too close to a crocodile.

A California blacksmith once scored a hole-in-one with a club he had fashioned out of an old automobile axle.

How He Started

Pipes was a 14-year-old caddy at Dallas' Brook Hollow Country Club when he began browsing through the sports page in search of little items about holes-in-one. He pasted them into a scrapbook. As he enlarged his collection to include freaks and oddities, he began copying the information on a typewriter. Now his home bulges with scrapbooks, typewritten sheets, magazines, old scorecards, papers and pictures attesting the authenticity of the freak shots. When he can, Pipes checks up on each item himself.

For example, after reading that George Cardwell of Winston-Salem, N. C., scored a 425-yard hole-in-one, Pipes wrote to Cardwell; now he has a picture of the golfer, plus a scorecard of the round. To Pipes this was important because Cardwell's blast was the longest hole-in-one ever recorded. Recently, Pipes heard of a 435-yard hole-in-one. But, on checking up, he found it didn't count: the ball had been hit, just as a test, by an automatic driving machine.

Not all of Pipes' items deal with Sunday golfers. The pros have a department, too. Recorded here are the time Sam Snead drove a ball 250 yards into a spectator's pocket; the time Walter Hagen broke a club trying to straighten it, borrowed a club and ball from Bobby Jones and then knocked in a hole-in-one; the time Tommy Armour took 21 strokes on a hole.

Armour's 21, incidentally, is not a record. He was outdistanced by a British lady with a determined streak. When she sliced her drive into a river, the ball floated, so she began swinging at it from a rowboat with her husband at the oars. After enough strokes to drench her oarsman, she finally hit the ball—into the woods. From there it was a long road to the green, and when she dropped her last putt the count for the hole stood at 166.

Another kind of marathon was recorded by Norman (Chief) Coy, a Peoria, Ill. boxer and wrestler. He once played 24 hours, covered 357 holes. And Ralph Kennedy of Mamaroneck, N. Y., has played at the most courses: 3,000. His roster includes every state in the U.S., every province in Canada, nine South American and Caribbean countries and the British Isles.

Although he has enlarged his field, Pipes remains most interested in the hole-in-one, and has made a special study of it. Aces, he finds, have no rhyme nor reason. Some pros play all their lives and never score one; on the other hand, Jimmy Nichols, a pro with only one arm, has chalked up eight. Pipes has records of aces by 8-year-olds and 90-year-olds. His files show that the late actress Gertrude Lawrence scored an ace the very first time she hit a golf ball. In the second qualifying round for the U.S. Open in 1949, Ray Maguire, a Detroit pro, recorded two aces—and still failed to qualify.

Pipes delights in the ace with a twist—like the one Fred Jones scored at the Oklahoma City Country Club in 1949. A wealthy auto dealer, Jones was considering running for governor. As he stepped up to a tee, he commented to a companion, "I'd rather make a hole-in-one than be elected governor." He got his wish: he scored an ace, and he wasn't elected.

Pipes' Favorite Shot

The historian's favorite freak shot belongs to Owen E. Cummings of Fortville, Ind. At the seventh hole, his second shot landed in four inches of water, behind a stone wall. Cummings took a vicious swing and topped the ball. It ricocheted off the wall and bounded into the cup for a 2-under-par 3.

The shot won him the hole, but lost the match. When he swung, the clubhead struck the wall, flew off and struck Cummings in the face. He was carried off the course unconscious.

There's just one thing missing from Pipes' collection of golfing lore. A longtime golfer himself, he once played in Texas amateur tournaments but gave that up when the competition began to include such up-and-coming youngsters as Byron Nelson and Ben Hogan. He still plays every week end, shooting in the 70s. But nowhere in his collection of golfiana does the name John Morris Pipes appear. He's never scored a hole-in-one, and, in all his years of golfing, can't recall a single unusual shot. ■
